Sikeston's hopes on line tonight

Support for the Sikeston Bulldogs hit a new level Thursday, when five Sikeston High School seniors put a sign on the side of a transport trailer, touting their team's ability. The Bulldogs, undefeated this season, host the Poplar Bluff Mules, who are also undefeated. Game time is 7:30 tonight. The students involved in the sign project were Kathy Carroll, Cindy Thomure, Debbie Matthews, Terra Williams and Belinda Milloway.

Carter says he may ask for a tax cut

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President-elect Jimmy Carter, who won the White House by only 27 electoral votes, vows that the slimmest of victories will not halt his plans to aggressively pursue new goals for the nation.

The Democratic presidentelect spoke on the main street of his little home town of Plains, Ga., on Thursday night, and a crowd of some 400 watched in the chill autumn air as reporters, seated on metal chairs in the middle of the street, asked questions of the president-designate at the town's old railroad station.

It was also Thursday, two days after the election, that the final two states completed tabulating their ballots.

Carter won the presidency with 272 electoral votes in the wee hours of Wednesday. The final accounting on Thursday gave him the 25 electoral votes from Ohio for a total of 297. It took 270 to win.

Carter took 40,291,626 votes or 51 per cent and Ford received 38,563,089 votes or 48 per cent.

"I wish we could have carried all 50 states, but since I didn't, I hope to demonstrate even before my inauguration my complete commitment to being president of all the American people," Carter said, holding his first nationally broadcast news conference since the election.

The news conference, he said, will be the first of many. He said he hopes to hold at least two each month after taking office in January.

He said the narrow win would not stop him from "moving aggressively to carry out my campaign commitments." And he said there is a strong possibility he will seek a tax cut for average wage earners as one way of stimulating the economy if it does not pick up on its own by Jan. 20, when Carter will take the oath of office.

He said any such tax cut would be designed to increase the purchasing power of the average American family and would be oriented toward lower-income workers.

But the Democrat said he does not intend any interference with the workings of the Ford administration during its final days. In fact, Carter said after the news conference that he will spend less time in Washington than had been expected before the Jan. 20 inauguration.

Earlier, Carter had indicated he would spend several days a week in the capital in transitional offices. But Thursday, he said he would spend less time in Washington to avoid the suggestion that he is trying to interfere with or second guess the last Ford administration decisions.

Carter said he would be represented in Washington by Vice President-elect Walter Mondale, who sat silently listening during the news conference in Plains. "Mondale will be there," Carter said.

As for the plans of his own administration, Carter admitted there would be difficulties in carrying out his goals. But he said he thinks his promises can be fulfilled, especially since he will be working with a Democratic Congress.

He mentioned hopes for overhauling the federal bureaucracy, for welfare and tax reform and for a new and comprehensive energy policy.

He said the narrow victory in the popular vote and the electoral college win gives him a mandate sufficient to tackle the tasks he wants. "We had a clear majority of the total electorate," he said.

Morehouse man dies at wheel, hits pole

A 60-year- old Morehouse man was pronounced dead on arrival Thursday afternoon at Missouri Delta Community Hospital, where he was taken following a one-car accident on Welker Drive in Sikeston.

Harold Wilson Lacy died about 3:50 p.m. of a heart attack, according to Scott County Coroner E. E. "Gene" Nunnelee, who said death was due to the heart attack and not from injuries received in the accident.

The accident occurred when Lacy's car failed to make a turn in the road and struck a utility pole according to the Department of Public Safety. At the time of the accident, Lacy was leaving Malone and Hyde Inc., where he was employed.

Nunnelee said he was told that Lacy had been ill for about a week and complained about chest pains,but did not go see a doctor.

He was born in Morehouse on Sept. 29, 1916 to Mrs. Ora Lacy and the late Joseph D. Lacy of Morehouse.

On May 5, 1937 he married Alpha Leoda Brawley in Morehouse.

In addition to his widow and mother, other survivors are one daughter, Mrs. Anna Lou Rennier of St. Charles; one brother, Bernie Lacy of Sikeston; and one sister, Mrs. Clara Wilson of Mounds, Ill.

Two children preceded him in death.

Friends may call after 5 p.m. today at Watkins and Son Funeral home in Morehouse where services are scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday with the Rev. Don Heitman of Matthews officiating.

Burial will be in Garden of Memories Cemetery in Sikeston.

Ark-Mo allowed rate increase

JEFFERSON CITY — Arkansas-Missouri Power Company, which had requested an increase in gross annual revenues from gas and electric service of $2,015,000, was allowed increases totaling $631,209 today by the Missouri Public Service Commission.

Its subsidiary, Associated Natural Gas Company, which had requested increases in revenues from gas service of $986,000, was allowed increases totaling $845,080.

The companies, which are headquartered in Blytheville, Arkansas, may place the new rates into effect on November 16. Arkansas-Missouri Power provides service in Southeast Missouri. Associated Natural Gas serves the Butler, Kirksville and Sikeston areas.

The Commission said that for residential customers, the increase in electric rates will be applied only to consumption of more than 400 kilowatt hours per month.

The company's present rate structure, the Commission said, is no longer appropriate because it reduces the per-kilowatt cost of electricity as consumption increases.

"While the change in technology that has occurred in recent years would require more significant rate structure modifications that could be made in this order," the Commission said, "it is time that the present declining block rates begin to be flattened."

"Until such time as information can be developed to make a more informed decision as to how the rate structure should be modified, we are of the opinion that a utility with a declining block rate should design rates which tend to flatten or level the blocks in the various rate classes."

Arkansas-Missouri Power was ordered to supply the Commission with preliminary information for a load research study that will be used as a basis for determining what further changs need to be made in the utility's rate structure.

By the first of the year, the Commission said, Arkansas-Missouri should begin planning with the Commission staff to begin the load research program by mid-1977.

The increase in electric rates for Arkansas-Missouri customers as a result of today's order is expected to be about 3 percent. For gas customers, the increase will be about 15 percent.

In the Butler district of Associated Natural Gas, the increase is expected to be about 28 per cent. In the Kirksville district, the increase is expected to be about 3 per cent, and in the Sikeston district, the increase is expected to be about 6 per cent. The percentage increases vary due to differences in the revenues and expenses for each of the divisions.

The Commission said that testimony from the general public in the case indicates that there is a great need for the companies to inform their customers about level-payment plans. These plans permit customers to pay approximately the same amount for gas and electricity during each month, eliminating the variations that occur as a result of seasonal fluctuations in energy use.

Arkansas-Missouri now has an electricity level-payment plan, but neither it not Associated Natural has such a plan for gas customers. The Commission ordered the

Elderly hunter found dead in Stoddard

DEXTER — The body of Henry Albert Cagle, a 65-year-old retired farmer who died of a heart attack while on a hunting trip, was found by a search party at approximately 9:10 p.m. Thursday on the north side of the Castor River east of the Leora community.

Stoddard County Coroner Ray Rainey, who was at the scene, attributed the death to a heart attack.

Cagle, who lived at 913 Sassafras, had left home between 7 and 8 a.m. Thursday to go hunting and did not return. Wayne Cagle, a son, reported him missing to the Stoddard County Sheriff's Department at 7:50 p.m., and a search party was organized.

The Stoddard County Civil Defense Unit and Highway Patrol Sgt. K. L. Lancaster and Trooper B. J. Kincaid participated in the search.

Cagle was born Dec. 14, 1910 at Leora and had formerly worked for Warren & Hooks Excavating Co. of Dexter.

He had lived in the Bloomfield and Dexter communities most of his life.

On April 2, 1932 at Bloomfield, he married Evelyn Jewell Walker, who survives. One son, Clinton Ray Cagle, preceded him in death in April 1948.

He was a member of the West Pleasant Valley church.

Other survivors include: four sons, Billy Dean Cagle of Abilene, Tex., Henry J. Cagle and Wayne Cagle of Poplar Bluff and Harold Gene Cagle of Tye, Tex.; one stepson, James Norman Walker of Roosevelt, Utah; four daughters, Mrs. L. B. (Helen Laverne) Fargerson and Mrs. Samuel E. (Gonda May) Buckalew of Shreveport, La., Mrs. Ron (Shirley Ann) Douglas of Poplar Bluff and Barbara Lou Cagle of Abilene; four brothers, Bill Cagle of Brownwood, Jacob Cagle of Bloomfield Route One, Lawrence Cagle of Advance and Teddie Cagle of Dexter; two sisters, Mrs. Walter (Clovia) McWhoter of Mount Clemens, Mich., and Evella Cagle of Bloomfield; and 19 grandchildren and one great- grandchildren.

Friends may call after 6 p.m. today at Childs- Cooper Funeral Home in Bloomfield, where services are scheduled at 2 p.m. Saturday with the Rev. E. G. Page, pastor of Bible Tabernacale of Bloomfield, officiating.

Burial will follow in West Pleasant Valley Cemetery near Bloomfield.

October coldest month here in 24 years

October gas bills are going to be the highest in years, according to Ralph Wafler, manager of gas operations for Arkansas-Missouri Power Co. and its Missouri subsidiary, Associated Natural Gas Co., both headquartered in Blytheville, Ark.

The bills are rising, not because of increases in the price of gas, but because last month was the coldest October in the 22 years the firm has been keeping records, according to Wafler.

Records kept at the Weather Service office in Cairo, Ill., show it was the coldest October in 24 years.

The bills are in the mail now, according to Bill Neel, manager of the Associated Natural Gas Co. office in Sikeston. He said the bills were read at different times and some will include more of the month than others.

The temperature in Sikeston dropped to 22 degrees this morning, indicating that the cold weather may have settled in. A number of forecasters have predicted this winter will be colder than normal.

"We've been keeping temperature records for our service area for 22 years," Wafler said, "and we had more degree day deficiencies in October than for any October on record."

A degree day deficiency, or DDD, is the best method yet devised for comparing heating requirements from one year to another, he added.

In the last 22 years, the average October had 131 DDDs, Wafler said. This October there were 346 DDDs, he said, "making it the coldest October by far."

Wafler said Ark-Mo was calling last month's temperatures to the public's attention "so that when people receive their gas bills, they'll understand that they'll be paying more because they probably used more gas than in any other October in the past 22 years."

Portageville man's body found in field

PORTAGEVILLE — The body of Jacob Roach, 77, was found about 5 p.m. Thursday in a soybean field on the George Killion farm about one- fourth mile south of town.

There was no evidence of foul play, according to New Madrid County Coroner Gene Clayton who said death resulted from natural causes.

Roach reportedly had not been seen or heard from since Aug. 18, when he apparently wandered away from his home about a half a mile from where the body was found. He had moved to the area in July from Louisiana and had lived in a trailer next door to Melvina Cooper, a niece.

Mrs. Cooper told officers that Roach had been in good health but that he had to use a cane or stick when walking.

The body was taken to Richards Funeral Home in New Madrid, where arrangements are incomplete.

Future of PSC commissioners in doubt

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Voter adoption of a new law prohibiting utilities from charging customers for uncompleted power plant construction will mean lower rates for nearly one million customers within three months, according to a member of the Missouri Public Service Commission.

But the five commissioners are not expressing any opinions on the message of the voters in the election where the PSC itself was a focal point.

The two-to-one passage of the utility measure, which directly overturns one of the commission's policies, and the upset victory of Democrat Joseph Teasdale for governor has had an unsettling effect on the PSC.

"We just don't know what it will be like," said Commissioner Stephen Jones concerning the future under the administration of Teasdale, who attacked the PSC throughout his campaign.

Teasdale, in upsetting GOP Gov. Christopher S. Bond, had focused much of his campaign against the PSC, which he blamed for soaring utility rates and accused of being controlled by the utilities it regulates. He also aligned himself with the ballot proposition.

He said he would ask for the resignation of the four if elected, exempting Commissioner James Mulvaney because he considers him a consumer advocate.

Commissioner Charles Fain declined to take part in a joint interview with the commission on Thursday, but Jones, along with Commissioner Hugh Sprague and PSC Chairman A. Robert Pierce, indicated they were not ready to resign but had been considering that possibility.

"We have to consider all the options," Jones said. But they said Teasdale has yet to approach them on the issue, although it has been a major part of his campaign for the past three months.

They said they understood Teasdale was going to meet with the commission but there has been no contact from the governor-elect about any meeting.

Several members expressed concern that Teasdale's attacks on them, which they considered unfair at best, have also hurt morale of the staff, and while there has been no mass of resignations, many staff members "are looking over their shoulders now."

"We're independent, we haven't played politics in this election," Sprague said of the attacks. "The point is that we stayed out of it. we didn't respond to any of this criticism and I don't want to respond to it now."

The commission, however, does not see the results of the balloting as a public vote of no confidence, either in the election of Teasdale or in the adoption of a law that restricts PSC authority.

"If you give the people a chance to vote for a lower electric bill, they'll vote for a lower electric bill," Jones said. "The people are dissatisfied with rate increases and we're the only commission that can raise their cost of living."

David Leuthold of the University of Missouri surveyed 1,000 voters in Boone County as they left the polls on Tuesday and said the results led to the same conclusion.

"I see it as the people expressing not so much an attitude toward the Public Service Commission but toward the utilities, although we don't have much information to base that on," he said.

The PSC has allowed three utilities to pass on financing of uncompleted construction to customers, and under the newly-adopted law those costs will now have to be removed within three months. Customers of Kansas City Power & Light Co., which has the largest amount of such costs in its rates, Union Electric Co. and St. Joseph Light & Power Co. will be affected.

Although the exact procedure for removing the costs will not be determined for another 10 days, Jones said he was sure bills for all three companies' customers would be cut, at least for a while. Customers of KCP&L will get the largest reduction, the average customer saving 65 cents a month.

But Jones said the utilities will probably get back all or part of that reduction the next time they ask for increased rates because they will find it harder to finance power plant construction.

Any anti-commission feeling among the voters, the commissioners indicated, is probably due to the nature of the job and the lack of understanding people have about it.

"The problem is the commission has to wear two hats," Mulvaney said. "We have to be reasonable and fair to consumers and by law make sure that the person who puts his buck in (the utility stockholder) gets a fair and equitable return."

MURDER AT MAGYAROVAR

Anti-communist writers such as Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn are constantly confronted with an almost insurmountable problem. Such is the awful horror of the Soviet secret police system of imposing the will of the dictatorship on the people by terror,that it is virtually impossible to describe it through the written word.

In the USSR the secret police system is known as the KGB — formerly the NKVD — the Red equivalent of the Gestapo. In Hungary they are known as the AVH, or the "Avos."

It was the AVH, under General Gabor Peter, Soviet-trained Gestapo chief, who fabricated the "evidence" used to convict Josef Cardinal Mindszenty. Peter procured "witnesses" to testify against Mindszenty, very simply, by torture.

On October 27, 1956, a German news photographer, Rolf Gilhausen, arrived at dawn at the Hungarian border. There he was told by Hungarian border- command soldiers that cold- blooded mass murder had been committed just the day before at Magyarovar, a small town just 17 kilometers from the border.

AVH men, he was told, had shot into an unarmed crowd of people who had asked nothing more than the removal of Soviet emblems from the AVH barracks. Eighty-five dead, including young men, women and children, still remained in front of the AVH barracks.

"I shall never forget what I saw there," Gilhausen reported. "It was pure horror. Silent and grieving men led me to the dead, who lay in waxen stiffness, piled upon the floors of the chapel and mortuary of the cemetery. I was to see all of this unbelievable scene which so eloquently expresses the Communist concept that human life does not count where ideology is concerned."

In our dealings with the Communists, we should never forget the murder at Magyarovar. Remember October 26, 1956.

GIVE US A BRAKE

For some reason, a bumper sticker dreamed up by Friends of Animals, Inc., rubs us the wrong way. It reads: "Caution. I brake for animals."

Who doesn't brake for animals? It's a purely instinctive reaction, even for experienced motorists, and has nothing to do with one's feelings for or against four-legged critters who suddenly dart into the road. The trouble is that it has been known to have catastrophic consequences for the two-legged variety.

If the people who sport this bumper sticker are telling us that they love animals, fine. So do we.

If they are telling us that they will make every reasonable effort, with due regard for the safety of themselves and other motorists, to avoid hitting some unfortunate, confused animal in their path, so will everyone else who is not a dedicated sadist.

But if they are saying that they would deliberately invite a rear-end collision by slamming on their brakes to spare an animal, we just hope that when they do the guy behind them isn't driving a semi.

A GOOD POINT

A parallel between a Declaration of Independence complaint against King George III and today's regulatory burdens on industry was cited in a recent conference sponsored by the National Association of Manufacturers.

One of the complaints in the Declaration against the King is: "He has erected a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people, and eat out our substance."

An increasing number of companies are complaining about the costs of complying with the myriad of sometimes contradictory and counterproductive rules of federal reguatory agencies.

TEN MOST UNWANTED LIST

Everyone is familiar with the FBI's ten most WANTED list, but you may not be as familiar with the ten most UNWANTED drivers. Now is a good time to review your driving tactics and don't let yourself fall into any of the following categories:

1. The bumper chaser-- who follows the car ahead too closely... this driver is the fourth leading cause of highway accidents.

2. The driver who slows down in a curve-- instead of slowing down before he reaches it.

3. The signal jumper-- who spurts from a signal as it starts changing or crashes through just as the signal turns red.

4. The timid freeway merger-- who creeps into the acceleration lane, sometimes stops, and then spurts into the traffic flow.

5. The twilight zone driver-- who drives in the early darkness without lights.

6. The free wheeling lanechanger-- who swings back and forth, usually without proper signals.

7. The driver who rides his brakes-- and creates in the minds of the drivers uncertainty as to what he intends to do.

8. The driver you see in your rear vision mirror who is driving too fast-- and is likely to misjudge passing speed and distance.

9. The highbeam headlight driver-- who blinds approaching drivers.

10. And the oncoming speed driver-- who too often is responsible for head- on collisions.

CALLING THE TUNE

A few years ago the notion that to accept government funding was to invite government meddling was widely derided as Goldwater scaretalk. Thanks to HEW and the IRS, the laughter has died out. According to their newly effective rules, any college attended by a single student who receives a government grant or loan is subject to federal "guidelines" of the affirmative action varieties. Independent colleges-- notably Brigham Young and Michigan's Hillsdale College-- are fighting back against the reduction of their independence of Washington, and the American Association of Presidents of Independent Colleges and Universities is marshaling an organized resistance.

The rulings are basically trivial. Brigham Young has of course its own views, of religious provenance, on the status and dignity of women, which in fact it has strongly promoted. It does, however, regard them as a distinct sex, and the collision this has engendered with the government decrees amounts, the college insists, to an infringement of its right to worship. Hillsdale, a fortress of the principles of liberty, has always shunned and despised government money-- only to be told, on a small pretext, that it doesn't matter. The principle of equality in this way becomes a gun at the temple of every independent institution.

There is a certain logic in the rulings-- he who pays the piper calls the tune. The principle is now invoked by the same liberals who once scoffed at the idea it would ever apply to federal aid to education. But it is at last obvious that such aid is aimed against the independence of colleges and, in effect, against the continued existence of those colleges that refuse to surrender their independence. Under the ingenious new application, federal power is used to limit rather than to expand the student's range of choice.

Whatever justification they may have, the new regulations exemplify the state of things in America generally: a bureaucracy adds new meanings out of existing laws, and applies them imperiously, in effect changing the laws themselves. And a society whose laws change capriciously is a lawless society.

TOO MUCH FAITH IN WORDS ALONE

We Americans have almost a blind faith in words.

The words of a politician running for office. The words of a treaty. The words of a used car or real estate salesman offering us a bargain.

We are sometimes right. There are candidates who keep their word. And countries which keep treaties. There are more honest salesmen then shysters.

The problem is, our faith in words is often so great we do not distinguish between the honest politician and the dishonest, the country which keeps its promises and the nation which doesn't and the salesman with squinty morals and the one who backs up his word with service.

Now treaties which are honestly entered into and meticuously honored by both sides can prevent shooting wars and economic wars, insure the protection of American citizens abroad and promote human rights.

But such values come only when the other signatories have the same understanding of words that we have and when all the nations involved are aiming at fairness.

For there is no treaty written which cannot be broken "legally" by playing with words, especially when the official text is in two or more languages. We saw the effects of this double- meaning syndrome in the SALT I nuclear control treaty with the Soviet Union, in which red- faced American negotiators admitted they could charge the USSR with no violations because it was possible to twist the words in virtually any manner the Soviet Union chose. They could build 50 per cent larger silos. They could test radar for illegal uses. They could overbuild on long- range weapons capable of reaching the U.S. and call these middle-range.

We saw the same result in the pact negotiated with Hanoi at the time of our withdrawal from South Vietnam. And in the pact negotiated with Pyongyang when we reached a "truce" with the North Koreans at Panmunjom. And in the human rights agreements which have been so popular in recent years, but which seem to apply with meticulous rigidity even to minor infringements in the West and not at all to horrendous disregard for human rights in the Soviet Union and other totalitarian countries.

This is not to contend we should end our attempts at detente or make no more treaties with anyone. It does men that we should look at more than the words on any proposal and what they mean to us. What do they mean to the other countries signing, what is their reputation for living up to their obligations in spirit as well as in law? What do we have if we find serious violations? Can we even prove violations effectively if we are dealing with closed societies?

But above all we need some independent check on what we're getting. Before you buy a house you bring in an independent appraiser. Before you buy a used car you take it to an independent mechanic. The U.S. State Department doesn't do this. Not under Dr. Henry Kissinger. Not under his six immediate predecessors.

We suffer the same blindness politically at home. We are deluged with public service organizations presenting us with bundles of words on what each candidate has said and how each man's promises differ (on paper) from those of his opponent. We are awarded thick copies of party platforms and with reams of analysis on the goodness or the badness of the stands of the Democrats and Republicans.

Who is to tell us which candidates keep their promises and which do not and which invariably lie through their teeth? Who is to tell us what a candidate means when he guarantees every man or woman a job who wants one? Or a stronger defense with a multibillion dollar cut in the defense budget? Or multibillion dollar programs with built- in cost and quality controls?

Somewhere we will have to find some independent appraisers or mechanics.

SECULAR HUMANISM
By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

Most congressional bills or amendments that pass one house but are not voted on in the other house die quietly without further controversy.

An exception to this rule is an amendment to the education bill proposed by Congressman John Conlan which would have prevented the expenditure of federal funds in the public schools to promote the religion of secular humanism. This amendment passed by 222 to 174 in the House, then died in the Senate.

The Humanist magazine suddenly has become very exercised about the Conlan bill, as well as about other efforts by religious parents to stop what they believe is the teaching of secular humanism in the public schools.

Humanism is best defined by the humanists themselves. The Second Humanist Manifesto, published in 1973 and signed by many leading educators, states: "As in 1933, humanists still believe that traditional theism, especially faith in the prayer-hearing God, assumed to love and care for persons, to hear and understand their prayers, and to be able to do something about them, is an unproved and outmoded faith . . . We find insufficient evidence for belief in the existence of a supernatural; it is either meaningless or irrelevant to the question of the survival and fulfillment of the human race . . . We can discover no divine purpose or providence for the human species."

It is an historical fact that our Founding Fathers did not intend the 1st Amendment to prohibit all religious teachings except secular humanism from the schools. When the Constitution was written, religious instruction in school was considered an essential part of education.

Even in 1892, long after the public school system came into existence, the U.S. Supreme Court unanimously declared in the Church of the Holy Trinity vs. United States that our history provides a "mass of organic utterances that this is a Christian nation." It was not until the second half of the 20th Century that the Supreme Court forbade religious education, Bible reading and prayers from the public schools.

It is probable that what the majority of Supreme Court justices thought they were doing by these decisions was to guarantee neutrality as between those who believe in God and those who do not believe in God. In 1961 in Torcaso vs. Watkins, for example, the Supreme Court declared that neither the federal government nor any state can "aid those religions based on a belief in the existence of God as against those religions founded on different beliefs."

The court then went on to specify that "among religions in this country which do not teach what would generally be considered a belief in the existence of God are Buddhism, Taoism, ethical culture, secular humanism and others."

The trouble is that nature abhors a vacuum, and when all pro-God religious teaching was prohibited, the gap was filled in many schools by the affirmative teaching of secular humanism.

The First Humanist Manifesto, published in 1933, has had great status with many educators because it was endorsed by the father of progressive education, John Dewey.

Parents now are fighting back. Many are organizing private schools. In Ohio alone, nearly 100 new Christian schools have been started.

Even in the public schools, the parents probably can prevail. Since the Supreme Court has declared secular humanism to be a "religion," the same 1st Amendment that bars pro-God religious teaching necessarily must bar all anti-God religious teaching.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Socialists' Power Strategy:
British labor drive to manage cities, without being elected, in high gear

WASHINGTON — Her Britannic Majesty's political reporting chaps here, official and unofficial, have "observed" our presidential campaign with mirthful mystification. But bloopers to the contrary, our system isn't nearly as strange as what is developing in British politics -- and soon enough may be heading our way.

The United Kingdom's most powerful unions, already controlling the national government, now are revving up their campaign to take over local governments without bothering much to get into city and county elections.

What that national labor movement, the Trades Union Congress, wants is full co-determination (co-management) with election officials in these local governments -- even without having their union officials and shop stewards elected to municipal office.

They won't object to having their people run for office, for the equivalent of our mayors or city council people or county executives. In Britain today it's against the law, for example, for bus drivers, sanitation workers, public service clerks, etc., to stand for election in the municipalities which employ them. But the unions soon will have this changed. This is one of their prime objectives.

When I first reported from London the big unions' drive for such co-management rights for the two million public service employes, the campaign was being geared. Now the unions have worked it into a full legislative war. Officially the proposal has been sent to the Ministry for Planning and Local Government. There it is being given full consideration by the national labor regime. In effect, what this says is the unions want the same kind of "industrial democracy" in the public sector which the German unions have in the private industrial sector -- "co-determination." Already this is being studied in one of London's subdivisions.

In Britain the Trades Union Congress calls this "industrial democracy." Meaning, they want a full 50-50 representation on private industry's governing boards.

In America we call them the board of directors. In the U.S. "industrial democracy" would put auto union chief Leonard Woodcock and his vice presidents such as Irv Bluestone, Ken Bannon, or Doug Fraser on the boards of GM, Ford and Chrysler. These labor leaders could get on to any of them. They needn't be limited, say, to the firm with which they bargain, as Irv Bluestone is with GM. He could sit on Ford's board -- if we had any version of co-determination.

It's all very pertinent now. In Britain, inside specialists predict there will be widespread co-determination "in a decade." Maybe less. It all depends, they add, on the upcoming report of the Labor government's independent inquiry on industrial democracy, known as the Bullock Commission because it's chaired by Lord Bullock. It has been "s[illegible]" since August 1975 and sh[illegible] have had its report in by [illegible]ast August. It's expected to [illegible] the co-management proc[illegible]h of course will affect e[illegible] foreign-owned corporations su[illegible] as GM at Vauxhall, Ford at Dag[illegible]ham and Chrysler at Coventry.

And now along comes [illegible]e insiders' insider, Paul Shaw vice president of Chase Manahttan Bank, saying take co-determination and industrial democracy seriously. We can also expect it in America in a decade or so. And Shaw has studied this phenomenon across the world.

Thus, with dynamic public sector unions the fastest growing labor organizations in the U.S. -- including divisions of the Teamsters Brotherhood -- the British campaign is more than just a hothouse study which calls for labor decision-making, representation on municipal and county governing boards as well as on industry's governing boards.

Especially so because of the full triphammer support behind this in Britain, coming from the ever-colorful, devoutly proletarian Jack Jones, leader of the almost two-million-member Transport and General Workers Union (teamsters, dockers, etc.).

"The union wants to change the face of town halls and local councils," says one of his official statements. "It wants ... for its own workers' reps to have full 50-50 power sharing at shop floor levels."

Jones wants two workers representatives elected by "their union workmates on all the key policymaking committees and sub-committees at town halls."

Jones wants "workers' representatives at full council meetings with the right to speak like any other councillors."

The powerful British transport union chief recognizes that the workers' representatives still don't have the right to vote at these policymaking meetings of elected local officials. So he and his colleagues are fighting to change the law. But he does want "a real shakeup at works level with an end to the old-fashioned joint consultation system which has too often meant talking about decisions in workers' own departments after they have been made higher up."

Then comes the coup de grace. Finally, Jones says, "The union wants a new system of real sharing of decision-making with new joint union-management boards in each works department." These would have co-management decision-making powers over hiring, "work organization" and future city planning.

In effect, British unions could veto decisions made by elected officials -- and control the cities and councils without a vote. That's even stranger than our election system.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

The Capitol-Korea Connection

and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- The South Korean effort to seduce members of Congress has been two-tiered. Rev. Sun Myung Moon, the Korean holy man, took the high, ecclesiastical road, and Tongsun Park, a Korean entrepreneur, followed the low, wayward road.

Both men have been tied to the South Korean lobbying campaign by the Washington Post, which cited "electronic evidence." According to the Post, a tape recording apparently exists of a discussion between South Korea's President Park Chung Hee, Moon aide Park Bo Hi and the shadowy Tongsun Park.

At the meeting, the three men worked out "a plan to influence U.S. congressmen," the Washington Post reported.

The South Korean government has denied any connection between President Park and entrepreneur Park. Moon's man has denied the meeting ever took place and has challenged his accusers to produce the alleged recording. There have also been over-the-shoulder denials from Tongsun Park at airports from Tokyo to Paris.

Both the ecclesiastic and the entrepreneur, nevertheless, suddenly became active on Capitol Hill in the early 1970s. By the beginning of this year, we were able to count 19 Moon missionaries operating on Capitol Hill. We reported on Jan. 12, 1976: "They stroll the hallways daily, buttonholing senators and congressmen, offering free trips and other inducements."

Moon himself made two evangelical appearances on Capitol Hill before our calls made it impossible for him to find a sponsor who would arrange a room for him. At no time did we question his right to deliver a religious message; we were troubled only by the political overtones. Congressmen reported to us, for example, that Moon missionaries had offered them free trips to Korea.

Those who heard Moon preach on Capitol Hill say he delivered a strong anti-Communist message, laced with Christian philosophy. They recall that he linked the United States, Israel and South Korea as the three great bulwarks against communism. He also defended Richard Nixon during the Watergate crisis.

He spoke in Korean, with Park Bo Hi delivering the translations. Koreans told us that Moon's remarks were often rambling and ambiguous, but the translations invariably were precise and pointed. Our sources have the impression that Park, indeed, is the Rasputin behind the benevolent, smiling Moon.

Each of the evangelist's appearances on Capitol Hill was attended by about 100 people. Perhaps 15 to 20 were members of Congress, the remainder aides and secretaries. Rep. Bill Chappel Jr., D.-Fla., introduced Moon at the first rally; Rep. Richard Ichord, D.-Mo., made the second introduction.

The Moon movement's biggest catch in Congress was House Speaker Carl Albert. We reported on Dec. 9, 1975, that Susan Bergman, a young, hazel-eyed disciple of the Korean religious-political cultist, had developed a curious relationship with the powerful speaker.

In the mornings, she would greet him in the hallway and present him with flowers. Then she would brew Ginseng tea for him in the small kitchen down the hall from his office. She would serve it to him in the speaker's ornate chambers, where she stayed for an hour or two each morning.

Albert described the Moon missionary to us as "just a nice girl, a very nice girl, a Jewish girl from New York. She got all hepped up on the Lord Jesus and she just wants to share it. I think that's a nice thing. She's trying to convert me." As he talked, we noticed a black-covered, gold-trimmed copy of Moon's catechism, "Divine Principle," on the speaker's shelf.

While the Rev. Moon quoted the Bible to religious congressmen, Tongsun Park allegedly passed out cash and gifts to the irreligious. The Washington Post, quoting federal investigators, has charged that he distributed between $500,000 and $1 million each year to congressmen and other Washington officials.

We first got wind of Park's activities in early 1974 when we caught him on a strange trip with Rep. Richard Hanna, D.-Calif. We told the story on April 1, 1974.

A classified cable from the U.S. embassy in Sana, Yemen, reported that the congressman "was joined here by a Mr. Park, a former South Korean national engaged in shipping, elaboration of foreign investment opportunities and apparently political lobbying in Washington."

The curious pair also visited Saudi Arabia and Egypt. Indeed, an obliging State Dept. arranged accommodations for the Korean operator.

In a classified cable to the various embassies, the department asked "each post except Cairo" to ensconce Park in a "single room located next to or near room reserved for" the congressman. In Cairo, telegrammed State, "Mr. Park requests a suite on the river side of the Hilton."

We asked Park why he happened to be touring the Middle East with a congressman. They traveled together, said Park, because Hanna "is like my brother."

We also learned that Park was entertaining members of Congress in the posh, exclusive Georgetown Club, which he established in Washington.

Despite these reports in 1974, the State Dept. didn't get around to investigating Tongsun Park's activities until November 1975.

Better communication makes better couple

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Most married couples don't listen to each other, and many get into fights as a result, says a professor who helps couples learn to communicate better.

"The one thing that's real important is accuracy," said Jeff Edelson, a University of Wisconsin social scientist.

"Very often one person will say something to the other when the other is busy, they'll both assume something on that basis, and as a result nobody did the shopping when each of them thought the other would do it," he said.

Edelson, who oversees "couple communication" classes aimed at easing marital strife, said husbands and wives often misunderstand each other by trying to work out major decisions in piecemeal conversations.

"You should not try to decide whether to buy a new car or something like that by talking about it a little bit, now and then," he said. "You should set aside a time to talk about it, like after dinner, to spend as much time as you need going over all the details involved in the decision."

Edelson recommends basic steps toward better communication, such as calling your spouse's name before you begin talking, and making sure you and your spouse are looking at each other during conversations.

"Make sure everything you said was accurate and it was understood," he said. "If you both know why you're doing it, then it's okay to ask if they understood what you were saying."

Just as the speaker has to concentrate on saying exactly what is meant, the listener has to ask: "Am I hearing that right?" he said.

Understanding each other's words, however, is only part of the battle, Edelson said. "What you say is important, but how you say it is even more important," he said. "A reasonable request in the wrong tone or with the wrong expression can be a disaster."

For instance, one of the worst thing you can say, according to Edelson, is: "You always leave the music up too loud." He suggested instead: "I'm sorry, I'm trying to concentrate on this right now and the music is bothering me."

Many French families now serve an American specialty: grated raw carrot salad. The French dress the salad with lemon juice or an oil-and-vinegar mixture instead of using mayonnaise as is often done in the U.S.A.

Trick-or-treat surprise

The Alex Homra family of East Prairie received a double treat for Halloween. Not only did Mrs. Homra give birth to a son, Brian, Monday, but the Scott County Porkettes gave the family pork products in the amount of the baby's weight, 7 pounds, 12 ounces.

The Scott County Porkettes have decided to give the parents of the first baby born close to Halloween pork products each year.

Homosexual turns to God

Dear Ann Landers: God bless you for your reply to the young man who was despondent over his homosexuality. I spent 14 years of my life (I'm 30 now) trying to accept my homosexuality. I was the son of a small-town businessman and scared to death to admit to myself or anyone else that I was gay.

Finally I met a man I wanted to settle down with. Although we hid our relationship from all but a small circle of friends, we had a wonderful life and were very happy together.

When he left me I felt as if my whole world had fallen apart. I was brought up in a Christian home and heard so much about the sinfulness of homosexuality that I stopped going to church.

Fortunately, I met a kind and understanding clergyman who spent many hours helping me see that God loves all his children -- gay, straight, whatever.

Since all else failed, I took his advice and gave God a chance. Ann, it was the best decision I ever made. I prayed, "Lord, I am gay and I don't think I can change. Please take control of my life. Thy will be done."

Soon after I prayed I felt serene and at peace. A month later I met another man with whom I plan to spend the rest of my life. I also found the courage to tell my parents. They accepted it beautifully.

I don't recommend to all gays that they tell their parents, but I do urge them to go directly to God, as I did. I have never felt so fulfilled and contented. Life is beautiful. -- Your Friend

Dear Friend: Thank you for sharing your experience. And now a word to all who read the Bible faithfully: Please don't tell me to look up Genesis 19, Romans, chapter 1, Leviticus 18:22 or 1 Corinthians 6:9-10, etc.

Help is where you find it.

Dear Ann Landers: This letter is for "Skinny Winner," the woman who dieted for her husband's sake, went into therapy after regaining her weight the second time, ditched Mr. Turn-Off and lost her 55 pound again.

I'm a 16-year-old girl who weighs about 30 pounds more than she should. I recently decided I am NOT going to be fat the rest of my life. I can and will get myself down to a size 8 dress and stay there.

So far I've lost ten pounds. Both my father and boyfriend are anti-fat. Daddy fought the weight battle last year and lost 50 pounds. A few years ago I dieted and lost 30 pounds but I gained it back because I had done it for the men in my life. This time it's for ME.

I have accepted full responsibility for my fatness. No one puts food into my mouth. And no excuse is good enough to be fat. It's not only unattractive but a health hazard.

Listen, men with fat wives or girlfriends, mothers with fat daughters. Get off their backs. Leave them alone. I know from experience if you lay off they'll do something about it eventually. Let it be for themselves, not for you. It's the only way they will keep the weight off forever. -- Thinner Now Than A Month Ago

Dear Thinner: Beautiful! What an upper for those fatties out there who need emotional support. Let me know when you hit size 8.

Don't flunk your chemistry test. Love is more than one set of glands calling to another. If you have trouble making a distinction you need Ann's booklet, "Love or Sex and How to Tell the Difference." Send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request and 50 cents in coin to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Bulldogs and Mules knock heads for Northern Division honors

By DALE FORBIS

The classic matchup of two undefeated teams is on tap for Sikeston's Public Schools Stadium tonight at 7:30. Sikeston has a perfect 9-0 record coming in. Poplar Bluff has just one blemish, a tie, in a 8-0-1 season.

"They will be the best team that we'll see all year," says Mule coach Tom Telle.

"They will be the best team that we'll see all year," says Bulldog coach Terry Smith.

Echoes? Or truisms?

"It ought to be a very physical game," predicts Telle.

"The idea for both sides is to control the football. Both sides are more run-oriented," adds the Poplar Bluff leader, noting that "The kicking games for both sides will play a big part in the outcome."

Both sides sit pretty when it comes time to kick the ball. For Sikeston, kicker Hal Butler is among the best on kickoffs and extra-points in the district. More than a dozen times this year a Butler kickoff has been received inside the five-yard line. And, it was Butler's clutch 21-yard field goal that gave Sikeston a wet and thrilling, 22-21 victory over Jackson last week. Meanwhile, punters Larry Stricker and Will Kaiser are averaging around 36 yards per punt with good hang-time on their kicks and little return yardage.

For Poplar Bluff, kicker Paul Roberts has missed just one extra-point in the year so far. Twenty-five times in 26 tries his P.A.T. attempts have flown true. Punter Sean Moore, brother to professional player Derland Moore of the New Orleans Saints, has averaged a solid 35 yards per boot himself.

"We've never been at full strength," points out the Poplar Bluff coach. Missing the game tonight will be standout linebacker Lance Carlson. At one time Poplar Bluff had a fifth-string tailback playing, yet they managed to remain undefeated through nine games.

"I hate to say it," says Smith, "but, I think there will be a lot of points scored, kinda like the game with Jackson."

The Bulldogs top rusher and the district's most talented runner, James Wilder, is slightly limping with a pulled hamstring. It is expected that the 200-pound college prospect will be at near-full strength for the contest. Wilder comes in with 1069 yards rushing, only 26 away from Norman Dockins' school rushing record.

David Webb, suspended from the Poplar Bluff team earlier in the year, leads the visiting team in rushing yardage with 870 despite missing three games. Quarterback Jim Bidewell is the top percentage passer in the conference, hitting 56.9 per cent of his tosses. That's a fraction better than Sikeston's David Shell.

A big game. No doubt. And Telle has never had much trouble getting his squad up for a game. "They've done a good job getting ready for games," he says about his youthful squad. "I didn't think we'd do this well, to be honest," Telle noted recently. He plays five seniors on offense and another five on defense. Six-two, 205 - pound Victor Ortega is a team-leader on defense.

"We have made some big turnovers this season," points out the coach, discussing his young team. Against Dexter the Mules fumbled in the endzone and had the ball recovered for a touchdown.

The Bulldogs, on the other hand, are a veteran outfit that hasn't had too much success in forcing turnovers and has had too much "success" in making them.

"We've had trouble adjusting on defense," points out Smith, talking mostly about last week's hang-on defensive effort against Jackson. "Poplar Bluff has shown the same formation Jackson used last week, so they could go to it, since they know that we're weak against the pass."

A crowd of four to five thousand is expected for the contest, with extra bleachers being set up in the endzone. Advance tickets have been sold and, despite nippy temperatures forecast, it should be quite a night for the football enthusiasts.

"We shouldn't be affected by the big crowd," says the Sikeston coach. "We've had great backing all year long from the fans, especially to the road games."

A big crowd, a big game and the two best teams in Southeast Missouri promise to make Friday night, November 5, 1976, at Sikeston's Public Schools Stadium a night to remember.

Oran upsets Bell City

BELL CITY — The upstart Oran Eagles recorded their second upset in as many starts in the Bell City B Team Tournament as they knocked off the host Cubs 72- 54 last night to advance to the finals of the tournament Saturday night.

The Eagles will take on Puxico for the championship at 8:00 Saturday evening. The Indians dumped rival Advance 58- 43 to gain the finals.

Oran took a slight 13- 10 lead after the first period, but began to dominate the game in the second quarter. Outscoring the Cubs 15- 8 in the quarter, the Eagles rolled up a 28- 18 halftime lead that the Cubs couldn't overcome. After an even third quarter, Bell City narrowed the lead to nine at one point in the fourth period. But a technical foul killed the Bell City momentum and allowed Oran to break the game open with 27 big fourth- period points.

David Burley and Jim Harris scored 20 and 19 points each for Oran, respectively. Kelly Campbell added 12 and Danny Ressel contributed 10. Ellis Jackson led all scorers with 23 for the Cubs, while Steve Austin added 10.

Puxico raced to an early 11- 4 lead over the cold- shooting Advance Hornets and went on to take an easy victory. Puxico's biggest frame was a 20- point second period.

Kevin Shepherd's 15 points paced Puxico's balanced scoring attack. David Smith scored 12, Rex James 11 and Marty Sifford 10 for coach Pete Townsend's Indians. Jeff Boner fired in 14 for Advance, while Parks Long and David Lorch added 11 apiece.

A 6:30 consolation battle between Advance and Bell City will precede Saturday night's 8:00 champion game.

The $46,000 House

Housing, a very sick industry, is expected to perk up slightly in 1977, The Conference Board reports. New housing starts should rise from 1.4 million units in 1976 to 1.7 million in 1977. Housing continues to be lashed by inflation, including the rising cost of money, land and building materials. The median price of a new single-family house is now more than $46,000.

BASEBALL

NEW YORK — The Montreal Expos opened baseball's first-ever re-entry draft by selecting Reggie Jackson of the Baltimore Orioles as the No. 1 choice among the 24 free-agents available.

GOLF

MELBOURNE, Australia — Australian Stewart Ginn's five-under-par 66 gave him a three-stroke lead over Britain's Guy Wolstenholme after the first round of an international golf tournament.

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — Jerry McGee and Allen Miller combined for a better-ball nine-under-par 63 and a tie for the lead with Bill Kratzert and Woody Blackburn after the first round of the $200,000 National Team Golf Championship.

Kapstein will be busy

Super-agent Jerry Kapstein's Providence, R.I. offices open for business bright and early today and baseball owners and general managers will be lining up to talk money with the man who represents 10 of the 24 free agents selected in Thursday's free-agent clearance sale.

"We have appointments with clubs in both leagues starting Friday," said Kapstein, who watched quietly in a corner of the room as baseball divided up the available talent.

Thirteen players were chosen by the maximum 12 teams and nine of those men are clients of Kapstein.

The most popular player at the start of the draft was Oakland outfielder Joe Rudi, who was selected six times on the first round. The first player to be removed from the list of eligibles was Oakland catcher Gene Tenace, who reached his 12-team limit midway through the third round. Kapstein represents both of them.

Others chosen by the 12-team limit in order were Rudi and another Oakland outfielder, Don Baylor, outfielder Gary Matthews of San Francisco, pitchers Don Gullett of Cincinnati, Bill Campbell of Minnesota, Wayne Garland of Baltimore and A's reliever Rollie Fingers, infielders Bobby Grich of Baltimore, Sal Bando of Oakland, and Dave Cash of Philadelphia, and pitcher Doyle Alexander of the New York Yankees.

Many of the assembled baseball brass sought Kapstein out after the draft, introduced themselves and chatted warmly, obviously laying the groundwork for their future negotiations.

The first man drafted was Baltimore outfielder Reggie Jackson, who was picked by the Montreal Expos. But Jackson's reported asking price of $3 million for five years may have scared off some teams and he did not reach the 12-team limit until the 14th round of the draft.

District 9 tourney concludes tonight

HOLCOMB — Bernie and Holcomb will square off tonight at the Holcomb gymnasium for the championship of the District 9 Volleyball Tournament at the right to advance to the state tournament beginning Tuesday night at Flat River.

The two teams advanced to the finals by gaining semifinal victories Thursday evening. Bernie downed Risco 15-5 and 15-6, while Holcomb defeated New Madrid 15-12 and 15-1.

In the District 10 event at Richland High School, four teams made it to tonight's semifinals with quarterfinal round wins. Richland dumped East Prairie 15-7 and 15-10, Advance squeezed past Puxico 15-7, 9-15 and 15-7; Woodland downed Leopold 15-7 and 15-13 and Bloomfield topped Zalma 15-10 and 15-11.

Advance meets Woodland at 6:30 and Bloomfield takes on Richland at 7:30 in the semifinals tonight.

The Essex tournament ends Saturday night.

The District 9 winner will meet the District 10 winner Tuesday night at Flat River in the opening round of the state tournament.

Revival services to begin Sunday

The Rev. Kenneth Tabor of San Jose, Calif., will be the evangelist for revival services beginning Sunday and continuing through Friday at Tanner Street Church of God, 619 Tanner St., the Rev. Vernon Guttenfelder, pastor, has announced.

In addition to evangelistic services at 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday and at 7:30 each week night, conferences on "inner healing" will be conducted Tuesday through Friday mornings at 9:30. The morning conferences will deal with such topics as guilt, anger, dis-esteem, fear, anxiety and depression.

The Rev. Mr. Tabor has served nearly 40 years as a minister and professional counselor, in the capacity of pastor, evangelist, author and lecturer.

While pastoring Peoples Church in Decatur, Ill., from 1950 to 1958, he wrote and produced the first regular weekly television program of the Protestant faith in the country on a continuous basis for three years.

After becoming pastor of Peoples Church in San Jose in 1959, the Rev. Mr. Tabor had a radio program on a San Francisco station and did graduate work in emotional psychology.

Besides regular duties, he travels extensively in speaking at state conventions, ministers retreats and youth seminars. He also has spoken at nine of the evening services at international conventions of the Church of God in Anderson, Ind.

The Rev. Mr. Tabor was the first clergyman to visit the oil fields on the North Slope in Alaska, which he did as guest of a senior drilling engineer for a major oil company who had been converted under his ministry as a young man.

He does free lance writing, and Warner Press published his book, "This Is the Day", which sold more than 5,000 copies in 10 months.

From 1969 to 1974, he pastored First Church of God in Wichita, Kan., where he ministered extensively to non-church youth in a program of rehabilitation from the drug culture.

At present, he is pastor of Valley Community Church in Los Gatos, Calif., but continues to write and lecture.

Noted choir to visit 1st Assembly

The world-famous "Revivaltime" Choir will sing during the 10:30 a.m. service Sunday at First Assembly of God Church, 306 S. Kingshighway, the Rev. Loren Wooten, pastor, has announced.

"Revivaltime" is the international radio broadcast of the Assemblies of God. Currently released over more than 650 U.S. and foreign stations, the program originates each week in Springfield. The choir is featured in several numbers on each broadcast.

Members of the 40-voice mixed choir are selected from the student body of Central Bible College, a ministerial training school of the denomination.

This personal appearance of the "Revivaltime" choir will feature gospel music at its finest -- new songs and old favorites. In addition, the choir will present a "sermon in song" -- a series of sacred selections interspersed with short testimonies by choir members.

Director of the group is the Rev. Cyril McLellan. He has directed the radio choir since 1952, and serves as a music instructor at Central Bible College in Springfield. Under his guidance the choir has recorded 17 long-play albums. Nine books of his special arrangements have been published.

Revival for deaf to open tonight

Robert Parrish

Revival services for the dea will begin tonight and continu Saturday night and through both services Sunday at First Baptis Church, 1101 N. Main St. Although designed specifically to reach the deaf through the sign language, the services also will minister to the hearing through the spoken word and strive to provide spiritual assistance and guidance to both.

The services will begin at 7:30 tonight and Saturday night and 10:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday.

The evangelist for the services is Robert E. Parrish of Little Rock, Ark., language missions director for the Arkansas State Baptist Convention. Jim Barnes of Jefferson City, director of state work with the deaf for the Missouri Baptist Convention, will be the revival song leader.

The revival services were arranged as an extension of the host church's ongoing ministry to the deaf.

Before entering the ministry, Parrish was employed by the Greensboro, N.C., fire department from 1958 to 1968. A native of Asheboro, N.C., he was licensed as a minister in 1968 and ordained in July 1970 after graduation from New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary.

Parrish became involved in work with the deaf following the birth of his daughter Debra, now 11, who is deaf. He and his wife Nancy also are the parents of two sons, ages 17 and 3.

Prior to accepting his present position as director of Baptist work with the deaf in Arkansas last Jan. 1, he had served as assistant pastor to deaf at First Baptist Church in New Orleans, minister to the deaf at First Baptist Church in Little Rock and missionary associate for the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Parrish also has served as camp pastor of deaf youth camps and led revivals and conferences for the deaf throughout the South. He also is a past president of the Arkansas Associaion for the Deaf-- the first hearing person to hold the office in the 150-year history of the association -- and is a member of several other state and national organizations which work with the deaf.

The Rev. Dr. Arthur C. Fulbright, pastor of First United Methodist Church, Highway 61 North, has announced that he will preach his sermon, "Our Life Is a Dream", during the 10:45 a.m. worship service Sunday. The sermon honors the beauty and sacredness of life, and its goal is to help Christians recover their "sense of the reality and ultimate friendliness of the spiritual world ..."

In the sermon, Dr. Fulbirght refers to the spiritual world as the real world "because although the material world in which we live has a reality of a kind, it is only temporary. A thing like love, for example, or a thing like truth, has a more permanent reality than any material object..."

Extra duties could couse public defender crisis

By JIM KELLER
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Missouri's public defender system faces a crisis in its ability to do its job unless an emergency appropriation is approved by the General Assembly early next year, many public defenders say.

Without the appropriation there could be additional delays in court cases and those indigents who are unable to post bond may have to wait in jail longer before their cases are tried.

The Public Defender Commission, created in August to oversee the program, is requesting about $342,000 in emergency appropriations from the General Assembly.

Money problems are exacerbated by increased duties for the public defenders requiring them to handle juvenile and misdemeanor cases where the accused might be incarcerated. Public defenders, who already handle all felonies involving indigents, were required to handle the extra duties by a 1972 U.S. Supreme Court decision.

The effect of this bill will be at least a 25 per cent increase in work for public defenders, who now operate in 14 of Missouri's 43 circuits, said Bill Abrams, assistant state court administrator.

He added that the number of elony cases, which generally equire more time than nisdemeanors, is expected to ncrease by 10 per cent to 15 er cent for the fiscal year nding June 30.

"The public defender rogram was supposed to educe the backlog of cases, ut it has increased the acklog because of inadequate taffs," Abrams said.

The problems with Missouri's public defender stem were not alleviated is year when the legislature propriated the statutory imit of $1.8 million to operate e program.

Realizing the need for more nds, the legislature raised e limit of appropriation to $.8 million for next year, but e emergency request is the nly way the public defenders will get financial relief this fiscal year.

While case loads are increasing, the public defender system lost $60,000 in state funding this year to court appointed counselors, who also are paid from the $1.8 million.

This shifting of funds to the court-appointed counsel cut 11 of Missouri's 14 public defenders' budget.

The legislative bill also required that five new public defender offices be established, but no funds have been appropriated to set up these offices.

In anticipation of the increased demands on public defenders, Robert E. Seiler, chief justice of the Missouri Supreme Court, has sent memos to circuit and magistrate judges in the 14 circuits requesting them to use discretion when assigning cases.

But Bill Mays, public defender in the 13th circuit and president of the Public Defender Association, said insufficient funds will reduce staffs from April to June, a time period when the caseload is expected to be at its highest since the public defender program began in 1972.

"We just won't be able to handle the increased caseload without the additional funding to pay for more assistants," Mays said.

To meet the increased demand in his circuit, Mays said he will need to add another full-time assistant public defender to the two he now has. "But since I now have only enough money to pay my second assistant $500 per month, there is no way to hire another one without the emergency appropriation.

"I've lived in this damn system so long without having adequate funding that I doubt if I can get another assistant for several months next year. There is never enough money or staff to do the whole job," Mays said.

Inadequate funds in other less populated circuits have forced the public defenders to layoff investigators, assistant public defenders and secretaries.

Joseph H. Scott, public defender in the 5th circuit, had to drop his part-time investigator and use that salary to pay for a secretary. A grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, which had paid for one-fifth of the investigator's salary, ran out in July.

"He said he couldn't work for a one-fifth cut in pay and I don't blame him. I had one secretary-receptionist who worked full time and was funded through LEAA, but now she can work only three half-days per week," Scott said.

Similar types of federal grants have supported legal counsel since 1972 in misdemeanor and juvenile cases for Missouri's three largest circuits: St. Louis, St. Louis County and Jackson County.

Grants in each of these circuits will expire early next year, but the state has not appropriated money for the public defenders or court-appointed counselors to handle the cases.

Robert C. Bobione, public defender in St. Louis County, said his 15 assistants would have to assume the duties of the six defenders who currently handle misdeameanor and juvenile cases.

"This just isn't possible. Misdemeanors and juveniles will be unfunded programs," he said. "I don't intend to handle the increased cases. You can't maintain the status quo on salaries and pick up misdemeanors and juveniles and work with a six per cent cut in this year's budget."

Babione pointed out that his circuit has about 100 per cent more misdemeanors and about 40 per cent more juvenile cases than the recommended national average established by the National Advisory Committee.

All of these problems have encouraged several public defenders to seek other forms of employment, said Abrams. The average public defender serves only three years of a four-year term.

At least two of the public defenders who have left their offices recently cited low salary and long working hours as two of the major reasons for leaving.

"I'm getting out, too," said William Fleischaker of the 29th circuit. "I work harder than my friends in private practice, but I make less than they do. I'm tired of working 60 to 70 hours a week."

Trim weight to help heart

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been diagnosed as having "chronic ischemic heart disease with hypertension." I would appreciate your definition of the word "ischemia" and I would like to have any suggestions in regard to the treatment and diet for this disease.

I am 75 years old, a retired lady with a weight of 150 pounds. I am sure this is too much weight for a person who is 5 feet 1.

Presently I am taking hydrodiuril and Aldomet. Are these two medicines adequate for this heart disease?

DEAR READER — Ischemia is a word for inadequate blood flow. The term is now used frequently to indicate there is an obstruction in the coronary arteries to your heart muscle. The obstruction is from the buildup of fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries.

This condition leads to inadequate amounts of oxygen being delivered to the heart muscle and at the same time permits the accumulation of carbon dioxide in the heart cells. It is the common form of heart disease these days.

The Hydrodiuril is to help you eliminate salt and with it excess water from the body. It helps to lower blood pressure in many cases. The Aldomet is a more specific treatment for elevated blood pressure.

These medicines help your heart indirectly by controlling your blood pressure. The high blood pressure increases the deposits of fatty-cholesterol substances in the arteries and also works the heart harder.

You are absolutely right about your weight. If you can get rid of every last pound of extra fat you will decrease your blood pressure and the work on your heart.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-3, Diet, Preventing Atherosclerosis. If you will follow these diet principles and also cut your calories down until you can lose your excess weight you can do a lot for yourself. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — If a woman has non-invasive carcinoma in situ of the cervix would this necessitate the removal of the uterus — the reports showing the uterus is clear?

DEAR READER — That's a sticky question. Carcinoma in situ is a relatively benign superficial cancer of the surface of the cervix, sometimes overlapping onto the adjacent walls of the vagina and sometimes extending into the opening of the cervix.

It is usually clearly separated from the normal cells. In some ways it is similar to skin cancer — it grows slowly. The problem is that a fairly high percentage of women with these fairly benign cell changes later develop characteristic invasive cancer of the cervix.

There is no clear cut agreement among gynecologists on the proper treatment. And more importantly, no one answer will fit all cases. With sufficient biopsies or removal of a conical section the doctor can be more certain there are no hidden areas of invasive cancer.

The age of the patient and desire to have additional children is also a consideration. If the changes are minimal and easily removed a young woman may be justified in not undergoing a hysterectomy until later but she must be carefully supervised. An older woman, particularly if there is evidence of other disease in the uterus as well, is probably better off to have a complete hysterectomy.

No immediate changes expected in court ruling on TV 'family hour'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television viewers should expect no immediate changes in early-evening programs as a result of a federal court decision against the networks' "family hour" viewing policy.

U.S. District Court Judge Warren J. Ferguson ruled Thursday that the major TV networks violated constitutional rights of free speech in adopting the policy last year.

Ferguson did not, however, abolish "family hour" programming, which was designed to calm public protest by keeping sex and violence from early-evening television likely to be watched by children.

He merely said NBC, CBS and ABC couldn't delegate authority for setting the policy to the National Association of Broadcasters (NAB).

The decision was hailed a victory for free speech by the three entertainment guilds, two production companies and nine situation-comedy makers that had filed a lawsuit in October 1975.

"Americans everywhere won a victory today," said producer Norman Lear, creator of "All in the Family" and other hit comedy series.

CBS and ABC said they would appeal Ferguson's decision. NBC and the NAB said they would review the decision before commenting.

CBS, which led the fight for the industry's adoption of the policy, said, "In the meantime and until further notice, CBS will voluntarily continue to adhere to the family viewing concept."

The NAB adopted the policy in September 1975 after network officials held a closed meeting with Federal Communications Commission Chairman Richard E. Wiley. The networks and 462 television stations now subscribe to the policy.

In Ferguson's 223-page opinion, the judge also held that the FCC violated the First Amendment "by issuing threats of government action" through Wiley "should (the) industry not adopt the family viewing policy or the equivalent...." He said "censorship by government or privately created review boards cannot be tolerated."

Ferguson ruled that the NAB and networks were liable for any damages that Lear's production company suffered from the policy. No date has been scheduled to consider damages and a contention by the unions that the "family hour" policy violated federal antitrust laws.

The policy says entertainment programs "inappropriate for viewing by a general family audience" shouldn't be aired at night during the first hour of network programming or in the preceding hour. The policy does not specify what constitutes inappropriate programming.

Ferguson, in criticizing the networks for bending to what he called FCC threats, said it was their right and duty to make independent decisions.

Thoughts

From The Living Bible

So Jacob left Beer-sheba and journeyed toward Haran. That night, when he stopped to camp at sundown, he found a rock for a headrest and lay down to sleep, and dreamed that a staircase reached from earth to heaven, and he saw the angels of God going up and down upon it. At the top of the stairs stood the Lord. "I am Jehovah," he said, "the God of Abraham, and of your father Isaac. The ground you are lying on is yours! I will give it to you and to your descendants. For you will have descendants as many as dust!"

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Nov. 5, the 310th day of 1976. There are 56 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1940, U.S. election returns showed that President Franklin D. Roosevelt had been elected to an unprecedented third term.

On this date:

In 1605, a conspirator, Guy Fawkes, was seized as he was about to blow up the British House of Lords.

In 1872, the suffragist, Susan B. Anthony, voted for Ulysses S. Grant for President. Women did not have the vote, and she was fined $100 for casting a ballot illegally.

In 1912, Woodrow Wilson was elected President.

In 1930, the American novelist, Sinclair Lewis, was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature.

In 1940, election returns were televised for the first time.

In 1946, a new career in politics began as John F. Kennedy was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives at the age of 29.

Ten years ago: The worst floods in Italy since the Middle Ages were causing death and destruction over wide areas.

Five years ago: The United States informed South Vietnam that the American troop withdrawal woulj be speeded up to get thousands of military men home by Christmas.

One year ago: Egypt's President Anwar Sadat told a joint session of the U.S. Congress that the Palestinian question was the overriding issue in the Middle East.

Today's birthdays: Philosopher and historian Will Durant is 91. Former cowboy star Roy Rogers is 64.

Thought for today: The man who was born luckiest is the man who doesn't believe in luck. — anonymous.

companies to establish such plans for gas use and to tell their customers about them, as well as the existing plan for electricity.

On its electric and gas rate base of $26,299,929, Arkansas-Missouri was allowed a rate of return of 8.06 per cent. The return on common stock allowed was 12.5 per cent. The company had proposed a rate of return on rate base of 10.03 per cent on electric and 10.22 per cent on gas. It had proposed a return on common stock of 14 per cent for electric and 14.5 per cent on gas.

Associated Natural was allowed a rate of return of 8.72 per cent on its rate base of $10,295,044, and a return on common stock of 11 per cent. It had proposed a rate of return on rate base of 10.61 per cent and a return on common stock of 12.5 per cent.

The order was approved by three of the five members of the Commission. Chairman A. Robert Pierce, Jr. and Commissioner Stephen B. Jones dissented. They contended that a number of adjustments made by the majority, including what they called inadequate levels of return, make it impossible for the companies to maintain their financial integrity.

Carter said the slimness of the victory "is fairly typical" of recent elections. "I don't feel timid or cautious or reticent about moving aggressively to carry out my commitments because I only got about 300 electoral votes," he said. "I'll be very aggressive in carrying out my commitments to the American people."

But he said, "I don't underestimate the difficulty" in accomplishing the goals he has set for his administration.

And he said the success of his administration will depend on cooperation and in bringing the electorate into the governmental process. "It's going to involve a great deal of cooperation between myself as president-elect, those who will serve in the administration and the American people and the Congress," he said.

Carter said he has not yet set any list of priorities for his administration, but he vowed to do so over the next few weeks. He said he will announce the decisions publicly as they are made.

Carter's stumbling block may be the chairman of the Federal Reserve

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of Jimmy Carter's biggest stumbling blocks in shaping economic policy next year is likely to be the Federal Reserve Board and its strong-willed chairman, 72-year-old Arthur F. Burns.

Carter and Burns have sharply different views on inflation and unemployment, and which is worse for the country. Carter also wants changes in the Fed's operations and the status of its chairman.

Through its control of the American monetary system, the Fed influences interest rates and the money supply. Carter says he wants the Fed to wield that influence to speed up the economy and reduce unemployment. This can be done without adding to inflation, the president-elect says.

But people who know Burns say he remains convinced that inflation is the chief threat to the nation's economy, and they say it is highly unlikely he would suddenly switch signals just to suit Carter.

Carter can't remove Burns, because Burns' term as chairman doesn't expire until Jan. 31, 1978. A source close to Burns said there is almost no chance Burns will step down early.

None of the terms of the other six members of the board will expire until 1978 either, so Carter will be unable to change the makeup of the Fed unless there is an early resignation.

Burns' first public reaction to the election and what it means for the Fed probably will come when he appears before the Senate Banking Committee on Nov. 11 to disclose the Fed's latest money supply growth targets.

As of Thursday, there had not yet been any contact between Burns and the president-elect.

Tornadoes whip through US at higher rate in '76

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Tornadoes whipped through the United States at a higher rate than normal during the first 10 months of 1976 but the number of fatalities was far below average.

The Severe Storms Forecast Center of the National Weather Service said today that preliminary figures show there were 830 tornadoes through the end of October, while the 10-month average for the last 20 years is 660.

If the next two months are near normal, the storm center said, there will be another 40 tornadoes reported for the year. The storm center said the threat of tornadoes is virtually over for all parts of the United States except the southern states.

Fatalities for the year totaled 44, less than 50 per cent of normal, and there were 1,175 injuries resulting from tornadoes.

For the first 10 months of 1975, there were 845 tornadoes and 59 deaths reported.

"A lot of tornadoes this year are what I would call mini-tornadoes—mild and short-lived," said Allen Pearson, head of the storm center in Kansas City.

In a bad tornado year, he said, high energy disturbances form off the California coast and spread eastward across the United States. He attributed the milder tornadoes of 1976 to the same weather system that caused a drought over much of the Midwest and in California.

"It was almost like nature built a brick wall," he said, "and what storms we had were shunted northward into Canada.'

The effect of the drought was evident in Kansas, Pearson said, where the 14 tornadoes reported for the first 10 months were the least since 1946. There were 15 tornadoes during the same period last year. The record in Kansas for the most tornado activity during the January-through-October period was set in 195[illegible] when 97 tornadoes were reported.

Prayer book, heater, CB radio are stolen

An altar missal book, a radiant heater and a citizen's band radio were among items taken in separate thefts reported to the Department of Public Safety reported today.

The prayer book, valued at $60, was taken from St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church sometime Wednesday night.

Larry Neal of Wyatt reported the theft of a radiant heater from his pickup truck about 4 p.m. Thursday while the truck was parked at Homestead Distributing Co., 1401 E. Malone Ave.

Neal told officers he bought the heater in the store and put it in the truck, then returned to the store for something he had forgotten. When he returned two or three minutes later, the heater was gone. It was valued at $46.

James Terrell, 835 William St., reported the theft of a CB radio worth $160, a four-channel scanner worth $100 and a box of .30- caliber bullets valued at $4.80 from his pickup truck between 3:15 and 3:45 p.m. Thursday, while the vehicle was parked at Sand Lounge, 1129 W. Malone Ave.

Uncles of Litton dissappear, possible kidnapping

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Authorities say they are investigating the disappearance and possible kidnaping of two uncles of the late Rep. Jerry Litton.

Terry Deister, investigator for the Platte County sheriff's office, said the wife of Thomas J. Skjeldbred, 43, said he first left home without explanation Oct. 23, returned Oct. 28 and was abducted.

Harry Moss was last seen Oct. 23 at his home in Kansas City and at a nursing home where his wife is a patient.

Both men are married to sisters of Charley Litton, father of the late congressman.

"We're attempting to locate three men for questioning in reference to the kidnaping (of Moss)," Deister said. "They are three white men between 30 and 45 who are from the south side of the (Missouri) River."

Deister said Mrs. Skjeldbred gave this account of events after her husband disappeared Oct. 23:

He telephoned her and said he was being held captive by two men who had forced him to open a safe in their home and remove $1,000. When he returned Oct. 28, she told him she was upset over the loss of the $1,000 and two of her purses.

Continuing her account, she said he left and returned about 10 minutes later with the two purses. She recovered eight $100 bills that she had hidden in the purses behind some photographs. She left the apartment and returned later to again find her husband gone and a note saying, "I no good to you are anyone eles."

She said she believed her husband was abducted and the note was not from him because he could spell.

Cancer society announces 2 new research grants okay?

JEFFERSON CITY — Dr. Noel R. Lewis, president of the Missouri Division of the American Cancer Society, announced that two new research grants were approved by the society's national board of directors at its annual meeting last month in New York City. The two Missouri grants, totaling $171,065 have been awarded to scientists at Washington University in St. Louis.

One grant totaling $62,500 has been awarded to Dr. Susan E. Cullen, assistant professor of microbiology, immunology and genetics at Washington University, to study immune reactions of so-called T cells, which under certain circumstances can destroy cancer cells.

T cells are manufactured by the thymus gland. If a mouse bears a tumor, the tumor cells make specific substances (antigens). These stimulate the thymus cells to make T cells. T cells kill cancer cells under certain conditions but not under others.

How does the cell stop the message from going on and on, once it is delivered? Dr. David Schlessinger, professor of microbiology and immunology at Washington University at St. Louis, hopes his research will furnish the answer. A second grant of $108,565 for two years has been awarded to support his research on the RNA in the bacterial cell E. coli. Genetic mutants of the cell are available that permanently lack the enzymes whose jot it is to degrade and destroy RNA chains. Lacking this enzyme, how does the cell end messages flowing from DNA to RNA?

Schlessinger plans to obtain fragments of the missing enzymes and to introduce these into the deficient mutants. The goal is to reconstitute the normal situation.

These two research grants are part of $9,800,257 in grants approved at the society's annual meeting. Lewis emphasized that over $27 million has been spent nationally by the ACS on cancer research this year, including $760,688 currently now in effect in Missouri.

Researchers report UMC swine findings

University of Missouri—Columbia researchers reported recent swine research findings to about 70 Missouri hog producers at UMC's Swine Day, Oct. 22 at the UMC Livestock Center.

Here are summaries of the UMC research:

•Corn feed trials showed that opaque corn and opaque corn with amino acid additives brought about twice the average daily gain in swine than normal or waxy corn, researcher David Lewis said.

Swine also found the opaque corn feed more palatable. On the negative side, opaque corn also attracted more insects and didn't settle as well in the feeder as the other varieties.

• Growing swine kept in confinement experienced better growth than those kept in open front or outdoor dry lot units, said UMC animal husbandry specialist John Rea. Swine confined during nursing and finishing had an average daily gain of 1.9 pounds during finishing, while hogs moved from confinement during nursing to open front or dry lot finishing units had 1.4 to 1.5 pounds average daily gains.

• Growth of swine is also improved with commercial antibiotic feed additives, reported researcher Robert Lauxen. Feed treated with Mecadox and Aureo-SP-250 "beat out the non-medicated group," Lauxen said. The medicated treatments brought about average daily gains higher than the average gains with 16 per cent protein feed and gains approching or higher than the average gains from 18 per cent protein feed.

New estate tax law is discussed

NEW MADRID — The outmoded estate tax exemptions of the 1940's have undergone substantial modification, 10th District Rep. Bill D. Burlison, D-Cape Girardeau, told the New Madrid Kiwanis Club Thursday night.

Speaking at the club's regular meeting Burlison pointed out that the $60,000 estate tax exemption and $30,000 gift tax exemption under current law have been combined and liberalized to permit a total exemption equivalent of $175,625. The full amount will be phased in over a five-year period.

He also pointed out that under present law the martial deduction is one-half of the decedent's estate. the new law increases this to $250, or half of the estate, whichever is greater.

The congressman also discussed new provisions with respect to valuation of farms and closely held businesses, capital gains taxes on appreciation of the descendant's estate and generation-skipping trusts.

Pool bond issue fails at Malden

MALDEN — Swimmers in Malden will have to use the old swimming pool for a while longer, according to a Malden vote Tuesday.

A proposal to issue $130,000 in general obligation bonds to build a new pool failed by a vote of 1,008-606 against the measure. It needed a simple majority to pass.

The proposal would have increased the city's tax levy by 20 cents. It failed in all four wards.

City Clerk Roscoe Thornton said this morning Mayor Sparrel Davis will talk to the citizens to determine if the vote indicated a genuine rejection of the proposal or confusion over the many elections to vote on.

The vote by ward was 414-204 against in the combined balloting of wards one and two. Wards three turned it down, 394-264. The tally in Ward four was 200-138 against the pool.

Non-trendy may be dumb to some, but...

Men really like this years outerwear look

By Charles Hix

NEW YORK — (NEA) — The most traveled route in menswear this year is in the dressed-up direction.

Speak with any designer of men's wearables and you'll hear about leisurewear yielding to classics, especially in tailored clothing.

Despite the admonitions of the Men's Fashion Association of America that thigh-topping jackets are unflattering to most male physiques and that mid-thigh toppers are unacceptable over sportcoats or suits, shorter-length weather-protectors are much in evidence this season.

High-styled blouson pullovers with drawstrings and blanket coats of many colored patterns make the men's magazine fashion pages, but middle-of-the-road versions of above-the-knee outerwear are what many men still prefer for comfort and ease.

The island between the supposed style trends versus what the average guy really wears has given rise to a term widely used within the fashion industry — "dumb".

There are "dumb suits," meaning nondescript models that exhibit little or no flare. They're simply there and that's that.

"Dumb sports jackets," many of them polyester double-knits, are those that reportedly look about the same on a hanger or on a man. Any number of garments that fail to meet the industry's prevailing taste level are "dumb."

A number of observers would lump many shorter-length jackets and coats in the "dumb" category. However, a closer look at these bad-mouthed garments proves that they are smartening up a bit.

Take the wool outershirt. As made for years by Pendleton, it is as American as baked beans. While never "dumb," the style ran the risk of becoming boring.

This fall, though, many of the plaids are beefier, breezier and brighter. The serviceable outershirts take on a new, handsomer appeal for the younger customer who enjoys role playing and may combine the look with construction boots and socks as a city costume. Conversely, these outershirts, particularly those with snap-fastened and flapped patch pockets, reflect the resurgent appreciation for natural, honest clothes by more conservative customers.

Mighty-Mac, the Massachusetts - based outerwear firm, is heavily promoting what it calls a new fashion length — the "Shot" jacket. Actually, this is a regionalism for how "short" is pronounced in New England, although the length is popular nationally. Whether or not the styles are "dumb" depends upon context and taste. Warming a fellow for a walk through the woods, a pile-lined jacket is functional and thus right on. Thrown together with a pair of plaid wool trousers for dinner at a restaurant, it's "dumb."

The coat most often earning the epithet "dumb" is the mid-thigh kind variously called a car coat, suburban coat, surcoat, etc. Nonetheless, it remains a mainstay in mail catalogs like Sears and Montgomery Ward, in men's stores and in men's wardrobes.

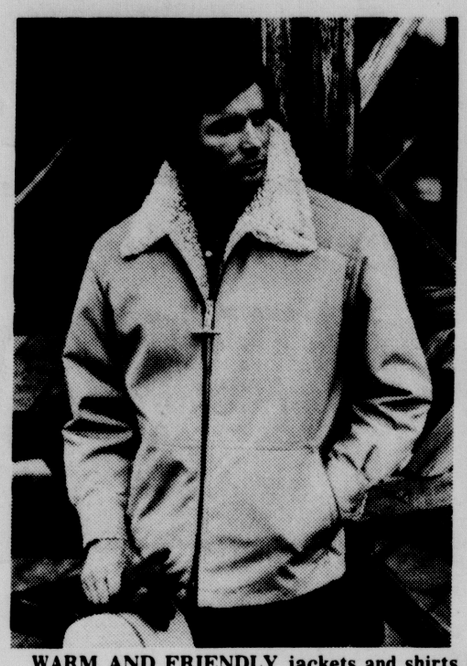
"To Mr. America, it's easy to toss on over a 'dumb' doubleknit jacket — although worn that way the man looks atrocious — and, more important to him, it's less expensive than longer overcoats. Truthfully, sixty-five to seventy per cent of American men don't give a damn about fashion. This is a high-fashion coat. It should only be worn over a sweater. But if a man treats it as a 'dumb' coat over a 'dumb' suit, who's to stop him?"

No one.

Another translation for "dumb" apparel is clothing with mass appeal. What is "popular" by definition can never be "trendy." Although the quest for new styling in menswear is valid, so is the concept of feeling good with old favorites, even if they're not in vogue.

Yet, the fact that, season after season, menswear makers bring out better-styled variations on "dumb" merchandise proves that the brightest of all may be the fellows who won't be deterred from wearing what they choose. Happily, as time goes by, "dumb" clothing is looking smarter every year.



WARM AND FRIENDLY jackets and shirts meet approval of most men when weather turns not so welcoming. Two-way zipper and T-bar pull of Mighty-Mac (left) make it an easy-on jacket in the current 'shot' or New England 'short' length. With leather piping it is about $85. Wool outer shirt is updated with beefier plaids such as one in red, navy and camel for about $50. It is worn here with red lambswool sweater under a basic navy front button shirt and flannel slacks for country or street wear, as created by Pendleton.

Overlooked force in our history

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — One hundred and ninety years ago this autumn a handful of men meeting in Annapolis began a sequence of events which was to give America a soul to go with its newly freed body. The men issued an invitation to the 13 states to meet the following year to form a constitution. They were led by Alexander Hamilton.

We have not this Bicentennial heard much about A. Hamilton. We have deified Thomas Jefferson, given a sixth military star to Gen. Washington, and said our proper prayers for the spirit of Ben Franklin. But cheers have been few for the first treasury secretary.

It figures. Hamilton was not precisely the kind of man to whom even history warms. Robert Morris, his latter-day biographer, is kindly in calling him a "democrat with a small 'd'," a gentleman with "quasi-monarchical" tendencies. In fact, left to Hamilton, the U.S. of today might be as much a duplicate of as divorced from Great Britain, and we should refer to our president as His Highness.

Hamilton was a revolutionary tory. His life was spent securing the nation's sovereignty, but on his brutally stiff terms. He regarded democracy as too important to be left to the people and leadership as a province of the well-to-do. "All communities divide themselves into the few and the many," he wrote. "The first are the rich and well born, the other the mass of people (who seldom judge right). Give therefore to the first class a permanent share in the government."

Humanity was not one of Hamilton's soft spots. "Take mankind in general," he said, "they are vicious." His sentiments were more inclined to privilege and power. In "The Man From Monticello" author Thomas Fleming recounts the evening Jefferson and Hamilton discussed favorite people; when Jefferson said he believed John Locke and Francis Bacon to be two of the finest men of history, Hamilton countered with his own idea of the "greatest man who ever lived" — Julius Caesar.

He was not of course the only influential official of his time to plot for limited freedom in the new nation. John Adams had his suspicions about the disposition of the masses, and his fondness for the British system of class division. And there were others more flagrantly elitist, now called Hamiltonians, as distinct from Jeffersonians. The feud between the two factions rages even to this day.

Essentially the Constitution is a compromise of the extremes of the two sides. Jefferson wanted a loose confederation of states, was contemptuous of consolidated wealth, and wished the nation to remain a place of small merchants and family farmers. Hamilton, conversely, wanted a central government with an iron grip, presidents and governors to be elected for life, and an intimate partnership with Great Britain.

At the time it was thought the finished Constitution leaned more to the Jeffersonian principles. Hamilton derided it on occasion as a "shilly shally thing of milk and water." And yet the language was sufficiently vague as to leave the final verdict to history. That verdict now, to some, seems ominously Hamiltonian. Hence one reason, in this era of populism, we hear so little about the great Federalist.

Indeed, Hamilton's hand if not his name is on much of the nation today. Giant corporations operate where simple artisans were intended to prosper. Great wealth is concentrated in a relatively few number of families and institutions. The framers are said to have wanted political influence to pass regularly from candidate to candidate, as befits the changing mood of the electorate, but in fact the power changes only slowly, when at all, in the Congress of the United States.

As for the strength of the central government, it is undeniable and ever growing. And in the middle of it, this Bicentennial, there is outside the Treasury Department a statue of Hamilton which surveys what he wrought: millions of bureaucrats, thousands of bureaucracies, gigantic military forces, HEW, HUD, CIA, FEC, FBI, SEC, DOT — and something near $400 billion a year in operational costs.

There is a look of satisfaction on the Hamilton statue. Two hundred years later he is not a favorite, but he is still a force.

Effort launched to test stress on shipping cattle

WASHINGTON (AP) — A joint effort to find out more about shipping stress on cattle moved long distances has been launched by federal, state and industry interests.

The Agriculture Department said Monday that one of the main goals will be to study the causes and effects of stress on young feeder cattle during the two to four weeks involved in their weaning, shipping and re-establishment in new surroundings.

Officials said shipping stress causes a variety of diseases, especially respiratory afflictions among young feeder calves moved from southeastern U.S. farms through feedlots and then to slaughter. Stress and related diseases cause an estimated $500 million loss annually to the cattle industry.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 1976 Oscars won't be presented until March 28, 1977, but already the film studios are gearing up their awards campaigns.

Sales chiefs are booking choice sites for their December releases — theaters in Westwood and Beverly Hills are preferred because most academy voters live near the area. Publicity departments have reserved the deluxe private screening rooms through January. (The nominations will be announced on St. Valentine's Day).

Many of the Oscar hopefuls will receive mass releases throughout the country this month and in December. Thus, if they catch on with the general public, a steamroller effect could influence Academy voters; monetary success is often equated with quality in their eyes.

The race cannot yet be judged, since some of the last-minute releases have not been previewed. At this point in the race, "All The President's Men," now in rerelease throughout the country, appears the front-runner.

Warner Brothers is making sure the Watergate film maintains its visibility; it's currently playing in more than 600 theaters and will be playing in some metro areas, including Los Angeles, well into 1977.

"When a film is released earlier in the year, you've got to book it locally to remind the voters," explains a publicity executive.

The year's releases so far offer few possible contenders. "All The President's Men" is likely to be nominated in most major categories, including stars Dustin Hoffman and Robert Redford, and Jason Robards and Jane Alexander in support.

"The Omen" was a surprise blockbuster for 20th Century-Fox, and it may draw nominations for star Gregory Peck and director Clive Donner. The company's fiscal health was also revived by "Silent Movie," and it could be among the nominees, although the academy often overlooks comedy. Both films are in first release around the nation.

John Wayne appears a sure nominee for his dying gunslinger in "The Shootist," easily his best role since "True Grit." Although the film was not well received, "W.C. Fields and Me" could reward Rod Steiger with a nomination. Another repeater could be Walter Matthau for "Bad News Bears."

As in recent years, the field for best actress and supporting actress appears slender. There may be sentimental votes for the returns of Lauren Bacall in "The Shootist" and Audrey Hepburn in "Robin and Marian." Sarah Miles could get a mention for "The Sailor Who Fell from Grace with the Sea."

Robert DeNiro, winner as supporting actor in "The Godfather, Part II," may be competing with himself as best actor. He could be nominated for "Taxi Driver," "The Last Tycoon" or "1900," although it's undecided whether the latter will be released in 1976.

Another self-competitor: Faye Dunaway. She is being mentioned for both "Network" and "Voyage of the Damned."

"Marathon Man" might score for Dustin Hoffman instead of "All The President's Men." And "Network" is being touted for the star performances of William Holden and Peter Finch, and support by Robert Duvall.

December releases with high hopes include: "Bound for Glory," David Carradine; "The Last Tycoon"; "The Seven per cent Solution," Nicol Williamson, Alan Arkin; "Voyage of the Damned," Dunaway, Oskar Werner, Max Von Sydow, etc.; "A Star is Born," Barbra Streisand; "Silver Streak"; "Nickelodeon"; "Rocky."

And don't forget another Christmas release. If "Jaws" can be nominated as best picture, why not "King Kong"?

'Outlaw of country music' said to be only one who has 'universal' possibility

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music headliner Waylon Jennings calls Steve Young his favorite singer, "the only one on the scene who has the possibility of being universal."

Jennings, one of the leaders of the progressive or "outlaw" movement in country music, says Young will be:

"The Bob Dylan of country music. He's not country, not pop, not folk. He has no earthly idea how great he is. I believe in that dude. If he gets any better, I'll kill him."

Young, a rising "outlaw" himself, is working on his second album for RCA after more than a decade of trying to get record executives to accept his style of music.

"In the last two or three years, Nashville has opened up because of the success of Waylon and Willie (Nelson)," Young said. "I used to be unable to get my foot in the door; people wouldn't listen to what I was doing.

"Times have changed to where I can do my own thing. Maybe me and the times have come together."

The "outlaw" movement, which both Jennings and his disciple, Young, represent, has its greatest appeal among young country music fans and sounds more like rock than traditional country music. The same sort of appeal has been generated by some of the newer jazz groups — Herbie Hancock's various ensembles and The Weather Report, for examples. These groups perform within a basic jazz framework, but employ rock, Latin and even country techniques as well.

The "oulaw" sound as exhibited by Young is a combination of country, blues, folk and rock, making it hard to pigeon-hole in any category.

In his 10-year career, Young has played folk and blues besides progressive country. Songs he has written have been recorded by Jennings, Joan Baez, Rita Coolidge and Ian Matthews.

"My music has to do with the South," said Young, 34, a native of Newnan, Ga. "It's a reflection of my childhood. It's a combination of folk, blues and country."

His songs are reminiscent of Tom T. Hall's, with references to stained glass windows, bus trips and revivals.

"When I sing, I like to have that edge — that soul — that Hank Williams had," he said. "I don't mean blabbering on, but really saying something.

"I don't want to lose that essence of what soul is. I hear a lot of artists I like, but then I don't like their next song.

"Hank Williams was in touch with his soul, and Lefty Frizzell was good. After them, we got into homogenized, processed country music."

But he sees market improvement in some of today's writing.

"Some of it is better than it used to be," he said. "The times are more out front, and we are lyrically more honest — more complex. But of course, so is life.

Meetings planned on farm strategy

Conferences on farm management strategy are planned for ten Missouri towns in November and December.

The conferences will cover how to make management decisions in the face of the many uncertainties in agriculture. Sessions will be conducted by extension farm management specialists from the University of Missouri-Columbia and area extension specialists. Local farmers will also report their experiences.

Other topics to be covered include farm exports, consumer movements, government policy, competition between large and small hog producers and the financial picture for beef cattle producers.

The conferences are scheduled Nov. 18 in Jefferson City and Bolivar, Nov. 19 in Versailles, Nov. 22 in Warrenton, Nov. 29 in Carrollton, Nov. 30 in Shelbina, Dec. 6 in Portageville, Dec. 14 in Perryville, Dec. 15 in Union, Dec. 16 in Bolivar and Dec. 20 in Memphis.

New look for bread would aid nutrition

COLUMBIA — Wheat's future -- and much of this world's nutrition -- depends on mutilated chromosomes, a forced marriage with a distant relative, and changing American ideas about what makes good bread.

"The breads we eat now are mostly air," said Professor Ernest R. Sears, world- famous wheat geneticist at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

"If we could get used to eating bread made from so-called 'inferior flours,' it wouldn't be as soft and light as the bread we're used to eating, but it could have more protein. This is because the kind of protein — gluten— that makes bread dough elastic and capable of yielding a light, air-filled loaf is apparently produced by the wheat plant at some sacrifice in totalprotein content."

Sears, a U.S. Department of Agriculture Agricultural Research Service scientist, said one way to boost wheat's nutritive value was to produce "high- protein mutations." Essentially, that means using X-rays or some other technique to knock out a small part of a schomosome.

"We know that there are 21 pairs of chromosomes in wheat and that one pair of these promotes gluten production at the expense of total protein," said sears. "By getting rid of the gene concerned, we could probably increase protein 50 per cent with no decrease in seed weight."

Sears explained that seed weight must be maintained because decreased weight almost always means lower yield.

Another way to boost wheat quality and potential yields may be to "take full advantage of the rye component of triticale and concentrate on hybrid triticale rather than hybrid wheat," Sears said.

Triticale is the "forced marriage with a distant relative." It's a cross between wheat and rye which so far has limited use.

Sears predicted that many farmers will switch to triticale when it yields more than wheat. And he predicted that those yield increases will come.

He also forecast stronger markets for triticale or high protein mutants, "especially with the growing food shortage."

"So far, triticale has limited use as human food," said Sears. "but it has great potential. It's believed to be more nutritious, because of a relatively high content of lysine, one of the essential amino acids. (Lysine limits how much protein humans and other nonruminants can use from wheat protein.)

"In order to make 'good' bread from triticale -- the 'airy' bread we are used to - - bakers have to put in some wheat flour."

Sears said triticale has one great advantage over wheat; namely its rye component.

"One of the troubles with hybrid wheat is that it is not adapted to cross-pollination," said Sears. "Rye is."

So is corn, and that's one of the reasons scientists have been able to improve corn hybrids over the years.

Sears said cross- pollinating plants are better, because crossing usually produces a "hybrid vigor" which makes the plant grow and yield better. With self- pollination, he said, the plant "suffers from inbreeding and loses quite a bit of vigor."

"Triticale would probably never be as well adapted to cross pollination as rye, because it's main physical component is wheat," explained Sears. "It has tiwce as many wheat chromosomes as rye chromosomes. But it still has much more potential for cross-pollination than wheat, which is strictly a self-pollinator."

Recipient of St. Louis Award named

ST. LOUIS — Charles F. Knight, chairman and chief executive officer of Emerson Electric Co., was named the 1976 recipient of The St. Louis Award at a ceremony conducted Wednesday in the rotunda of the Old Court House, 11 N. Fourth St.

Dr. William H. Danforth, chancellor of Washington University and secretary of The St. Louis Award Committee, presented the award which is given to the individual who has made the most outstanding contribution or who has brought the greatest distinction to the Metropolitan St. Louis community during the previous 12-month period. The award was established in 1931 by the late David P. Wohl, who was a leading St. Louis philanthropist.

Knight received the $1,000 award, which he announced he was donating to a fund that already contains approximately $20,000 unused from the recent Save Our Sports (SOS) program of the St. Louis Public Schools. "This fund," he explained, "will be used to establish athletic training rooms in our 10 city high schools." Knight conceived and helped implement the successful SOS effort to keep varsity athletics in operation during the 1975-76 school year.

He also received a citation from the Award Committee which stated in part that he was being named a St. Louis Award honoree:

"For energetic and creative leadership in the service of the St. Louis Public Schools ... more specifically, for organizing a program which raised sufficient funds to keep alive the athletic programs ... and, then, for analyzing the needs of the entire school system with care and precision... for bringing to the attention of the community these needs and highlighting the importance of the public schools to the vitality and success of the entire region ... for recruiting volunteers from the businesses of Greater St. Louis to work with and to advise the school system in its management and financial practices ... for spearheading the successful school tax referendum which provided for the rate necessary to keep the schools strong and vigorous."

Wentz called attention to Knight's effort to save the St. Louis Public School's varsity athletics program when it appeared it would have to be dropped because of insufficient funds to support it.

When Knight heard of the situation, Wentz recalled, "He immediately took positive steps to find the solution. The solution was," Wentz explained, "to rally the business community behind a Save Our Sports Program for the St. Louis Public Schools. His dynamic leadership, along with numerous colleagues, produced a successful drive that kept varsity athletics in operationduring the 1975-76 school year."

Wentz also paid tribute to Knight's successful endeavor to initiate and develop additional aid for the St. Louis school system in cooperation with other businessmen in the Greater St. Louis area.

"Out of this effort," Wentz emphasized, "was created a Management Assistance Program (MAP) that provided loaned executives from the business community to work hand in hand with the school staff and board of education in mapping out new operational procedures and overall improved services for the school system.

"It also encouraged dynamic support in the most recent successful tax campaign and set positive goals for the future of the public schools, and therefore, the future of the entire St. Louis area."

Oldest drummer has beat that goes on

Cassidy is a drummer who broke into the music business in 1938 and now bills himself as the world's oldest keeper of the rock beat.

"I'm the world's oldest rock 'n' roll drummer, as far as I know," he says. "It's sort of neat. I'm like living proof to young people that they can look forward to being in the business as long as they want, if they present themselves properly."

Cassidy plays for Spirit — a group that has followed a rock 'n' roller coaster path of ups and downs since Cassidy helped form it a decade ago.

The band now is trying to stage a comeback on the strength of its latest album, "Farther Along," a typically diverse work in which four of the five original members play together for the first time since a 1971 split.

It's the group's eighth album and, according to some critics, not its best. The old man of the skins bristles at the criticism.

"It's a worthy piece of music — it stands up for itself," Cassidy said. "We are human beings affected by everything around us just like you are. What we record is dictated by the times and where we are at the time."

Where the drummer is at right now is rock. It wasn't always that way.

"I started out in 1938 playing country-western music," Cassidy said. "Then it was polka, and then Dixieland and then the early forms of jazz. Later it evolved into the big band jazz sound.

"That's when I joined a band in the early 40s that traveled by bus through 17 states in the Midwest. It was great."

It wasn't until the mid-1960s that Cassidy turned from jazz to rock.

"I didn't like early rock," said Cassidy, who has shaved his head since 1959. "It was really a primitive type of thing."

But when Bob Dylan and the Rolling Stones came along, a friend persuaded Cassidy to sample his first morsel of rock 'n' roll drumming. Now he swears by the stuff.

"Rock 'n' roll is the greatest thing that's happened to this country, musically. It allows for integration of all forms — rock, jazz, Broadway, opera, folk. It opened up a whole new era."

How long will Ed Cassidy continue to romp in this new era?

"I have a lot of other interests — television, photography, music history — but I like doing music and will continue as long as I am still getting something out of it myself and giving the audience something in return," he said. "I want to play but I don't want it to be a chore."

Coconut jellybeans

Lawyers turns into jellybean entrepreneur

Yes, says Dave Klein, a 30-year-old lawyer turned jellybean entrepreneur. Of course, he also says the same thing about his tangerine, root beer, green apple and cotton candy jellybeans.

"Jellybeans have been around for a long time, but no one's ever done anything with them — this is a breakthrough," says Klein, who sells his "gourmet jellybeans" under the name "Jelly Bellies."

At $2 a poknd Jelly Bellies are the world's most expensive jellybeans, according to Klein, who claims to have researched their history extensively. There are 417 to the poknd, give or take a bean, and each has four calories.

Klein is marketing Jelly Bellies to department and food stores and is offering franchises in theaters and ice cream parlors. A pilot franchise in an Alhambra ice cream parlor has been quite successful, according to store owner Bob Fosselman.

"They really seem to have caught on," sayd Fosselman, who has been in the ice cream business for 35 years. "The concept catches people's imaginations. Originally, it was sales to kids, but now they've developed party business — showers, weddings and so on."

In addition to the above flavors, Jelly Bellies come in ordinary strains like lemon, lime, cherry and grape. For the more adventurous, there are licorice, cream soda and country melon jellybeans.

Klein, who developed the flavors with the aid of a food chemist, originally had concocted a watermelon Jelly Belly. However, he couldn't decide whether to color it red or green — two-tone jellybeans present technical problems — so he picked green and named the flavor country melon.

Klein went to law school after working his way through UCLA selling "Big Dave's Popcorn" but decided against practicing law.

"I have friends who are lawyers who get sick in the morning when they have to go to court," says Klein, who felt the pressures of the legal field might be a bit much. His second choice — the wholesale nut business — led him into supplying cookie makers and other food manufacturers with cashews, raisins and other ingredients. His dealings with candy makers got him to thinking about the neglected jellybean, he says, with the idea for Jelly Bellies coming to him one night in his sleep.

Klein is currently working on new flavors — there are 14 now — and planning his next creation — a 10-pound Jelly Belly, possibly with a pumpkin flavor. For Thanksgiving of course.

Jose Iturbi was ready.

The Spanish-born pianist lowered his arm and sprang into the allegro of Mozart's "Piano Concerto in D Minor" with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

It is not unusual for a musician to both play and conduct. But it is special when the musician is 80 years old and is conducting and playing three concertos in one program. A stamina and agility even some younger artists lack are required. Iturbi doesn't think it's difficult.

"It's something I can't explain," he said later. "I was playing a solo, sustained a chord and then cut off myself. So it's somebody else who plays — it's a dual personality."

He is a small, slightly pudgy man with silver hair and a quiet manner. His face flushed slightly as he led the Philadelphia Orchestra through Mozart, Mendelssohn, de Falla and his own composition, "Seguidillas."

Iturbi seemed unaware of his surroundings as he worked through intricate fingering patterns, sweeping the keyboard with a feathery touch. Through it all, he confessed the following day, he was plagued with one feeling: nervousness.

After performing in more than 6,000 concerts all over the world, Jose Iturbi still gets butterflies.

"Before, during and a little bit after a performance," he said with a slight chuckle.

"Why? Well if you start to think of all the possibilities of what can go wrong — you cannot come back and correct it," he said, as a serious line managed to dart across his otherwise smooth forehead.

"Technically, theoretically, we should have impeccability in a performance. But not in one performance have I gone out on stage and returned and said: 'Ah, it was good.' Never."

After the concert, Iturbi went to a private reception and returned to his hotel suite about 2 a.m. The aging virtuoso practiced until 5 a.m. on the piano.

"We have a certain sap in us," he said. "It is cultivated and developed into a strict discipline. Maybe in a year, I might miss two or three days of practice."

Since the age of 14 when he first conducted in his native Spain, he has led the irregular life of the concert artist.

Once the frenetic pace had little effect on him — he says he could spend a few weeks with sleepless nights, touring and performing. Now, he must take short, afternoon naps.

But the pianist has not succumbed to fatigue. So far this year, he said he has given more than 200 concerts all over the world.

Ben Franklin, pioneer American printer and journalist, not only had a nose for news but also a musical ear for news. As a boy he peddled on the street printed copies of a ballad he wrote chronicling America's earliest tragedy, the drowning of the keeper of the Boston light and five companions in 1718, The World Almanac reports.

CB radios keep Alaska pipeline workers company near Artic Circle

ATIGUN PASS, Alaska (A) — You start up the 4,800-foot pass in the care of "The Heartbreaker," who turns you over to "The Pass Watcher." Once over the top you are in the hands of "The Happy Pappy."

All three of them drive road graders on the trans-Alaska pipeline haul road. And their rigs are equipped with CB radios, which are much more than a device for "hollering" at friends when you are this far north of the Arctic Circle.

They can make the difference between life and death.

The 359-mile road north of the Yukon River is kept open all year to get supplies to the pipeline construction camps. Roughly 80 per cent of the road lies north of the Arctic Circle, and winter temperatures 60 below zero are common.

"The one and only, world famous Thunderbug" drives this two-lane dirt road like there was no tomorrow as he roars "home to mama." As he stands in front of the shiny Rolls Royce-like grill of his 18-wheeler he looks tough enough to handle most obstacles.

Paul Konig, "the Thunderbug," boasts of going over Atigun Pass "barefoot" (without chains). As he is talking, this reporter's own four-wheel drive wagon is sliding all over the icy highway.

But the Anchorage trucker says, "I won't go up this road without my CB."

His buddy, Marty DeWitt of Fairbanks, or "Tiny Tim," tells a story about hauling a pipeline load on the stretch of state-maintained road south of the Yukon. He was headed up a hill when his rig tumbled over a cliff.

He broke a rib but his radio still worked, and he heard a friend who was traveling ahead of him ask: "Did you make it over the hill?"

"I told him: 'Yeah, but not the right way.'"

Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., the consortium of oil companies building the pipeline, maintains the road north of the Yukon.

The truckers, like their "good buddies" down south, monitor channel 19. But they also can use channel 11 to talk with the 12 pipeline camps along the route.

Each camp has a radio operator handling the commercial band frequency used by Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., as well as monitoring channel 11.

The drivers are never more than 25 miles from a camp, so most of the time they are within the trasmission range of CB radios. And if a trucker can't reach the nearest camp, there's usually another trucker closer who can relay a message.

Many Alyeska construction trucks have CB radios and can relay messages to camps via their more powerful company commercial-band radios.

The radio operator in Old Man camp said that hardly a day passes that he doesn't get a request for some kind of assistance, usually from a disabled vehicle.

As we talked with Old Man on channel 19, we passed two wrecked trucks. One was a tanker lying almost upside down but neat-as-you-please on the narrow strip between the road and the forest. There were no injuries in either accident.

Truckers also can call to the radio operators, like "The Winemaker" in Dietrich Camp, to reserve a room for the night. The drivers are allowed to spend the night in the camps and eat in the cafeterias free.

The truckers occasionally get road information from the camps, more often from each other. And there are road condition signs occasionally.

One thing truckers don't need to worry about are bears of the four-wheel variety. Bears — of the four-legged variety — and wolves are seen frequently along the road.

The radios also are crucial to break the loneliness. The truckers, many riding without partners, use them to pass the time. More than one we heard a static-filled and faint plea: "Breaker 19, is there anybody on this here haul road today?"

That goes for the workers, like Ron Lukken of Puyallup, Wash., too. He spends 12 to 16 hours daily miles from the camp, smoothing the road with his grader.

During the winter months there are nights "when you're lucky if one truck passes." And the only person Lukken — "The Heartbreaker" — sees is the foreman who brings him his lunch. His day is made when drivers tell him he's "doing a great job."

Farm Roundup

Hog producers are in financial bind

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government indicator shows that hog producers are in the severest financial bind in a year and a half, and experts say there is not much sign that things will improve soon.

By Oct. 15, according to the Agriculture Department, the hog-corn ratio of prices dropped to 14.1, the lowest since April of last year. The figure expresses in bushels the amount of corn equal in value to 100 pounds of live hog sold by farmers.

The ratio increased sharply after hog prices rose and feed costs moderated during the summer and fall of 1975, averaging a peak of 21.2 in October. Monthly ratio figures were even higher at times in 1972 and 1973, averaging 20.6 and 19.3 for those entire years, respectively.

In 1974, however, high feed costs helped depress the ratio to an annual average of 11.3 bushels of corn equal to 100 pounds of live hog.The rate for all of 1975 averaged 16.9 bushels.

The decline to 14.1 in October included a sharp decline in hog market prices. Those averaged $32.90 per 100 pounds on Oct. 15, down 17 per cent from $39.70 the previous month, according to USDA. Compared with a year earlier, the Oct. 15 hog price average was down more than 40 per cent from $58.30 per hundredweight.

Corn prices declined last month, too, but not so rapidly as the hog market. At an average farm price nationally of $2.33 a bushel, corn was down from $2.60 on Sept. 15 and $2.62 a year ago.

A major reason for the slide is that farmers have stepped up hog production significantly and apparently will continue the momentum well in to 1977.

In September, pork production by the nation's federally inspected meat plants totaled nearly 1.1 billion pounds, a 20 per cent gain from the same month in 1975 but still 4 per cent less than in September 1974.

Department experts say while lower prices and relatively high feed costs have taken some of the edge off farmers' plans for expanding hog output there will be "significantly larger" pork slaughter through mid-1977, perhaps 17 to 19 per cent larger than during the first half of this year.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Butter production dropped seasonally from August to September to about 63.4 million pounds but exceeded output a year ago by 10 per cent, according to the Agriculture Department.

Cheese production also declined, down 6 per cent from August to about 157 million pounds. However, September output was up 25 per cent from a year earlier.

Output of nonfat dry milk for human food totaled 61.2 million pounds in September, down 19 per cent from August but 22 per cent more than in September of last year.

On June 27, 1844, a mob killed Mormon leader Joseph Smith and his brother Hyrum in Carthage, Ill.

Dogs win first crown in eight years

By DALE FORBIS

Daily Standard Sportswriter

It was an unlikely night for anything so profound as a rebirth. Rain and wind marred Public Schools Stadium on that Friday in September of 1975 as Sikeston's Bulldogs won only their third ballgame in three years, against 18 losses. Since then the Bulldogs have won 15 of 17 and, most important, the 1976 Northern Division title.

"These guys are something else," testified Terry Smith after the Sikeston Bulldogs won their first conference title in eight years by beating Poplar Bluff 14-7. It was yet another come-from-behind win for the undefeated Dogs. They used their strength and conditioning to defeat an outstanding young team from the Bluff City.

Actually, all Smith did was open a door. More or less.

"The door was always open to the weight room and there was always a nucleus of a couple dozen in here working out all summer."

Sikeston's outstanding physical strength, developed during the sweltering mid-summer workouts, enabled them to wipe out an early deficit by scoring two third period touchdowns. It was the fifth time in ten straight wins that the thrill-a-minute Dogs were able to do it this season. It probably earned them a berth in the Missouri State Playoffs next week.

Sikeston began the game with a lackluster first period, falling behind on Poplar Bluff's first possession. The Mules took the opening kickoff and embarked on an awesome, time-consuming 14-play drive to cover 82 yards for the first score. Seven minutes and 53 seconds after the kickoff quarterback Jim Bidewell put the Mules on the board when he dove into the endzone from the two. Paul Roberts' perfect placement gave the Mules a seven-point edge.

"We were probably a little bit cold and not quite ready," explianed Sikeston's coach about his team's grudging ground surrender.

A NEW RUSHING RECORD

Sikeston fans had little to make them happy that they had braved the cold during the first period.

"Ball control will be the key," Poplar Bluff coach Tom Telle had predicted before the contest, and the Mule headman had to be satisfied with his squad's performance in the first frame. Sikeston had the ball for a total of one minute and the conference's leading rusher, James Wilder, never carried the ball.

Wilder made up for the oversight early in the second quarter. A 46-yard burst that almost reached paydirt enabled the senior runner to erase a 16-year old school rushing record. In 1960 Norman Dockins ran for 1095 yards and Wilder had entered the contest with 1069.

"I'll have to say that James is the best back I have ever coached," said Smith after Wilder's 223-yard night.

Wilder waded through Mule defenders to a score on the very next play, but the 22-yard burst was nullified by a holding penalty. Three consecutive penalties against Sikeston forced them into a punting situation on fourth-and-31.

CORNER'S THE KEY

After that confidence-shaking first drive by the visitors the Bulldog "D" regrouped and took over the momentum for the home team. Bulldog defensive backs and ends shut off Poplar Bluff's outside running game and held the Mules in check most of the rest of the way.

Backs John Holloway and Garry Griffin kept the Mules' passing game in limbo, combining for three heists. Holloway, continuing his outstanding play, picked off a pair. Griffin's interception was a circus, over the shoulder catch.

Monsterman Will Kaiser was also outstanding, as the Bulldogs played their most consistent defense during the last three quarters, against their strongest opponent this year.

HALFTIME MAGIC

Whatever Coach Smith has been using on his troops at halftime this year ought to be bottled. Football coaches everywhere would buy it by the gallon.

After a sporadic offensive first half, the Bulldogs scored on their first series of the second half. A first-and-15 play out of shotgun formation gained 11 on a trick snap to Paul Bean. Then the Bulldogs made the perfect call...a simple handoff to James Wilder out of the conventional "I" formation. The conventional play went 74

The body was taken to Bradshaw Funeral Home in Malden.

Easton gets 5 years

NEW MADRID--Matthew Easton Jr. of Charleston was sentenced Friday to a five-year term in custody of the Department of Corrections after pleading guilty to an amended charge of manslaughter before Judge William L. Ragland in New Madrid County Circuit Court.

The case had been transferred to New Madrid County on a change of venue from Mississippi County where Easton had been charged with second degree murder in the shooting death of Maymie Pauline Adams.

The shooting occurred about 12:40 p.m. on April 19 in the couple's apartment at 311 Oliver St. in Charleston where the woman died of a single bullet wound inflicted in the right side by a .22 caliber pistol.

UF goal $14,000

CHARLESTON--A goal of $14,000 has been set for this year's United Fund drive, according to Gordon Griffin, publicity chairman, who said Tuesday has been set as the date for the countywide drive.

Eight organizations have been designated to receive benefits from the drive, including: Mississippi County Association for Retarded Children, Girl Scouts, Red Cross, United Service Organization, Community Sheltered Workshop, Boy Scouts, Eastern Missouri chapter of the Arthritis Foundation and the Little Acorn Youth Camp.

Griffin said workers in the drive may turn in their money Tuesday at the Charleston Chamber of Commerce office. After Tuesday workers may bring their contributions to Eastman Decorating Center.

Last year's drive netted $12,800.

Serving as chairman of this year's UF board is Jackie Whiteside. Other officers and board members include: Martha Moody, secretary-treasurer, and Griffin, W.D. Purnell, Kenneth Heath, Duane Eastman, Sue Ellen Fenton, Leo Schott, Myrene Moss, Lucian Black and Mrs. Paul Rollins.

Student is killed in war game

LINDENHURST, N.Y. (AP) — A college junior was stabbed in the chest and killed while playing the role of a prisoner of war in an ROTC honor fraternity hazing and training program, police said.

Suffolk County Police said a fraternity member stabbed Thomas Fitzgerald, 19, in the chest early Saturday morning with an unsheathed weapon — identified variously as a bayonet and a hunting knife.

The weapon cut through a wooden placard that was hanging from his neck, officers said. The placard read, "prisoner of war."

James Savino, 21, a cadet first lieutenant, was arrested and charged with second-degree murder. He was playing the part of a Soviet inquisitor trying to get "secret" information from Fitzgerald, who reportedly was seeking membership in the fraternity known as the Pershing Rifles.

Savino wore an Army-type unifom during his arraignment Saturday. He he marched to the bench and snapped to attention.

His attorney, Harold Borg, said, "There's no doubt the death was accidental."

Outside the courtroom, Borg added a denial that the killing occurred during a fraternity hazing. "It could have been a regular ROTC training exercise," he said.

Police said the death occurred during what they called a training and hazing program on Indian Island off the south shore of Long Island and involved 12 to 14 pledges.

"It was a terrible tragedy," said Margin Healy, spokesman for St. John's University in Queens, where the ROTC unit is located. "They were two very good young men. Savino is a three-year scholarship student."

The ROTC is an Army program, the Reserve Officers Training Proorm, etor cnon-miltary colleges.

Fitzgerald, youngest of 10 children, was a student at Queens College and Savino goes to Stevens Institute in Hoboken, N.J. Both had joined the ROTC at St. John's because their own schools have no ROTC programs.

Healy said the exercise "was not an activity sponsored by the ROTC. It was not supervised. The boys had just come back from four days of sponsored training at Fort Dix in New Jersey and got together for more training in role-playing."

He said the ROTC did not permit the use of unsheathed weapons in such exercises and does not issue bayonets.

Lt. Col. James Rafferty, ROTC commander and a professor of military science, said he was unaware of the fraternity's activities on the island until notifed by the college Saturday.

He said the ROTC would conduct a full investigation of the incident.

According to his sister, Noreen Reiser, Fitzgerald was a junior at Queens College, part of the City University of New York. He worked at the school library to help pay for his education.

"He wanted to go to law school and my widowed mother did not have the money to send him," she said. "He joined the ROTC because he thought that under the Army program he could get some sort of scholarship. He was very, very smart."

A spokesman for St. John's University had no immediate statement on the death but said he was trying to reach the colonel in charge of the ROTC unit for comment. He described the Pershing Rifles as a military professional fraternity.

The spokesman said he did not know whether the fraternity outing was organized by the ROTC unit or not. "Sometimes the guys get together and just do things," he said.

Police said Fitzgerald, a slender 6-feet-2, was with the other Pershing Rifles pledges when the training and hazing program began at 11:20 p.m. on the island in Great South Bay.

Police said the uninhabited island, about 50 acres in size, is accessible only by water. It was believed the fraternity used a rubber raft to get to the island, located just off shore.

"The hazing took the form of role playing whereby 12 to 14 pledges were prisoners of war and the fraternity members were the inquisitors," police said in a statement.

"During the questioning of the pledge, Thomas Fitzgerald, playing the role of prisoner of war, Fitzgerald was stabbed in the chest by fraternity member James Savino playing the role of a Soviet interrogator," they said.

The bayonet, which was not affixed to a rifle, was later recovered at the scene.

Dear Editor:

Another election with all the related campaign activities has come and gone. The ones of us that were very actively involved are breathing a bit more relaxed and finding time for reflecting on the past several weeks and months. Utmost in my thoughts is the idea that we are a very privileged electorate to have such a freedom for choice and if we so choose to become intensely involved in the political contest there is no restriction on our activity. (All a person needs is a desire, the interest and a willingness to give of his time and energies. Money is necessary but that is easier to recruit than people's time.)

Yes, as I've just stated I feel very fortunate but there are some specific public thanks that I wish to take this opportunity to express. First, the fairness of this newspaper in their cooperation of giving complete and excellent news coverage to our candidates and our local party activities. I would be the first to defend my feelings when others might criticize the paper for partisan reporting. Secondly, I wish to extend my sincere appreciation to Bob Kielhofner, Scott County Clerk, for his full cooperation. Bob strives very hard I believe to conduct his duties as a county official in an honest and sincere effort to serve all citizens equally well, Republicans and Democrats. Third and finally, thanks to our city administration for enforcing a city ordinance concerning election advertising. I do not feel that the Scott County Republican Committee was being deliberately 'nit picking' about signs on public property or questionable polling place activities because hopefully if we were out of order the Democrats would have called our hand.

In conclusion, I really believe the democratic principles work best when most of the people are involved with decision making. The political party system is the system we are geared to use in this country. Competition is healthy in business and I believe it is just as healthy in politics. So whether or not we call ourselves Republicans or Democrrats, Liberals or Conservatives, the system works best with checks and balances. Each party I believe will better serve its members and their philosophy if the other one (or more) is visible and viable. This theory of mine is not a belief that we only must keep each other honest, but that when we offer people a choice they tend to think and consider more seriously what they really believe is best and work toward that end. The ticket splitting behavior in this election appears to me to indicate people are considering the individual more and the party less. But with our party system it is absolutely necessary that some of us must support our chosen party to be able to offer a slate of candidates. And here I would like to express my deep appreciation and thanks for so very much support by a great many dedicated Republicans that came forth to be counted this election year. Both parties have secured for themselves some very important state offices and we certainly are pleased. I served as Scott County coordinator for John Ashcroft and became very interested specifically with Bill Phelps' campaign and on behalf of both men I wish to express their thanks and appreciation for the support they each received in this reading audience.

Sincerely
Mary Doggett, Chairman

Survey group says things not as good as they used to be

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

"They just don't make things the way they used to!"

Sound familiar? Well, you're not alone. A new survey shows that many Americans believe most products and services are not as good as they were five or 10 years ago.

The study was made by R.H. Bruskin Associates, a market research firm, which asked a nationwide sample of 2,500 adults whether 15 items were better, worse or the same as they were in the past.

Only three items — airline service, newspapers and telephone service — came out as winners. The percentage of people who thought these items had improved was greater than those who thought the quality had decreased.

Twenty-six per cent of those questioned said telephone service was better today than it was in the past; 25 per cent said it was worse; 47 per cent said it was about the same; and 2 per cent had no opinion.

For airline service, the figures were: better, 26 per cent; worse, 10 per cent; unchanged, 40 per cent; and no opinion, 24 per cent. For newspapers, the figures were: better, 21 per cent; worse, 17 per cent; unchanged, 59 per cent; and no opinion, 3 per cent.

New cars and movies drew the worst ratings. Only 10 per cent of those surveyed thought today's new cars were better than those of the past, while 64 per cent thought they were worse. Eighteen per cent thought movies were better; 62 per cent thought they were worse.

Other items included in the survey were popular music, television programs, books, restaurant food, clothing, appliances, mail service, appliance servicing, furniture and automobile repair.

Bond's future undecided

The vacation with his wife, Carolyn, was planned before Tuesday's election, Bond told newsmen in his Capitol office Wednesday, but he obviously had hoped to be returning to another four years in office.

By a narrow 12,500-vote margin, voters dashed that hope, and the young Republican governor promised to work with Teasdale to carry out an orderly transfer of power.

"We came out of this the same way we went in—proud of the record we've established," Bond said. "We leave behind a government with a substantial surplus in budget, efficient management, sound operations and very high standards."

Bond said the most important accomplishment of his administration "is what we've done for state government. We brought honesty and integrity and fiscal responsibility and efficient management."

Asked about his plans, the 37-year-old Bond replied, "When you have a picture broken in a thousand pieces it's difficult to say the next morning what that picture is going to look like when you put the pieces back together.

"I intend to put it back together and I can't tell you precisely what it'll look like right now."

Would he stay in politics?, reporters asked.

"I don't know what I'm going to do...I have to earn a living," he said. "I intend to be active in the community. I hope sometime I'll have another opportunity to make a contribution. Right now I don't know what that will be...I'll have to look around because I hadn't planned on this."

Bond said he didn't know whether the momentum of Jimmy Carter carried Teasdale into office.

Asked if it is easier for a challenger to attack an incumbent, he replied, "Obviously we're in a different position running as an incumbent."

But he rejected any assertion that his campaign four years ago was similar to Teasdale's this year.

"No, I think the campaigns were different," Bond said. "We set out positive programs in 1972, and we set out positive programs in 1976."

One analysis of Bond's defeat, by St. Louis Globe-Democrat political editor Jack Flach, quoted leaders of both parties as saying Bond was his worst enemy.

While trying to play the role of a knight in shining armor, Flach wrote, Bond neglected his own party and failed to build any kind of organization and also failed to become the party's leader to make the organization solid.

The Bond campaign also apparently failed to grasp the late surge by Teasdale, as reflected in state polls, Flach said in his analysis, and the governor slipped by not effectively countering many campaign charges by Teasdale.

Democratic state chairman John McIlroy of Bowling Green said he didn't believe Teasdale's victory was an anti-Bond vote. Rather, he said, Teasdale could relate to the "common man" and Bond could not.

According to another Democratic leader, St. Louis city chairman Paul M. Berra, "I believe Teasdale won because he was carried in on the coattails of two of the propositions on the ballot—the food and drug exemption amendment and the one to disallow utilities from charging future constrction costs on customers' bills."

These two brought voters out and they liked what Teasdale had to say about taxes and the high cost of utilities, Berra noted.

McIlroy said Democrats were aware that Bond didn't want to relate to "Republican regulars" but pointed out Bond has always boasted he could win with independents and Democrats.

"He found things different this time," McIlroy said.

Bond, in response to newsmen's questions Wednesday on whether he would leave the state for a job, said, "No matter what I do, Missouri will always be my home, and I clearly have not made any plan for any jobs, any careers, any moves."

Asked for her comments, Mrs. Bond, who briefly seemed close to tears, said "We're proud what's been accomplished.

"I think it's too bad that four years ago experience was important—a lot of people questioned Kit's lack of experience."

Sonar spots fuzzy 'Loch Ness'

BOSTON (AP) — Scientists report that a sonar search for the legendary Loch Ness monster has turned up a fuzzy outline of an object on the bottom of the deep Scottish lake which resembles a prehistoric dinosaur.

But Martin Klein, head sonar expert of this past summer's expedition to the loch sponsored by the New York Times and the Academy of Applied Science in Boston, is cautious about his discovery.

Klein said in a telephone interview from Salem, N.H., where his sonar manufacturing firm, Klein Associates is located, "It certainly bears further investigation."

A carcass would establish Nessie's existence almost as well as a live specimen, but no one has ever found one.

Nearby is what EDN said Klein described as "an unusual shape with a long neck-like projection and what could possibly be flippers" about 30 feet long.

EDN said the object was at 330 feet, too deep for a dive, but in his telephone interview Klein said the magazine was mistaken and it was 150 feet.

Klein provided another picture of a scan of what the sonar crew dubbed "The Average Plesiosaur," after the prehistoric animal that has been one candidate for the identity of the legendary monster. It also was about 30 feet long.

In the draft of an article for Technology Review, the alumni publication of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Klein wrote of that scan, "As is often the situation in our type of work, we made one of our most intriguing finds just as we were about to wind up our survey."

$180,163 disbursed by SCFS

The Scott County Family Service Office disbursed funds totaling $180,163 in October, with the greatest part being paid to the Aid to Dependent Children Program.

Breman L. Montgomery, county director, reports there were 827 persons receiving a total of $36,248 in State Supplemental payments and are on the combined payroll of Missouri State Supplemental Income and the federal program Supplemental Security Income. This group previously received Old Age Assistance, Permanent and Total Disability or Aid to the Blind assistance.

There were 1,022 families with 2,313 children who received a total of $133,154 in the Aid to Dependent Children category, averaging $130.29 per family.

Twenty four persons received a total of $4,775 in Nursing Care Supplement payments during the month of October.

General Relief funds of $5851 went to 74 families consisting of 91 personswith a family check averaging $79.07 per family.

One person received $135 Blind Pension.

Child Welfare Services were provided for 158 children and 73 children were given preventive services. There was $2,604.78 expended from the County Court payroll and Aid to Dependent Children-Foster Care payroll for 34 children in Foster Care.

Thirty seven adults were given services during the month of October. Nine adults were given protective services and 28 were given preventive services.

Court may ask for grants

BENTON--Grants allowing up to $3,500 per unit for upgrading of substandard dwellings in Illmo, Scott City, Benton and Chaffee, likely will be applied for through the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

At a Thursday night meeting with representatives of the communities and the County Court here, John C. Campbell, community development specialist with the Missouri Municipal League in Jefferson City, and Tanna Parish of Charleston, executive director for the Charleston Land Clearance for Redevelopment Authority, explained the program.

The funding plan, of up to $400,000, is financed 100 per cent through HUD. Parish said a Bootheel study showed the communities at the meeting have the greatetst amount of substandard housing and would better benefit from the program than scattering funding over all of Scott County.

He said Charleston gets about $1 million annually for various civic improvements through HUD. Although the home improvement program is an outright gift in terms of money, it is not paid directly to homeowners, but to contractors upon completion of improvement work.

Campbell noted the grant also keeps money circulating in a community while improving properties at the same time.

City officials present indicated an interest in the program; actual grant application, however, will be made by the County Court.

Repairs included in the improvement plan would be roofing, wiring, plumbing and the like.

GO TO CHURCH SUNDAY

Witless wisdoms

By CHARLES E. RICHARDS

Election Double takes:

Soon we will learn whether we are to have a people's President or just another White House resident.

Our Ford almost made it back up to the top of the 'Hill', but apparently not enough people wanted to get behind and push.

The South always said that it "would rise again".

There never seems to be anything doing over at the Capitol, but at the White House it seems as if someone is always either going or coming.

Now that we are assured of full employment, lowered taxes, less inflation, no detente, and a balanced budget, all we have left to be concerned about are these stupid T.V. commercials.

Granted that Mr. Carter will put those persons now unemployed back to work, one wonders where he will find employment for Mr. Ford and Kissinger after next January???

And the pollsters, Gallup and Harris??? Perhaps, pending the next election, they can be put to work checking our preference between a fireside chat and a press conference??

As for us, we welcome a new personality to pick on.

By STAN HILL

Chaffee won the Southern Division Conference championship outright Friday night in a head-to-head battle with the Caruthersville Tigers. Chaffee used the strong right arm of sophomore quarterback Randy Horrell, who threw three touchdowns passes, to overcome the Tigers 18-12.

Illmo-Scott City, tied with Chaffee and Caruthersville going into Friday nights action, was upset by an injury riddled Portageville squad, 9-7.

Elsewhere, East Prairie lost to Malden 14-7 and Hayti took it on the chin from Doniphan 32-14.

DEVILS SURPRISE BENGALS

The Chaffee Red Devils played inspired football Friday evening as they built up a 12-0 halftime lead, lost it in the second half, and scored in last two minutes of action to take the conference title and the game from Caruthersville.

Chaffee got on the scoreboard in the first quarter as quarterback Randy Horrell hit Donnie Kiefer with a 13 yard scoring strike. The extra point attempt was no good and after the opening stanza, the Red Devils leled 6-0.

The second quarter saw almost an instant replay of the first as again quarterback Randy Horrell hit Donnie Kiefer with yet another 13 yard scoring pass. The extra point was again no good and at the intermission, Chaffee enjoyed a 12-0 lead.

The third period of action saw Caruthersville come roaring back, mainly on the strength of its special teams play. The Tigers blocked a Chaffee punt and Mike Webster fell on it in the endzone to put Caruthersville on the scoreboard. After the third quarter, the host Tigers were still trailing the Red Devils, 12-6.

Caruthersville continued its comeback in the final quarter as with only 7:30 remaining in the contest, Scott Tarpley caught a 48 yard bomb from quarterback Wendell McGill, knotting the score at 12-12. The Tigers missed the opportunity to take the lead as the PAT was no good.

The final score of the game came with only 1:35 left on the clock and with Chaffee at the Caruthersville 34 yard line. From there, Randy Horrell launched the conference winning aerial as Doug Hester caught it in the endzone to give the Red Devils a thrilling win.

Chaffee is the smallest school enrollment wise in the Southern Conference with an enrollment of approximately 250. However the Red Devils played like a school much larger all year long as they finished their year 8-2 and an outside chance of participating in the state playoffs.

RAMS ELIMINATED

The Illmo-Scott City Rams lost Friaday night to Portageville, knocking the Rams out of a share of the conference championship with Chaffee.

Again, special team play had an important part in the outcome of the game. Portageville scored first in the contest as Stan Ivie kicked a 27 yard field goal in the second period. However, this lead did not stand up long. The Rams came right back before halftime and scored as quarterback Gary Springs threw his ninth touchdown pass in his last three games. This one was to Charlie Miller and it covered 43 yards. Wesley Foster added the extra point and Scott City went into the locker room at halftime with a a 7-3 lead.

The third period was scoreless as the defenses took over until the last quarter. Then in the fourth period, the special teams again performed well for the host Bulldogs as Lee Charles Wright returned a Ram punt 85 yards for the winning touchdown.

Illmo-Scott City drove to the Portageville nine yard line and with only five seconds left, Wesley Foster tried a 26 yard field goal. The boot was no good, leaving Scott City in a tie for second place.

DONS WIN SECOND

Doniphan won its second game of the year as they rolled over the Hayti Indians, using a varied offensive attack.

Gary Pennington started the scoring in the initial period as he scored from one yard out to put the Dons up 8-0, as he also ran in the two point conversion.

The second qurter saw Hayti block a Donipahan punt and fall on it in the endzone. The try for two failed and this was the closest Hayti got the rest of the night. Doniphan opened up the airways at this point as Bruce Hunt hit Brian Ball with a 19 yard touchdown strike. Hunt ran in the two point conversion to make the score, 14-6. Later, in the same period., Hunt passed to Jerry Guilliams for a 30 yard bomb and then he ran over the two point conversion to make the score 24-6 at halftime.

In the third quarter, Gary Pennington again scored for Doniphan, on a three yard run. Bruce Hunt scored the two point conversion. Hayti closed out the scoring as Dalton ran 40 yards and with the two point conversion, the final score was 32-14 in favor of Doniphan.

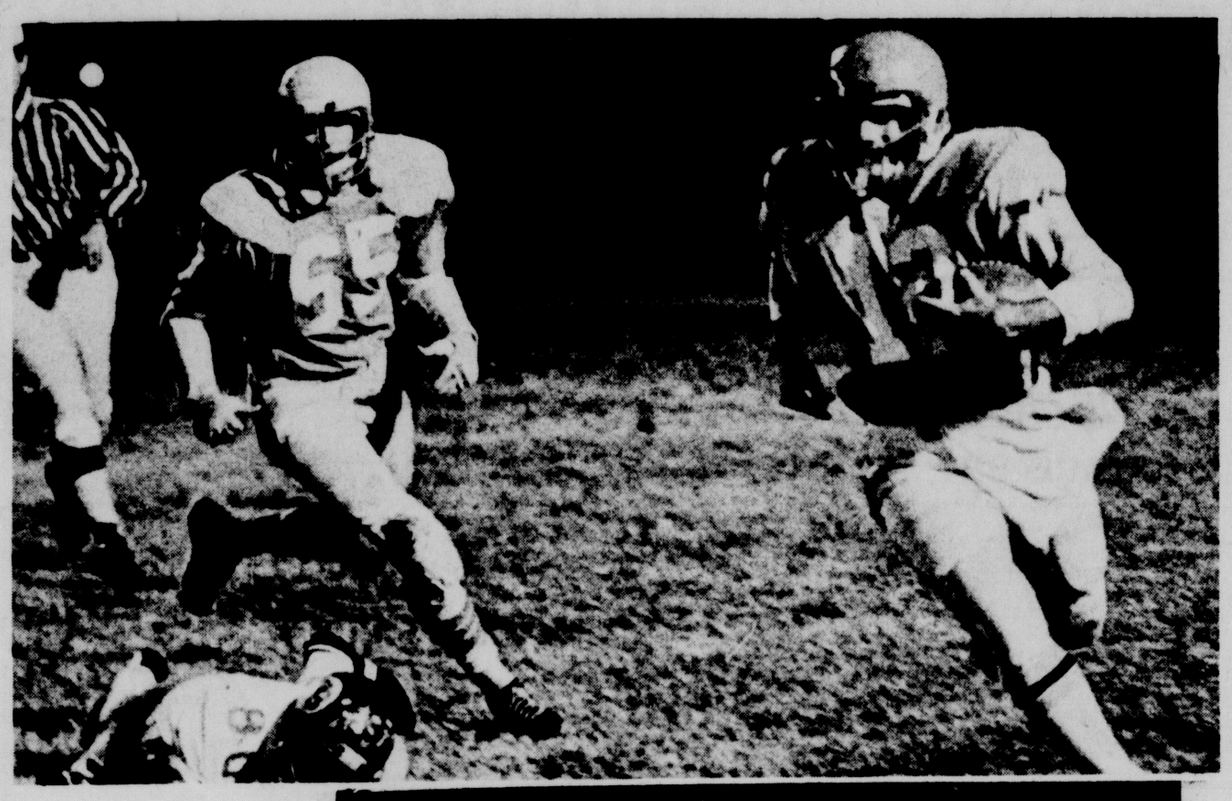
JOHNSON PASSES 2,000 YARD MARK

East Prairie's workhorse, Danny Johnson, gained 177 yards on 35 carries but to no avail as his team was beaten beaten by a late game pass from quarterback Robert Morehead to Ron Hardy to give the Malden Greenwave a victory.

Robert Morehead of Malden scored the only points in the frirst half as he ran over from four yards out to give the Greenwave a 6-0 halftime lead.

The second half found Mr. Johnson, who passed the 200-yard mark in rushing, scoring the only TD for the Eagles as he raced over from the 31 yard line, and when Terry Wheatley kicked the extra point, East Prairie went ahead 7-6 to set up the late game heroics by Malden.

With only :14 seconds left in the game, Morehead hit Hardy with a 12 yard scoring pass to give the victory to the Greenwave. On the night, Malden used five pass completions to gain 158 yards through the air as they outgained the Eagles overall 295 to 236 yards.



Bluejays, Pirates and Bearcats claim Northern Division victories

By CHARLIE FRANCIS
Sports Editor

Junior flanker Bobby Clark scored two second-half touchdowns and added a two- point conversion to lift the Charleston Bluejays to a convincing 26-2 victory over the Cape Central Tigers and capping a satisfying 5-5 season.

The Bluejays, whose record stood at 1-4 after the first five games of the season, turned things around in the second half of the campaign under new coach Tom Emory as they won four of five contests, including a 6-0 upset over Jackson. The five Charleston losses were to Brentwood of St. Louis, Flat River Central, Sikeston, Perryville and Poplar Bluff. The strong finish of the Jays assured them of no worse than a fourth-place finish in the tough Northern Division, with a chance for a tie for third if Cape Central defeats Perryville next week.

In other Northern Division games, Perryville upset Jackson 10-7 and Dexter outscored Kennett 42-38.

JAYS DUMP CENTRAL TIGERS

Charleston got a boost from Clark offensive and from the aggressive defensive unit as they completely dominated the second half and ran away from the Bengals.

The Bluejay defense, led by the play of linebackers Lawrence Baugh and Allan Griggs, held Central to a minus-two yards in total offense in the final 24 minutes of play. Baugh, a senior, and Griggs, a junior, combined for 26 tackles as the Jays stymied Rick Sipple and the Tigers.

Central threatened to score in the first period as they marched downfield deep into Bluejay territory before giving the ball up. They were never that close again.

Charleston made their first offensive noise in the second period, as Charles McCauley's five- yard run capped a 70- yard, 11- play drive. The Bluejays led 6- 0 at the half as the run for two failed.

Clark broke the second- half kickoff for an 85- yard touchdown gallop as Charleston started off the third period with a bang. The run for two again failed. But the Jays came right back less than four minutes later as Baugh carried in from the four. Quarterback Clark Quertermous hit Bobby Clark in the end zone for the two- pointer, running the score to 20- 0.

Central got on the board with 4:39 to go in the quarter as Charleston literally "gave" the Tigers two points. Charleston, forced with a punting situation out of their end zone, chose to take an automatic safety and kick off from the 20- yard line rather than punt and give the Tigers good field position and a chance to score six.

In the fourth quarter, the Jays drove 60- yards in only eight plays. Quertermous hit Clark with a 15- yard scoring strike to round out the Charleston scoring.

PIRATES UPSET JACKSON

Perryville got a pair of second- quarter scores, including a 25-yard field goal by kicker Mark Dosenbach, as they won a hard- fought decision over the tough Jackson Indians.

Perryville broke on top with $10\frac{1}{2}$ minutes left in the first half as Dosenbach split the uprights with his field goal. About five minutes later, Kent Wengerter went in from the one to increase the lead, with Dosenbach's placement making it 10- 0 at the half. Perryville threatened to score on another occasion in the second period, but fumbled on the three- yard line.

Jackson's only score came in the third period as Rich Weith rambled in from the 40. Reliable Blaine Adams kicked the extra point.

EXTRA POINTS ARE CRUCIAL FOR CATS

The Dexter Bearcats can thank three two- point conversions for their four- point victory over Kennett in a battle to avoid last place in the Northern Division. Each team scored six touchdowns, but Dexter converted on three of their scores, while Kennett cashed in on only one PAT.

Dexter took the lead early in the game. On their first place from scrimmage, Lance Espey, the Northern Division's leader in passing yardage, teamed with Rick Guilliams on a 55- yard bomb that got the Bearcats on the board. The pass for two failed.

Dexter scored again just nine seconds later as Kennett's Steve Seward fumbled the kickoff. Dexter's David Adams scoopted the ball up and returned it 20 yards for a TD. Espey took the ball in himself for the conversion, making the score 14- 0.

But Kennett came back before the period was through. Mike Austin, who ripped through the porous Dexter defense for over 250 yards, went over from the two to break the ice for the Indians. The run for the conversion was stopped.

In the second quarter, Espey's 10- yard keeper gave the Cats a bit of breathing room, but Austin came right back three minutes later with a 23- yard jaunt that brought the Indians back to within eight. The conversions failed on both tries.

A fumble recovery set up a TD just before the end of the half that brought the Indians within striking distance. David Walker's 13- yard scamper allowed Kennett to cash in on the error, and the score stood at 20- 18 at the half.

Kennett took the lead for the first and only time early in the third period when Austin scored his third touchdown of the game, this time on a 37-yard gallop. The pass for two was no good. But the lead was short-lived, as Espey played long ball again, this time connecting with speedy split end Mike Grubbs for a 54-yard scoring strike. Dexter broke it wide open early in the fourth period as Guilliams broke loose on a 67-yard sprint. Mike Reese carried the ball in for two as Dexter went up 34- 24.

Kennett made a valiant comeback attempt in the fourth period, beginning with Austin's fifth touchdown, a 29-yard romp. Austin then passed to Mark Chatham on the option as Kennett then picked up their only conversion of the evening.

Dexter seemingly put the game out of reach as Guilliams scored on a 16- yard run, with Espey keeping on the conversion. But Kennett came back late in the period, as Joe Bartmess hit Stuart McKeel on a 15-yard pass that brought the Injuns to within four. Dexter was able to kill out the clock, however, and preserve their second victory of the season.

yards for a conventional score and a 7-6 game. The kick was missed.

The Bulldog defense wasn't finished. Three carries by Webb on the next series netted about eight yards and the Mules punted. By now the Sikeston defensive line of Wayne Sumlin, Mark Heeb, Mark Silverthorn, Alfred White and Wayne Turpin owned the line of scrimmage. Webb was getting nothing when he carried the ball and first downs were few and far between. Webb could notch just 35 yards on nine tries during the second half.

Then came Sikeston's only true sustained drive of the game. Using his tandem of backs judiciously, quarterback David Shell drove his squad 67 yards on 11 plays and Paul Bean ripped over from the one. On the try for two senior Will Kaiser raced from the slot position and took the hand off from Shell, stepping into the endzone untouched for a successful conversion and a 14- 7 lead.

TOUGH LINE PLAY

You want to hate a guy that says, "See, I told you." But, SHS line coach Murray Sullivan is a hard guy not to like.

"Those guys are the ones making our running game go," said Sullivan before the game, pointing to his pupils, the big and talented Bulldog offensive line.

The 1975 line at Sikeston was an outstanding one and, as far as can be told, they did only one thing wrong. All but one graduated, forcing Sikeston to play inexperienced personnel this season.

Boy, have they made up for their inexperience!

THE LAST "REGULAR" QUARTER

The final 12 minutes of the regular season had to be frustrating ones for coach Telle and his Mules. When the Bulldog defense wasn't getting him, the officials were. Over a hundred yards in penalties were assessed in the frame and, although 60 of them were against Sikeston, each mark- off against the visitors was a critical one. Add the assessments to a pair of interceptions and you have your first Bulldog squad to win ten games in 21 years. No Bulldog was even alive back in 1955 when SHS was last 10- 0.

Quarterback Jim Bidewell, bothered by the tremendous Bulldog pass rush and the improved defensive coverage by the Bulldog backs, could hit just two of eight fourth quarter passes. The Mule quarterback was hitting near the 57 percent mark coming in.

After the game it was tough to decide whether the Sikeston coach was choked with emotion or simply hoarse from talking, shouting and celebrating about one of his biggest coaching victories.

"A lot of hard work went into this," said Smith. "I've never had an undefeated team before."

Credit must also go to the individual work by the team players, especially the 25 seniors, and the four assistant coaches: Murray Sullivan, Al Holmes, Jim Graham and Tom Horton. It was obvious after the contest that junior high coaches Webb Edwards, George Hale, Mike Foster and Martin Bass as well as several parents and well- wishers were very much a part of the celebration.

"These guys are awfully close," said the coach about his senior- laden squad that was a surprising underdog to the Mules. The summer work together and personal dedication of the individual players certainly paid off. The huge crowd (considering the cool weather) was amply paid for their support.

Sikeston's win should have assured them a berth in this year's state playoffs, starting next week. The M.S.H.S.A.A. won't confirm anyone's involvement in the playoffs until the midpart of next week, but the Sikeston team was leading Division three coming into the big win over a previously unbeaten team from Poplar Bluff.

In all likelihood, the opening round game in the playoffs will be played here in Sikeston, with the opponent probably being St. Louis University High or Horton Watkins of Ladue. St. Louis U. High blanked Christian Brothers College High 23- 0 at Busch Stadium Friday night, while Ladue blitzed Parkway West 34-6 Saturday afternoon. Ladue is ranked number one among big schools in the St. Louis area by a metropolitan newspaper.

"They'll certainly be tough next year," commented one of the Dog assistants about the team that is obviously the conference's best young squad. Poplar Bluff started a junior- dominated squad, but it was a senior that showed the most class...

Lineman Vic Ortega is generally regarded as one of the top linemen on defense and offense in the SeMo Conference After the game the 205- pounder moved over to the Sikeston lockerroom to congratulate his opponents after a hard- fought game. All Bulldog team members had left and Ortega was met with an empty room. It was an incongruous ending to a tough evening for the Mule lineman, but the gesture didn't go unappreciated.

"Hey," said assistant Tom Horton to Ortega. "Thanks for coming in here. We really appreciate it."

It's a good feeling to know you've defeated the best, and Poplar Bluff obviously was the best opponent this year--in class and talent.

Purdue shocks Michigan 16-14

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Scott Dierking rushed for 162 yards and two touchdowns and Rock Supan kicked a 23-yard field goal with just over four minutes remaining Saturday as Purdue stunned top-ranked Michigan 16-14 in Big Ten football.

Purdue dominated play most of the game and led 13-7 until Michigan quarterback Rick Leach hurled a 64-yard TD pass to Jim Smith late in the third quarter to tie the game.

Wood's extra-point kick gave the Wolverines a 14-13 lead, and they appeared headed for their ninth victory of the season when Jerry Zuver's second pass interception halted a Purdue drive at the Michigan 22.

But fullback Rob Lytle fumbled the ball and Purdue recovered at its own 29-yard line to set up the game-winning drive.

It took Purdue 13 plays to move to the Michigan six before Supan booted the winning field goal on fourth down.

Michigan, which gots its earlier touchdown on an eight-yard run by Leach in the first quarter, moved into Purdue territory late in the game. Two long passes to Smith near the goal line were incomplete, however, before Wood's kick failed.

Purdue evened its record at 4-4, including 3-3 in the Big Ten. Michigan is now 8-1 and 5-1 in the conference.

Bernie, Advance move to State

A pair of Stoddard County volleyball powers, Bernie and Advance, will square off Tuesday night at 5:30 in the opening round of the State Volleyball Tournament at Flat River Central High School.

Both teams won their respective district tournaments over the weekend to win the right to compete in the state event, which will be the second held in Missouri.

In the District 9 tournament at Holcomb, Bernie powered its way past Holcomb in two games, winning the first contest 15-1 and coming right back to win 15-9 in the second. The Mules emerged from a field of 16 teams to win the tournament.

In the District 10 event at Richland High School near Essex, Advance had to go three games before downing the Rebels in a thrilling match. The Hornets took the opener 15-8, but Richland came back to win the second game 15-11. A 15-10 win by Advance in the deciding game won their the right to go to Tuesday night's action at Flat River.

The winner of the Bernie-Advance game Tuesday evening will play the winner of the 6:30 game, which pits the DeSoto District winner against the Lesterville District winner. That game would come at 8:00 Tuesday night.

The semifinals and finals will be held Saturday at Jefferson College in Hillsboro.

Zark gets the record, but Woods gets the win

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Steve Pisarkiewicz became Missouri's all-time passing leader Saturday, but Pete Woods replaced him amid a savage defensive struggle and directed the Tigers to nine fourth-quarter points and a 16-7 victory over Colorado.

The loss was Colorado's second in Big Eight competition and knocked the 14th-ranked Buffaloes out of a first-place tie with Nebraska, which defeated Oklahoma State for sole possession of the top spot.

After exchanging first quarter touchdowns, the two Big Eight powers battled scoreless through the next two periods. Woods, coming in with three minutes remaining in the fourth quarter, zipped the Tigers' 73-yard in 10 plays for the go-ahead touchdown.

Colorado appeared to have halted the drive, but a pass interference on Odis McKinney on fourth and goal revitalized the drive and Curtis Brown plunged over from the one with 12:28 remaining in the game.

Missouri cornerback Rob Fitzgerald intercepted Jeff Austin's pass on the next play and Woods, with an 26-yard pass play to Kellen Winslow, brought the Tigers to the five. Three plays later, Tim Gibbons booted a nineteen-yard field goal.

Colorado immediately marched downfield but was halted on another turnover, when the intended receiver Billy Waddy tipped the ball into Jim Leavitt's hands.

Colorado, with less than one minute to play, drove to the two yard line but was stopped on fourth down.

Pisarkiewicz became Missouri's career passing leader on his first play, a 15-yard flat pass to Joe Stewart. For three weeks, while side-lined with an elbow injury, he had needed just two yards to eclipse the late Paul Chrisman's standard of 3,056.

Missouri, ranked 16th nationally, ran its season record to 6-3 and remained tied for second in the conference at 3-2.

Colorado reeled off an 80-yard, 13-play scoring march on its second possession of the game. The drive, sparked by Jeff Knapple's 24-yard pass to Tony Reed and 18-yard flip to Don Hasselbeck, was capped by Jim Kelleher's two yard plunge.

Lewis returned the ensuing kickoff 45 yards to the Missouri 46 and 10 plays later, Pisarkiewicz fired a 13-yard bullet to Lewis in the end zone.

'Get off Onofrio's back' Mallory tells MU fans

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AOP) — Colorado Coach Bill Mallory has a message for Missouri fans who have been up in arms over their team's inconsistencies.

"I think you ought to get off (Coach Al) Onofrio's back about his team being up and down."

Although choked with disappointment over losing to the Tigers, 16-7, and being knocked out of a first-place tie in the Big Eight, Mallory was magnaimous.

"It was a typical good, clean, hard-fought Big Eight football game," he said. "They wanted it and we did, too. We were just beaten today."

Injury-nagged quarterback Steve Pisarkiewicz made his first start in a month and became Missouri's career passing leader with his first completion. But he watched from the bench in the final quarter as sub Pete Woods snapped a defensive standoff with nine winning points.

"It was obvious we couldn't get moving on offense," Onofrio said. "Steve had played almost three whole quarters and couldn't get anything going. With Steve, their defense was thinking primarily of pass. But with Pete came the hope of doing some other things. They didn't rush so much."

"It was a smart move to put Pete in," Pisarkiewicz agreed. "No one wants to come out but we weren't moving the ball and it was a key point in the game. I was a little rusty."

"I wanted to play just as much as I wanted to see Steve do well," said Woods. "But I knew if I came in it would be under adverse conditions."

Holding the 14th ranked Buffs to their lowest point total of the year delighted and somewhat surprised the Missouri defenders.

"As a team I would say that this was by far our best defesive effort," said tackle Don Cole. "We had a lot more gang-tackling than last week. Everyone was working together well."

Puxico wins JV tourney

BELL CITY — The top-seeded Puxico Indians exploded for 40 second- half points as they rallied from a four- point deficit at halftime to take an easy 66- 49 victory over upstart Oran and win the Bell City B Team Basketball Tournament Saturday night.

Coach Pete Townsend's Puxico squad trailed 30-26 at the half, but came out on the warpath in the second half. The Indians scored 20 points in each of the third and fourth quarters to run away with the championship.

Puxico got a 22- point scoring performance from sophomore David Smith. Kevin Shepherd and John Coffer added 14 and 10, respectively. Kelly Campbell and Danny Schlosser scored 14 each for Oran, which had recorded upsets over Delta and Bell City before bowing to Puxico.

David Lorch's 13- footer at the buzzer gave the Advance Hornets an exciting 58- 57 win over Bell City in the consolation game. Lorch led the Hornets with 16 points, while teammates Parks Long and Charles Wiggins and Bell City's William Henry had 14 apiece.

LOOKING GIFT HORSE IN THE MOUTH? — Not really. Debbie King is checking on the animal's health so she can give some advice to horse owner Wayne Winslow, Chester, Conn., on correct feed rations. It's just one of her everyday duties as the first woman county agricultural agent in the state of Connecticut. The 25-year-old Debbie is one of 28 women in the United States now employed as farm agents by state Extension Services.

He may be the toughest customer in the world.

Dear Editor:

I'm going to give 15 cents to the newspaper staff. Divide it up any way you wish. Now for that 15 cents I am giving you, I want you to deliver to my house a newspaper that will contain more reading matter than the current best-selling novel.

I want all the local news all of the state news, all the national news and all the international news. And I want every bit of it to be fresh. I want pictures and stories of all local accidents, fires, meetings and events that I'm interested in; and I don't want to see any that offend me, either. I expect you to tell me who died, who was born, who was divorced and who was married in the last 24 hours.

I want to know what those guys in Washington are doing with my tax money. I want to understand the space program and the war in the Middle East, but I don't want to have to waste more than a couple of minutes on your story.

I want to read just as much about Democrats as about Republicans, and just as much about Protestants as Catholics and Jews, and as much about blacks and chicanos as about whites. Don't tell me you can't do it. That's what I invested my 15 cents for. The only reason you won't do it is because you don't have any competition.

I want all the supermarket prices, a list of people with used cars for sale, the movie and TV times and the closing stock market prices.

If I get drunk and have a wreck, I don't want you to print my name in the paper, and I have a friend who is getting a divorce, and you can leave that out, too.

Another thing. I'm sick and tired of misspelled words in your paper. For 15 cents you ought to do better.

If you don't want to pay postage to mail it so I can pull it out of my mailbox then you'd better have it at my front door. Not on the steps, not in the rain, not in the front yard.

When I meet you on the street I expect you to serve as publicity chairman for every committee in town, too. If I call the paper and ask how many kids Al Capone had or what round Dempsey knocked out Tunney (or was it the other way?) I expect you to know and to tell me. Right then.

Tomorrow I'm going to start my own business, and I want a news item about it. A picture would be even better. Advertising? No, if you run the story and picture I won't need any advertising. But if you straighten up, I will give you another 15 cents tomorrow for another issue.

When in 1619 the Crown-appointed governor of the Jamestown, Virginia colony admitted incompetence, he was instructed to select two men from each borough to form a government. The men named themselves the House of Burgesses and came to be the first self-governing body in America. Burgessmen were to be elected "by the inhabitants."

Tennessee humorist Cotton Ivy is to be the guest speaker at 1976 Farmers Recognition Banquet to be held in the Sikeston High School Cafetorium at 7 p.m. Thursday. The event is sponsored by Sikeston Chamber of Commerce, and the Jaycees, Optimists, Rotary, Kiwanis, and Lions Clubs, with assistance from the University of Missouri extension and Sikeston Production Credit Association.

Seventeen farm families from Scott, Mississippi, New Madrid and Stoddard Counties are to be cited for their achievements at the dinner. Among those families to be honored are:

SCOTT COUNTY

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Schlitt of Oran have a diversified farming operation with row crops, finish feeder pigs and feeder cattle. They own 207 acres and rent an additional 230 acres, and they normally produce from 200 to 300 acres of single and double crop soybeans, 50 to 100 acres of corn, 70 to 90 acres of wheat, 10 acres of cotton as well as red clover for pasture and hay. Clover ground is normally planted to soybeans following the first planting of hay.

Schlitt indicated the number of feeder pigs fluctuates depending upon home grown grain supplies as well as prospective profits. However, they normally finish 200 to 300 head of hogs and 35 head of cattle.

Over the years, the schlitts have added to their on-the- farm grain storage facilities, both so they could market their grain through livestock, as well as marketing their soybeans in an orderly fashion.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Sanders and their two children, Greg, 14, and Jeanna, 12, live on Sikeston Route One.

The Sanders' primary farming enterprises are row crops, however, they have a 40-cow beef herd and 50 or so feeder cattle. The beef cattle are used primarily to salvage crop residue such as stalk fields.

This year the Sanders produced 700 acres of soybeans, 250 acres of wheat, 200 acres of corn, 100 acres of grain sorghum, 40 acres of cotton, and 45 acres of pasture. The 300- acre farm the Sanders own can be flood irrigated.

In order to reduce field losses and do a better job of crop marketing, they have 75,000 bushel of on-farm grain storage facilities.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Laseter who live near Sikeston, have two children, Sherry, 16, and Robby, 11.

The Laseters have a 650 - acre row crop farming operation. This year they produced 125 acres of corn, 220 acres of wheat, 50 acres of cotton, 350 acres of soybeans. They also produced 13 acres of alfalfa and 30 acres of pasture. They normally feed out 50 to 100 head of feeder cattle.

Irrigation is important practice for the Laseters. This year they sprinkler irrigated 300 acres with their cable tow irrigation system. They started irrigating July 3 and didn't stop until Sept. 15. Laseter said he used about a transport truck load of diesel fuel for irrigation.

Laseter is an experienced mechanic and this year they constructed a new farm shopand machine shed. Where he does much of his own machinery repair.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Deane III 607 Elm St. have four children, Bill IV, Mark, Lauie and Lisa.

Each year they normally produce 300 acres of cotton, 350 acres of wheat, 150 acres of corn, 250 acres of milo, and 1,400 acres of soybeans. In order to reduce risk, they sprinkler irrigate 300 acres and flood irrigate 70 acres. Plans are to continue land grading both to improve drainage and for irrigation.

They have on-the-farm grain drying and storage facilities which are used to help reduce field losses as well as do a better job of marketing.

MISSISSIPPI COUNTY

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Peebles who live near East Prairie, in the Pinhook community, and have two children, Katy, 18, and Robert, 16.

The Peebles began farming in 1949. They operate a 636 acre row crop farm. For the past several years, they have produced about 570 acres of single and double crop soybeans, 100 acres of wheat, and 65 acres of cotton. Some years, grain sorghum is produced for rotation purposes. For the past two years,no-till soybeans behind wheat has been quite successful.

A few years ago, most of the acreage the Peebles farm was heavily infested with Johnson grass. They had made tremendous strides toward cleaning up this problem even before some of the current Johnson grass herbicides became available.

Deciding several years ago that grain storage was profitable, Peebles has found that his facility paid for itself in two years. He has found that it simplifies harvest, reduces his harvesting losses, and eliminates the need for trucks at harvest time. Consequently, he doesn't even own a big grain truck. He has found it more economical to have his grain custom hauled to market from his storage bins.

With grain storage facilities, he has been able to develop a grain marketing plan which meets his goals.

Peebles says he prefers to forward price about one-third of his crop, sometimes for delivery after harvest, to sell about one-third at harvest, nd to store the remaining third for sale some time later.

The Peebles are active members of the First christian Church in East Prairie.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Arington live in the Dogwood Community of Mississippi County, have three married children, Randy, Sandra, and Carroll, and two grandchildren, Leslie Ann and Chris.

Randy farms in partnership with her father. Sandra and her husband, Stuart, teach in the East Prairie School System, and Carrol and her husband, Jerry, will complete their degrees this semester at Southeast Missouri State University.

The Aringtons farm 1,440 acres. This year they produced 420 acres of corn, 300 acres of wheat,60 acres of cotton, and 900 acres of soybeans. They also have 30 acres of pasture whichis utilized by 20 beef cows.

When the cattle market is favorable,they normally background about 200 head of feeder cattle. But for the last two or three years, the cattle market just hasn't looked right.

They have 400 acres of land to grade which they flood irrigatate. The aringtons also have on-the-farm grain storage and drying facilities they use in order to get crops out of the field early to reduce losses. Storage also gives them more options to choose from on marketing.

Mr. and Mrs. DeSales Duenne represent one-half of Duenne Farms, Incorporated.

The Duenne operate a 2,800- acre row crop farm. JThey have a well-balanced farming operation which spreads out their workload as well as reduces their risk. They have also found that crop rotation increases yields because of better weed and disease control.

They have also installed two large central pivot irrigation system,s as well as one cable tow irrigation system, which allowed them to irrigate 455 acres this year.

In order to increase their crop marketing alternatives as well as facilitate a more orderly crop harvest, the Duennes have installed grain drying and storage facilities. If they need to, they can store 220,000 bushels of crops. Two of the grain storage structures can also be used for machinery storage.

Representing one-half of Duenne Farms, Inc., are Mr. and Mrs. Herman Duenne of Charleston, Missouri, in Mississippi County. they have nine children -- five boys and four girls: John Henry, 22; Mary Helen, 19; Theresa, 18; Joey, 17; Patty, 16; Alan Dale, 13; Albert 12; Melissa, 8, and Mark, 6.

Herman and his brother, DeSales Duenne, own 2,200 acres and rent 600 acres. This year they produced 545 acres of corn, 220 acres of grain sorghum 800 acres of wheat, 800 acres of double crop soybeans, and 1,900 acres of single crop soybeans.

The Duennes are quick to adopt new technology which they believe will make them money on their farming operation. Herman says they rely heavily upon University of Missouri research information and recommendations.

The progress they have made in eliminating weed problems indicates they have been quite successful in the application of new technology.

STODDARD COUNTY

The James L. Miller Farm near Dexter consists of 256 owned acres and 340 rented acres, all of which is in crops and can be irrigated.

The farm has yielded 600-pound lint cotton, 150 bushel per acre corn, 50 bushel per acre soybeans and 70 bushel per acre wheat. Last year the farm averaged 365-pound lint cotton, 115 bushel per acre corn, 37 bushel per acre soybeans, including double cropped soybeans, and 40 bushel per acre wheat.

The Millers added 8,500 bushel of grain storage capacity, and last year added a 50 foot by 90 foot machine shop and shed.

Mr. and Mrs. Anson Knoderer and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Knoderer farm an 887 acre operation, near Painton, which consists of 220 acres of corn and milo, 300 acres of beans, 80 acres of wheat, a 25 head beef cow herd and 20 head of sow swine.

Crops on this farm are rotated between corn, soybeans and wheat with the wheat being double cropped.

Last year, the family turned some of their waste land into a pond and stocked it with fish. The beef cow herd is used to clean up fields and the production is then fed out. All pigs produced from the 20 sows are also fed out.

A continuous flow dryer is used to dry the grain before it is placed in the 30,000 bushel grain storage.

Triplett Brothers Farms, near Walnut Lane, is farmed by Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Triplett and Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Triplett. The operation consists of 420 acres of corn, 350 acres of wheat doubled back to soybeans and 80 acres of milo. The Tiiplett brothers own 491 acres and rent an additional 359 acres. All of their own land and most of the rented land has been put to grade for irrigation. In the last several years, they have added 48,000 bushels of grain storage, a continuous flow dryer and constructed a 52 foot by 204 foot long machine shed.

NEW MADRID COUNTY

This year's crops were 220 acres of corn, yielding 140 bushel per acre; 100 acres of wheat, yielding 50 bushel per acre; 80 acres of grain sorghum, yielding 5,000 pounds per acre, and 260 acres of soybeans, yielding 30 bushel per acre.

The Ridings have added a farm shop and 4,000 bushel of grain storage capacity in the last two years. They nave two children, Michael, 4, and James Vernon, 15 months.

Mr. and Mrs. Royce Fortner farm 560 acres near the Tallapoosa Community. In 1975 Royce graded 75 acres and irrigated it this year. He now has another 75 acres staked and partially graded, and plans have been made to irrigate the whole farm. About 15,000 bushel of grain drying and storage capacity have been added.

This year's crops included 75 acres of corn, with 110 bushel per acre; 80 acres of wheat, with 43 bushel per acre; 140 acres of soybeans, yielding 25 bushel per acre; 100 acres of grain sorghum, yielding 6,500 pounds per acre; and 150 acres of cotton, yielding 300 pounds per acre.

The Fortners have two children, Angie, 8, and Mark, 3.

Crops grown this year included 210 acres of cotton, 430 acres of soybeans, 130 acres of grain sorghum, and 80 acres of wheat.

About 120 acres of the land can be irrigated, and the Vann's plant strip crops of corn on sandy land to keep the sand from blowing on crops.

The Vann's have two children, Mitchell, 15, and Cheryl, 10.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Shanks of New Madrid Route One, farm 400 acres, all of which is under irrigation.

Crops include 200 acres of cotton, normally yielding 600 to 700 pounds per acre; 100 acres of wheat, yielding 40 bushel per acre; and 200 acres of soybeans, including the wheat land, yielding 35 to 40 bushel per acre.

The shanks have one son, Shaun, 13.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hawkins live in Matthews, and have one daughter, Lisa Lea, 13.

The Hawkins' current farming operation consists of 1,050 acres which are devoted to row crops. They own 160 acres and rent the remaining 890 acres.

Acreage of various crops varies from year to year depending upon prospective cost and returns for each crop on each soil type. Last year, the Hawkins produced 665 acres of soybeans, 140 acres of wheat, 95 acres of cotton, and 125 acres of popcorn.

Currently involved in a land grading program is underway.

Hawkins has found his farm shop, which he constructed in 1967, to be a tremendous asset . He has been able to more efficiently utilize available labor and to do all of his machinery maintenance work himself. He says the machine shed he constructed in 1968 has increased the life of his machinery as well as reduced maintenance cost.

Grain storage and drying facilities constructed in 1969 have helped reduce field losses as well as allowing him to market his crops in an orderly fashion.

PORTAGEVILLE — The vital need for cotton producers to maintain and build momentum for their fiber in the marketplace through increased research and promotion was stressed at a meeting here Oct. 28.

Presiding was A.L. Story Jr., a Wolf Island producer who explained that the meeting was one of a series being arranged by the National Cotton Council to discuss cotton's research and promotion needs and opportunities and a proposal to meet those needs.

"Under the proposal, producer assessment for research and promotion would be increased by four- tenths of one per cent of the gross sales price of each bale of cotton, beginning with the 1977 crop," he stated. "This would be in addition to the current $1 per bale."

He added that after 1977 the supplemental assessment could be increased in increments up to one per cent on the recommendation of the Cotton Board and the secretary of agriculture.

"The Cotton Board has made it very plain, however, that this would be done only after an in-depth study showed conclusively that the program was being conducted with maximum effectiveness, that its effectiveness could be increased only with additional financing and that producers themselves indicated an overwhelming sentiment for an increase," Story stated.

He further explained that all other aspects of the program remain virtually unchanged, including the right for any producer to obtain a refund.

The speaker stated that testimony at recent U.S. Department of Agriculture hearings across the Cotton Belt indicated strong producer support for the proposal.

He added that the enabling legislation calls for a referendum in which producers would vote on increasing the assessment.

He explained that in 1975 producers of synthetic fibers spent $230 million in fiber research, compared with $5.4 million by growers through Cotton Inc. The odds in fiber advertising ran $60 million for synthetics versus $3.4 million for cotton.

Pointing out that inflation has hurt cotton's research and promotion effort, he said the $1 per bale approved by growers in the 1966 referendum will buy only 60 cents worth of these tools today. In addition, supplemental government funds now have been eliminated.

Cited as areas where "we can expect to get more for our money" were the following:

1. Increased textile research in durable press, fire retardance and knits.

2. Agricultural research in specific problem areas, such as byssinosis and pest management.

3. Stepped- up fabric development and fashion support to keep mills thinking about cotton and higher cotton blends.

4. Much heavier merchandising and advertising support to increase consumer demand.

5. More work in the international field to increase exports.

It was emphasized that in most areas additional funds will go directly into programs since Cotton Inc. already has an efficient and professional staff in place.

Cited as a prime example of progress was research leading to a more efficient system of seed cotton processing and handling. It was reported that the system saved producers $7 million in 1974 and that the saving could exceed $10 million during the 1976 harvest season.

Another example cited was the producer- financed effort to increase the percentage of cotton-- and thus its market share-- in broadcloth, oxford and other lightweight fabrics.

CI staff members reported that, as a result of these efforts, six mills and converters now are producing "Natural Blend" shirting fabrics. Thirteen prominent shirt brands are using the fabric which must contain at least 60 per cent cotton. The next step is to change blend levels in additional volume markets.

The staff explained that success in this project was achieved through a total marketing approach-- fabric development, mill contacts, fashion design, merchandising and advertising.

Record low temperatures are recorded across state

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Record low temperatures were recorded overnight by three Missouri cities and one reading, a frigid 15 degrees in Springfield, set the early morning low in the nation.

The National Weather Service said the record low for the date in Springfield was 21 degrees set in 1921 and tied in 1962.

In Columbia, a 1951 record low of 20 degrees was broken when the temperature dropped to 19. A reading today of 23 degrees in St. Louis felled a previous record of 26 set in 1959.

The 23-degree mark in Kansas City tied the record low for the date set in 1959.

The unseasonably cold conditions were the result of a large high pressure system sprawled over most of the Mississippi Valley and Gulf Coast states which was drifting slowly toward the east.

The forecast called for warmer conditions to settle into the area as the front moved out. Temperatures were expected to be near normal by Saturday.

Stoddard County produces highest grain sorghum yield in the state

By THOMAS BROWN
Area agronomy specialist

BLOOMFIELD — Stoddard County produced the highest average grain sorghum yield on the second-highest county acreage in the state last year, according to crop production figures published by the Missouri Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. An average yeild of 3,909 pounds per acre was produced on 22,500 acres of sorghum.

A total of over 1.5 million bushels of sorghum were produced in the county, which amounts to a gross income of over $5.3 million at current harvest-time prices. As these figures indicate, grain sorghum is rapidly becoming an important crop in the county.

Why all of this interest in grain sorghum? Perhaps more than any other single factor, the soybean cyst nematode problem is the reason. Farmers learned from experience that the cyst nematode infestation continued to build up when beans were produced too often on the same fields.

With soybeans being produced on two of every three cropland acres in the county, the problem was rapidly growing worse, and indeed, the county's most important crop was being threatened.

In addition to the cyst nematode problem, disease problems were rapidly building up in soybeans, cotton and the crops. A number of the crop diseases involved live from one year to the next on crop residues in the soil. Consequently, like the nematode problem, disease infestations continued to build up when beans were produced too often on the same land.

Aside from crop disease and cyst nematode control benefits, farmers also realize some other benefits from the increased use of crop rotation made possible by the increased acreage of grain sorghum. Weeds can be more efficiently controlled when two or more crops are produced on a given field compared to the consistent production of one crop.

A wider variety of herbicides are usually used which facilitates the control of a wider variety of weeds. Too, both research results and farm experience have shown that soybeans can be fertilized more effectively in a crop rotation program than it can when applying fertilizer directly to beans being grown consistently in a given field.

Why is grain sorghum being used as a crop to facilitate crop rotation in this area? Actually, there are several reasons.

First, this crop is adapted to a wide variety of soils. It can be produced on virtually all soils in the county, ranging from the so-called "white-natured" soils, which are too droughty for corn production without irrigation, to gumbo-type soils, which crack too badly for successful corn production.

Second, this crop offers a great deal of insurance as far as weather is concerned. It will stand more dry and wet weather than most other crops.

Third, it can be produced with farm machinery used to produce othe crops grown in the area.

Grain sorghum, like all other crops, also has its disadvantages. In spite of this, considerably more grain sorghum was produced in the county this year than in 1975, and indications are that this acreage expansion can be expected to continue during the foreseeable future.

Now is the time to get soil samples

By JOHN GARRETT
Area agronomy specialist

BENTON — Now is an excellent time to start getting soil samples for 1977 crops. Nutrient deficient areas in a field can be identified and found during harvest. They are much easier to remember now than next spring.

Our laboratory was testing to full capacity two weeks ago, but it is now caught up. Samples can be tested and returned to you with fertilizer and limestone results within 10 to 14 days. If you wait until the peak period of January- March, it may take as long as four weeks.

When results are returned to you, they will show how much lime and fertilizer are needed. Many of our crop production probelsms can be traced to low pH acid soils and short of limestone. Soils are still relatively dry from the summer drought so lime trucks can get over the fields with no problems.

Limestone is needed to "sweeten" the soil and raise the pH to 6.0- 6.5 for most of our crops. As much as 25 to 50 per cent of the fertilizer applied is unavailable to plants on soils with a pH of 5.5. Fertilizer is certainly too expensive to waste. Most of our commonly used herbicides perform better when the pH is near 6.0.

Two types of limestone are used in our area-- dolomitic and calcitic.

The dolomitic limestone contains about 120 pounds of effective magnesium and 208 pounds of effective calcium per ton and should generally be used on sandy soils deficient in magnesium.

Calcitic limestone contains approximately 388 pounds of effective calcium per ton and can be used on all soils except those deficient in magnesium. If calcitic limestone is used on soils deficient in magnesium, another more expensive source of magnesium must be applied to correct the deficiency.

Research results show that the calcitic lime corrects soil acidity more rapidly than the dolomitic. However, after about six months, both limes react the same. How fast the lime adjusts the pH will depend on how well it is incorporated into the soil and when it is applied. It should be applied at least six months prior to crop needs.

Lime can be applied directly on fall planted wheat with no problem. Soil should be firm enough to prevent equipment from miring down. Lime can be spread on frozen ground that is relatively level with no problem. Lime applied in this manner won't be of much benefit to the wheat but it will get it on the soil for spring crops.

Fall is also an excellent time to apply phosphate and potash. It is best to work them into the soil if at all possible. However, on level ground the first few rains will dissolve them into the soil.

So be smart, get your soil samples early and avoid the spring rush season. Remember, your soils should be retested every three to four years.

Pork industry fighting slump

JEFFERSON CITY — Worsening hog market prices have caused producers, commodity specialists and industry officials to gather and discuss what could be done about sharply increased production and falling prices in their industry.

At a Chicago Farm Bureau meeting, some 50 swine industry people from midwest states pooled their production know-how in a two- day session to try and prevent economic chaos in the hog industry.

The group discussion lead to five knowledgeable decision-making points each prok producer should strongly consider if he wants to be in business next year, or later, said Jack Palmer, Missouri Farm Bureau commodity director.

Those points are:

1. Sell the least productive sows.
2. Sell at lighter weights.
3. Make an extra effort to become more efficient in every phase of your hog operation.
4. Reschedule the buying of new equipment until a later date.
5. Study your cash flow. Notify your lender of some of your anticipated financial problems. Ask him to refrain from making loans for expanded production to other producers until the marketing situtation reverses.

Palmer and the three prominent pork producers from Missouri who attended the round table discussions said, producers must "do it now" if they expect their industry to survive this glut of over production. It means a hardship on everyone, they said, but if the outlined specifics are followed by every producer, the industry can pull itself out of this loss situation.

Spot cotton prices advance for 2nd week

HAYTI — Spot cotton prices advanced for the second consecutive week at the end of October, according to Paul W. Karban, officer in charge of the USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service Cotton Classing Office in Hayti. Offerings of current ginnings continued light, mainly due to the large percentage of the crop already under contract. Merchant demand was moderate for Missouri ginnings.

Prices paid to growers for mixed lots of grades 41 and higher, staples 34 and 35, mike 3.5- 4.9, were generally 77 to 79 cents per pound. Only a limited amount of lower qualities were traded. Prices for grades 51 and 42, staples 34 and 35, mike 3.5-4.9, ranged from 75 to 76 cents per pound.

Cottonseed prices were higher at oil mills. Mills were paying $118 per ton, basis grade 100 for cottonseed. The average seed grade for Missouri was 95 last week.

Receipts at the classing office declined from the previous week. Nearly 22,000 samples were graded during the week for Missouri farmers under the Smith- Doxey program. This brings the season's total to approximately 68,000 samples.

The quality of classings was slightly lower, with grade 41 predominant, making up 55 per cent of the receipts. Grade 31 accounted for 23 per cent. The staple length was shorter with staple 34 accounting for 59 per cent. Staple 35 followed with 36 per cent. Of the cotton tested, 95 per cent miked in the 3.5- 4.9 range.

The average fiber strength for the season thus far is 87,000 pounds per square inch. This compares to a strength of 82,000 pounds per square inch average for the entire 1975 crop.

Picking operations were slowed as rainfall with accumulations of two to four inches were received over the territory earlier in the week.

Dexter farmer harvest 8993.63 pounds per acre

DEXTER — Clarence and Larry Myers of Dexter were recently named members of the DeKalb Yieldmasters Club for producing 8,993.63 pounds of sorghum per acre in 1976.

Their yield, based on 14 per cent moisture, was mechanically hargested from a solid block measuring 1.712 acres. An impartial third party verified the high yield which was recorded from a field of DeKalb C- 42y+.

The Myers planted the field on May 10 in 36- inch rows and harvested the crop on Sept. 15. Grain test weight was 59.5 pounds per bushel.

Their fertilizer program included 125 pounds of nitrogen, 45 pounds of phosphate and 125 pounds of potash. They controlled weeds with Ramrod and AAtrex. No insecticide was used. An estimated 15 inches of rain fell on the crop from planting to harvest. Another six inches of water was applied through irrigation.

Concerning the hybrid's performance, Larry Myers says, "I like C- 42y+ because it has an elongated stem and the head is up out of the foliage, which makes it easier to combine."

The purpose of the DeKalb Yieldmasters Club is to promote an exchange of ideas and information among the nation's leading grain producers and to recognize them for their outstanding accomplishments as well as their important role in helping feed the world. Through the sharing of such information, the program also encourages farmers to adopt management and cultural practices that will aid them in obtaining maximum profit from each acre.

Johnsongrass choking your corn? Get Eradicane®

Selective Herbicide

Here's how to take control of tough johnsongrass seedlings and thoroughly suppress rhizomes. First, plow early and disc the ground several times to cut up the johnsongrass rhizomes 4 inches or less in length. Then incorporate Eradicane herbicide into the soil before planting. Plant johnsongrass infested fields last, in your corn planting schedule, for the best results.

That way the soil is warm, and your corn sprouts fast without weed competition and makes shade cover early. Eradicane also controls nutsedge, wild cane and many other weeds. Always follow label directions carefully.

This season take care of johnsongrass and get bigger yields of better quality corn. Use Eradicane! See your Stauffer supplier for Eradicane.

IS "PARITY" ENOUGH?

"Parity plus initiative equals superiority." These were the words spoken by former head of the Defense Intelligence Agency Lt. Gen. Daniel O. Graham during a recent Washington press luncheon given by the American Security Council.

General Graham was saying that it really misses the point to argue purely numbers in comparing Soviet and American military strength. Although in nearly every quantitative measurement of military power the Soviets lead the U.S., the proponents of the "all is well" school of thought still make a case that the U.S. has parity with the Soviets and parity is enough.

Not so, says Graham. In some categories such as numbers of men under arms, the U.S. does not have, and does not need, parity with Russia's 166 divisions. In other areas, such as naval power, the U.S. needs, but does not have, heavy superiority in order to keep open our vital overseas supply lines. But even assuming a rough across-the-board parity, the side that strikes first under conditions of modern warfare will have a huge advantage. This was General Graham's point.

U.S. military doctrine, to say nothing of our democratic society, rules out the initiation of hostilities. We can only react after we have been hit. The Soviets labor under no such inhibitions. A Soviet first strike could devastate our military forces in the first hours of a nuclear war and leave Moscow in an overwhelmingly advantageous politico-military position.

For this reason, the U.S. must not be satisfied with any so-called "parity." We must regain — and quickly — the clear superiority which we have so tragically lost.

IS MOM TO BLAME?

If the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world, as the old saying goes, it may also be responsible for the fact that it is still pretty much a man's world.

According to a California psychiatrist who has treated male patients with problems in their relationships with women, mothers may be at least partly to blame for creating male chauvinists.

Some women become unhappy when their husbands give up their superior attitude and behavior, writes Dr. Sherwyn M. Woods, in the Archives of General Psychiatry. In reaction, they knowingly teach their sons that their fathers are not chauvinistic enough.

In treating his patients,he found that "it was most often their mothers who directly or indirectly taught or supported the idea that adequacy as a man meant dominance and superiority over the woman."

Many years ago a Sikeston man said that in the town he came from the women were always indignant with a man when a baby came to his house, and were fierce when twins arrived. On one occasion, triplets were born in the town, and the father left the house before the doctor did, and never returned. He was a good husband and a kind father, but he could not stand the abuse of the women.

THE DOUBLE STANDARD OF JUSTICE...

The pardon for former Illinois Governor Otto Kerner was not granted before he died from lung cancer. It was asked for when it was first learned that he was suffering from a terminal illness. Why couldn't the same treatment be given this man that was given to Richard Nixon. Kerner always maintained his innocence of wrong doing and was convicted of accepting a bribe. We can even remember Richard Nixon when he admittedly accepted some major applicances while he was a Senator. At the time he was Ike Eisenhower's choice for Vice- President. Nixon got in front of the TV camera, cried and asked forgiveness from the people. Both Kerner and Nixon accepted gifts for favors done but only Kerner was sent to prison. Nixon later received a presidential pardon for any crime he may have committed while in office and accepted the pardon. We felt more compassion for Kerner and his family than we will ever feel for Nixon. This, to us, is just another of the many examples we have come to accept as double standards of justice in our country.

A young service station operator in Utah probably is convinced more than anyone else in the nation right now that this is true.

Not too long ago he gave a ride to an old man he found walking along a dirt road in Nevada, let him out at the Sands Hotel in Las Vegas, and gave him a quarter, thinking he was a down- and- out bum.

Last week, when billionaire Howard Hughes's will was put on the record, that young man was named in it, and if the will holds up in court, will inherit an estimated $2½ million.

The "bum" he befriended was Howard Hughes.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER...

Congress is finally getting around to re- opening the hearing on the assasination of President Kennedy. It seems that they are convinced that the complete story of the affair was not told to the Warren Commission who investigated the assasination. It is now believed that the FBI and the CIA withheld information because they were involved in an assasination attempt on Fidel Castro. It would seem to me that any government bureau who held back information from a congressional investigation should either be dissolved or at least fire all top ranking employees and directors of those bureaus. Time and time again it has been proven that withholding information from the people results in a major national scandal. The true story of the assasination of John F. Kennedy has been a long time coming to the surface. Better late than never!

YOU WIN SOME AND LOSE SOME

the national concern about presidential politics made it appear that issue was the matter of most concern to Illinois voters when they went to the polls.

But for many of those voters the major interest was in the Illinois gubernatorial primary. It was a contest which pitted Gov. Dan Walker against his arch rival Mayor Richard J. Daley. Actually, Walker was seeking the nomination against Illinois Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett who was trying to become the first Democrat in that state's history be to elected to five consecutive terms of statewide office. But Howeltt was unabashedly the candidate of the "Big Dumpling," as Daley sometimes is affectionaly known in Chicago.

It was a knock- down, drag-out campaign. Walker had come into office by defeating Daley's hand- picked candidate four years ago. He had walked the length of Illinois telling the voters he was going to beat the Deley machine and get rid of that kind of politics. But Walker had troubles of his own. There was a Medicaid fraud scandal. His opponents kept asking him to tell who had contributed to his 1972 campaign, and he never did. The education lobby was infuriated by his vetoes of some $145 million in state school aid last year. The criticism continued up to the final hour when he was charged with playing politics with state finances by presenting what appeared to be an unrealistic budget that critics said he planned to use as a weapon against his Republican opponent in the November election.

Howlett was attacked for having been on the pay roll of a Chicago- area steel firm while serving in state office, and he resigned the steel firm job. Walker forces charged he had taken tainted money from race track interests and had lobbied for junk dealers.

In the end it probably was a heavy snowstorm in most of downstate Illinois on election day that decided the race. Walker had depended on downstate opposition to the Daley forces of Cook County, and the storm kept many downstate voters from the polls. Walker lost, heavily.

Daley was crowing and Howlett was beaming.

But the race is only half run. Howlett now faces the GOP's James R. Thompson, a crusading former U.S. attorney who rooted out a lot of corruption in the Daley machine forces in the last couple of years. Thompson is considered a strong contender for the governorship in November.

ILLINOIS is hardly a typical state politically.

But it is the last state in which a strong political machine— Daley's— still has what is referred to there as "clout." Some people around the nation still admire that sort of politics. Daley may be a machine politician, they say, but Chicago is one of the few cities in the nation which isn't in real trouble. Daley gets things done.

Maybe so. But everything isn't so great in Chicago, either. True, the ward boss system gets things done— for those who knuckle under to the machine. It rewards the faithful, but it gains its power as much by threatening those who oppose it.

That may be coming to an end, too, though. A star in the wind was the renomination of Rep. Ralph Metcalfe, the black Chicago Democrat who had bucked the Daley machine because of its failure to deal with South Side Chicago black problems and what blacks considered to be shabby treatment of black police.

Metcalfe withstood the Daley treatment of deprivation of patronage by organizing a new black constituency for the first time. His success could indicate that either Daley will have to change his attitude in that part of the city, or that a new day in politics has dawned in Chicago.

FIRE DETECTOR AN INVESTMENT IN LIFE

There were 6,800 deaths from home fire in America last year, and up to half of those deaths could have been prevented if families had installed a fire detector costing less than $50, according to the National Bureau of Standards.

"It is ironic," says Ken Krouchko, market development manager in the residential division of Honeywell, Inc., "that many people will spend $150 or $300 a year on fire insurance to protect their homes and belongings but won't spend a fraction of that to protect themselves. A house and furniture can be replaced; lives can't be replaced."

This situation is changing, however, and changing rather spectacularly. Honeywell is only one of a number of companies involved in what has become one of the fastest- selling consumer products introduced in recent years.

When transistorized detectors first went on the market in 1971, 50,000 were sold. Last year, the figure was 2.5 million, and sales this year are expected to top 3.5 million. Banks are offering them as premiums to lure depositors and some insurance companies are giving discounts on fire insurance rates if detectors are installed.

Presently, 11 states require fire or smoke detectors in all new housing and two others require them in all new multifamily dwellings. Legislation is pending in most other states. In addition, the Federal Housing Administration requires fire protection in all new homes for which it writes mortgage insurance.

As with most new products, we are in the midst of a shaking-out period among competing manufacturers and the public is confronted with a confusing variety of detectors.

Basically, there are two main types: heat detectors and smoke detectors. Both may be either battery operated or AC (house current) operated by being plugged into a wall outlet or wired directly into house wiring. Both sound a piercing warning signal.

But heat detectors are too slow, says the Bureau of Standards. They require a significant built- up of heat before they operate, and most fire deaths are caused not by actual flames but by asphyxiation, often long before visible fire breaks out.

Most fire prevention experts favor smoke detectors, and again there are two basic types: those using a photoelectric cell and those using an ionization chamber. The latter is the more sensitive of the two, but because of its sensivivity may also be set off simply by smoke from a stove or high humidity.

Some types, like Honeywell's, utilize a dual ionization chamber capable of detecting microscopic particles of combustion generated in the initial stage of a fire, crucial minutes before it progresses to the next three stages of smoldering, flame and high heat. This type is also said to be less susceptible to false alarms.

A model code for household fire warning equipment adopted by the National Fire Protection Association recommends that a heat or smoke detector, preferably AC- wired, be located between the bedroom area and the rest of the house because the major threat from fire is at night when everyone is asleep. In two- story homes, another detector should be located at the top of the stairwell to the basement or lower floor.

But even the best detector can only be a warning. That warning may be wasted, says the association, unless a family has planned in advance for rapid exit from their residence. There should be at least two alternate escape routes from each room, and children especially should be drilled on what to do in case of a fire.

Nor can any detector prevent a fire caused by smoking in bed or careless use or storage of flammable liquids and materials.

RED BADGE OF COURAGE

WASHINGTON— I had a very tough time on Election Day. The doorbell rang at seven o-clock in the morning and my neighbor Legendman was at the door.

"I have to vote today," he said, "and I'm scared."

"Evervone is frightened on Election Day," I assured him. "I wouldn't worry about it."

"I can't pull the lever for either guy," he said. "I just can't."

"Sure you can," I said soothingly. "I know it sounds impossible, but when you get inside the voting booth I'm certain you'll find the strength to do it."

"Would you go with me?" he begged. "It would be a big favor if I had somebody with me."

"Well, I hadn't planned to vote until later in the day. But if it means that much to you I will."

My wife gave Legendman a cup of coffee while I got dressed.

I found him sitting in the kitchen holding his head in his hands. "I never felt this way before," he confessed. "I used to look forward to Election Day. I had no trouble voting in past ones. Why do I have this terrible feeling in my stomach?"

"It happens to all of us sooner or later," I told him. "I'm sure all over the country people feel the way you do. But Americans have to vote. It's a privilege as well as a duty."

"But if I pull the lever for Ford we'll have four more years of the same thing. If I pull the lever for Carter nobody knows what we'll get."

"Vote your conscience," I told him.

"If I voted my conscience," he said, "I wouldn't vote.I think I'll go get a swine flu shot instead."

I stopped him at the door. "Let's go, Legendman," I said, grabbing his arm. "All you have to fear is fear itself." I bundled him into the car.

He was sitll distraught. "I can't pull the lever. I know I'll freeze. The TV commentators say every vote counts. I don't want my vote to count."

"This is like war, Legendman," I told him. "You think you can't pull the lever. But when it boils right down to it it's either you or them. Think of John Wayne. He would go right into that voting booth and pull the lever without thinking twice."

"I'm not John Wayne. I'm just a frightened American voter who never thought he'd have to make a choice between Gerry Ford and Jimmy Carter."

We arrived at the public school and I noticed several drivers pulling people out of their cars. They were all screaming "I can't do it! I can't do it!"

I helped Legendman out. He was shaking and perspiring. "Look, I'll come back later," he said.

"You have to do it now," I said firmly. "The sooner you get it over with the less agony will be involved."

We showed our registration cards to the lady at the table. "Booth three," she said to Legendman.

He tried to make a break for it and I tackled him.

I decided to be tough. "All right," I said, "I'm tired of mollycoddling you. You're going into booth three and you're not coming out until you pull the lever for the man you want to be the next President of the United States." I pushed him toward the booth. He opened the curtain and peeked in.

I watched himsternly.

"Inside," I ordered, "and pull the curtain."

I watched his feet under the curtain.He kept turning around. Finally, I heard a cry like a wounded animal and a click,and Legendman dashed out of the booth.

"I did it," he said. "I pulled the lever for the candidate of my choice."

"Good man," I said, pounding him on the back. "It wasn't so bad, was it?"

He looked at me with tears in his eyes. "I only hope God will forgive me."

Army's Vulcan Is One More Dud; Another Alaskan Pipeline Scandal

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — The military brass have the compulsive habit of rushing ahead with new weapons before they have been proven. This has resulted in a staggering accumulation of armaments that should never have been built.

The multi-billion-dollar wastepile of dubious, antiquated and canceled weapons has largely been hidden from the taxpayers who put up the money. For the brass hats also have the habit of hiding their mistakes under the secrecy stamp.

The story of the Vulcan anti-aircraft gun is typical. It's an embarrassing story, which, therefore, has been classified. There is no legitimate reason, however, for withholding the facts from the public.

The Vulcan is a six-barrel, gatling-design, 20-millimeter gun mounted on armored personnel carriers. With a great show of urgency, the Army rushed the gun into production in the mid-1960s. It was certified as suitable for combat in May 1972.

Yet a classified General Accounting Office study charges that "performance deficiencies relating to accuracy and reliability were waived" on the promise that improvements would be forthcoming.

The Army dutifully began to work on the improvements. These are supposed to be ready in 1979. Yet the anti-aircraft gun has been integrated into our defense system, meanwhile, despite "numerous performance problems involving effectiveness, reliability, availability and maintainability."

Even after the improvements are completed in three years, they "will not overcome the weapon's major performance problems," the study warns.

The Vulcan is supposed to shoot down attacking enemy planes. Yet its "destruction probability," as the experts refer to its ability to knock down planes, is no more than 13 per cent "against a non-maneuvering target flying at 250 knots."

Most enemy planes, unfortunately, fly faster than 250 knots. It is also unlikely that they would cooperate with the gunners by flying in a straight line without maneuvering.

Against "a non-maneuvering target flying at 450 knots," the effectiveness of the Vulcan drops despairingly to a mere 5 per cent. This means a squadron of supersonic jet planes, taking evasive measures, could fly in complete safety over a field of Vulcan anti-aircraft guns. Even subsonic planes could probably avoid being shot down.

But that's not all. According to the classified study, the Army considers the Vulcan's range "inadequate under many tactical situations" and its 20-millimeter ammunition "too small to provide sufficient lethality for consistent aircraft destruction."

On top of all these handicaps, the Vulcan is also a "fair weather only" weapon. In other words, it would be effective only against slow airliners flying in a straight line in broad daylight.

PLAGUED PIPELINE: The Alaskan pipeline, the great oil artery now being grafted into the Alaskan wilderness, has been plagued by scandals.

We exposed the worst one; we reported that an estimated 1,800 possible welding defects were buried under the permafrost north of the Yukon. It is costing Alyeska, the pipeline builders, millions of dollars to re-inspect the work.

We sent our roving reporter, Hal Bernton, to Alaska to investigate the story on the spot. Posing as a laborer, he got a job on the pipeline. For two weeks, he watched the costly, painful work of uncovering segments of the pipeline to check the quality of the welds.

Now we've learned that the welders may not have been adequately certified before they were sent to Alaska to work on the pipeline. More than 80 per cent of them were funneled through the National Pipeline Welding School in Tulsa, Okla. A quality control inspector who visited the school in July, 1975, reported to his superiors that the poor quality of the welds on the pipeline could be traced directly to the attitude at the school.

Other pipeline welding inspectors also complained to Alyeska that the school was sending welders to Alaska who hadn't met the tough American Petroleum Institute standards. One inspector called it "the worst welder quality control job I have ever seen on a pipeline." Yet some officials, who wanted to tighten the standards, were fired from their jobs.

Significantly, the National Pipeline Welding School is run by the Pipeline Welding Union, Local 798. This single local has a near-monopoly on pipeline welding jobs in the United States.

The welders are a flamboyant breed who wear colorful caps and thick-heeled cowboy boots. They maintain a tight, clannish membership. In Alaska, they clashed with the Teamsters who connrol most of the jobs on the pipelines. In some of the isolated construction camps, fierce, violent rivalries broke out between the two unions.

But Alyeska is treating the powerful Oklahoma union delicately. The construction consortium is afraid that the cowboy-booted welders could slow down the entire project.

FORD AIRLIFT: After we wrote that the giant Thiokol chemical firm twice ferried President Ford's son Jack in a company plane, we were told by usually reliable sources that the plane also had been made available to Ford himself.

The White House concedes the Ford family was flown from Salt Lake City to Sun Valley, Idaho and back by Thiokol, but says it was 10 or 12 years ago while Ford was in Congress.

Support for the Sikeston Bulldogs hit a new level Thursday, when five Sikeston High School seniors put a sign on the side of a transport trailer, touting their team's ability. The Bulldogs, undefeated this season, host the Poplar Bluff Mules, who are also undefeated. Game time is 7:30 tonight. The students involved in the sign project were Kathy Carroll, Cindy Thomure, Debbie Matthews, Terra Williams and Belinda Milloway.

Carter says he may ask for a tax cut

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President-elect Jimmy Carter, who won the White House by only 27 electoral votes, vows that the slimmest of victories will not halt his plans to aggressively pursue new goals for the nation.

The Democratic presidentelect spoke on the main street of his little home town of Plains, Ga., on Thursday night, and a crowd of some 400 watched in the chill autumn air as reporters, seated on metal chairs in the middle of the street, asked questions of the president-designate at the town's old railroad station.

It was also Thursday, two days after the election, that the final two states completed tabulating their ballots.

Carter won the presidency with 272 electoral votes in the wee hours of Wednesday. The final accounting on Thursday gave him the 25 electoral votes from Ohio for a total of 297. It took 270 to win.

Carter took 40,291,626 votes or 51 per cent and Ford received 38,563,089 votes or 48 per cent.

"I wish we could have carried all 50 states, but since I didn't, I hope to demonstrate even before my inauguration my complete commitment to being president of all the American people," Carter said, holding his first nationally broadcast news conference since the election.

The news conference, he said, will be the first of many. He said he hopes to hold at least two each month after taking office in January.

He said the narrow win would not stop him from "moving aggressively to carry out my campaign commitments." And he said there is a strong possibility he will seek a tax cut for average wage earners as one way of stimulating the economy if it does not pick up on its own by Jan. 20, when Carter will take the oath of office.

He said any such tax cut would be designed to increase the purchasing power of the average American family and would be oriented toward lower-income workers.

But the Democrat said he does not intend any interference with the workings of the Ford administration during its final days. In fact, Carter said after the news conference that he will spend less time in Washington than had been expected before the Jan. 20 inauguration.

Earlier, Carter had indicated he would spend several days a week in the capital in transitional offices. But Thursday, he said he would spend less time in Washington to avoid the suggestion that he is trying to interfere with or second guess the last Ford administration decisions.

Carter said he would be represented in Washington by Vice President-elect Walter Mondale, who sat silently listening during the news conference in Plains. "Mondale will be there," Carter said.

As for the plans of his own administration, Carter admitted there would be difficulties in carrying out his goals. But he said he thinks his promises can be fulfilled, especially since he will be working with a Democratic Congress.

He mentioned hopes for overhauling the federal bureaucracy, for welfare and tax reform and for a new and comprehensive energy policy.

He said the narrow victory in the popular vote and the electoral college win gives him a mandate sufficient to tackle the tasks he wants. "We had a clear majority of the total electorate," he said.

Ark-Mo allowed rate increase

JEFFERSON CITY — Arkansas-Missouri Power Company, which had requested an increase in gross annual revenues from gas and electric service of $2,015,000, was allowed increases totaling $631,209 today by the Missouri Public Service Commission.

Its subsidiary, Associated Natural Gas Company, which had requested increases in revenues from gas service of $986,000, was allowed increases totaling $845,080.

The companies, which are headquartered in Blytheville, Arkansas, may place the new rates into effect on November 16. Arkansas-Missouri Power provides service in Southeast Missouri. Associated Natural Gas serves the Butler, Kirksville and Sikeston areas.

The Commission said that for residential customers, the increase in electric rates will be applied only to consumption of more than 400 kilowatt hours per month.

The company's present rate structure, the Commission said, is no longer appropriate because it reduces the per-kilowatt cost of electricity as consumption increases.

"While the change in technology that has occurred in recent years would require more significant rate structure modifications that could be made in this order," the Commission said, "it is time that the present declining block rates begin to be flattened."

"Until such time as information can be developed to make a more informed decision as to how the rate structure should be modified, we are of the opinion that a utility with a declining block rate should design rates which tend to flatten or level the blocks in the various rate classes."

Arkansas-Missouri Power was ordered to supply the Commission with prelininary information for a load research study that will be used as a basis for determining what further changs need to be made in the utility's rate structure.

By the first of the year, the Commission said, Arkansas-Missouri should begin planning with the Commission staff to begin the load research program by mid-1977.

The increase in electric rates for Arkansas-Missouri customers as a result of today's order is expected to be about 3 percent. For gas customers, the increase will be about 15 percent.

In the Butler district of Associated Natural Gas, the increase is expected to be about 28 per cent. In the Kirksville district, the increase is expected to be about 3 per cent, and in the Sikeston district, the increase is expected to be about 6 per cent. The percentage increases vary due to differences in the revenues and expenses for each of the divisions.

The Commission said that testimony from the general public in the case indicates that there is a great need for the companies to inform their customers about level-payment plans. These plans permit customers to pay approximately the same amount for gas and electricity during each month, eliminating the variations that occur as a result of seasonal fluctuations in energy use.

Arkansas-Missouri now has an electricity level-payment plan, but neither it not Associated Natural has such a plan for gas customers. The Commission ordered the

A 60-year- old Morehouse man was pronounced dead on arrival Thursday afternoon at Missouri Delta Community Hospital, where he was taken following a one-car accident on Welker Drive in Sikeston.

Harold Wilson Lacy died about 3:50 p.m. of a heart attack, according to Scott County Coroner E. E. "Gene" Nunnelee, who said death was due to the heart attack and not from injuries received in the accident.

The accident occurred when Lacy's car failed to make a turn in the road and struck a utility pole according to the Department of Public Safety. At the time of the accident, Lacy was leaving Malone and Hyde Inc., where he was employed.

Nunnelee said he was told that Lacy had been ill for about a week and complained about chest pains,but did not go see a doctor.

He was born in Morehouse on Sept. 29, 1916 to Mrs. Ora Lacy and the late Joseph D. Lacy of Morehouse.

On May 5, 1937 he married Alpha Leoda Brawley in Morehouse.

In addition to his widow and mother, other survivors are one daughter, Mrs. Anna Lou Rennier of St. Charles; one brother, Bernie Lacy of Sikeston; and one sister, Mrs. Clara Wilson of Mounds, Ill.

Two children preceded him in death.

Friends may call after 5 p.m. today at Watkins and Son Funeral home in Morehouse where services are scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday with the Rev. Don Heitman of Matthews officiating.

Burial will be in Garden of Memories Cemetery in Sikeston.

Elderly hunter found dead in Stoddard

DEXTER — The body of Henry Albert Cagle, a 65-year-old retired farmer who died of a heart attack while on a hunting trip, was found by a search party at approximately 9:10 p.m. Thursday on the north side of the Castor River east of the Leora community.

Stoddard County Coroner Ray Rainey, who was at the scene, attributed the death to a heart attack.

Cagle, who lived at 913 Sassafras, had left home between 7 and 8 a.m. Thursday to go hunting and did not return. Wayne Cagle, a son, reported him missing to the Stoddard County Sheriff's Department at 7:50 p.m., and a search party was organized.

The Stoddard County Civil Defense Unit and Highway Patrol Sgt. K. L. Lancaster and Trooper B. J. Kincaid participated in the search.

Cagle was born Dec. 14, 1910 at Leora and had formerly worked for Warren & Hooks Excavating Co. of Dexter.

He had lived in the Bloomfield and Dexter communities most of his life.

On April 2, 1932 at Bloomfield, he married Evelyn Jewell Walker, who survives. One son, Clinton Ray Cagle, preceded him in death in April 1948.

He was a member of the West Pleasant Valley church.

Other survivors include: four sons, Billy Dean Cagle of Abilene, Tex., Henry J. Cagle and Wayne Cagle of Poplar Bluff and Harold Gene Cagle of Tye, Tex.; one stepson, James Norman Walker of Roosevelt, Utah; four daughters, Mrs. L. B. (Helen Laverne) Fargerson and Mrs. Samuel E. Burial will follow in West Pleasant Valley Cemetery near Bloomfield.

October coldest month here in 24 years

October gas bills are going to be the highest in years, according to Ralph Wafler, manager of gas operations for Arkansas-Missouri Power Co. and its Missouri subsidiary, Associated Natural Gas Co., both headquartered in Blytheville, Ark.

The bills are rising, not because of increases in the price of gas, but because last month was the coldest October in the 22 years the firm has been keeping records, according to Wafler.

Records kept at the Weather Service office in Cairo, Ill., show it was the coldest October in 24 years.

The bills are in the mail now, according to Bill Neel, manager of the Associated Natural Gas Co. office in Sikeston. He said the bills were read at different times and some will include more of the month than others.

The temperature in Sikeston dropped to 22 degrees this morning, indicating that the cold weather may have settled in. A number of forecasters have predicted this winter will be colder than normal.

"We've been keeping temperature records for our service area for 22 years," Wafler said, "and we had more degree day deficiencies in October than for any October on record."

A degree day deficiency, or DDD, is the best method yet devised for comparing heating requirements from one year to another, he added.

In the last 22 years, the average October had 131 DDDs, Wafler said. This October there were 346 DDDs, he said, "making it the coldest October by far."

Wafler said Ark-Mo was calling last month's temperatures to the public's attention "so that when people receive their gas bills, they'll understand that they'll be paying more because they probably used more gas than in any other October in the past 22 years."

Portageville man's body found in field

PORTAGEVILLE — The body of Jacob Roach, 77, was found about 5 p.m. Thursday in a soybean field on the George Killion farm about one- fourth mile south of town.

There was no evidence of foul play, according to New Madrid County Coroner Gene Clayton who said death resulted from natural causes.

Roach reportedly had not been seen or heard from since Aug. 18, when he apparently wandered away from his home about a half a mile from where the body was found. He had moved to the area in July from Louisiana and had lived in a trailer next door to Melvina Cooper, a niece.

Mrs. Cooper told officers that Roach had been in good health but that he had to use a cane or stick when walking.

Future of PSC commissioners in doubt

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Voter adoption of a new law prohibiting utilities from charging customers for uncompleted power plant construction will mean lower rates for nearly one million customers within three months, according to a member of the Missouri Public Service Commission.

But the five commissioners are not expressing any opinions on the message of the voters in the election where the PSC itself was a focal point.

The two-to-one passage of the utility measure, which directly overturns one of the commission's policies, and the upset victory of Democrat Joseph Teasdale for governor has had an unsettling effect on the PSC.

"We just don't know what it will be like," said Commissioner Stephen Jones concerning the future under the administration of Teasdale, who attacked the PSC throughout his campaign.

Teasdale, in upsetting GOP Gov. Christopher S. Bond, had focused much of his campaign against the PSC, which he blamed for soaring utility rates and accused of being controlled by the utilities it regulates. He also aligned himself with the ballot proposition.

He said he would ask for the resignation of the four if elected, exempting Commissioner James Mulvaney because he considers him a consumer advocate.

Commissioner Charles Fain declined to take part in a joint interview with the commission on Thursday, but Jones, along with Commissioner Hugh Sprague and PSC Chairman A. Robert Pierce, indicated they were not ready to resign but had been considering that possibility.

"We have to consider all the options," Jones said. But they said Teasdale has yet to approach them on the issue, although it has been a major part of his campaign for the past three months.

They said they understood Teasdale was going to meet with the commission but there has been no contact from the governor-elect about any meeting.

Several members expressed concern that Teasdale's attacks on them, which they considered unfair at best, have also hurt morale of the staff, and while there has been no mass of resignations, many staff members "are looking over their shoulders now."

"We're independent, we haven't played politics in this election," Sprague said of the attacks. "The point is that we stayed out of it. we didn't respond to any of this criticism and I don't want to respond to it now."

The commission, however, does not see the results of the balloting as a public vote of no confidence, either in the election of Teasdale or in the adoption of a law that restricts PSC authority.

"If you give the people a chance to vote for a lower electric bill, they'll vote for a lower electric bill," Jones said. "The people are dissatisfied with rate increases and we're the only commission that can raise their cost of living."

David Leuthold of the University of Missouri surveyed 1,000 voters in Boone County as they left the polls on Tuesday and said the results led to the same conclusion.

"I see it as the people expressing not so much an attitude toward the Public Service Commission but toward the utilities, although we don't have much information to base that on," he said.

The PSC has allowed three utilities to pass on financing of uncompleted construction to customers, and under the newly-adopted law those costs will now have to be removed within three months. Customers of Kansas City Power & Light Co., which has the largest amount of such costs in its rates, Union Electric Co. and St. Joseph Light & Power Co. will be affected.

Although the exact procedure for removing the costs will not be determined for another 10 days, Jones said he was sure bills for all three companies' customers would be cut, at least for a while. Customers of KCP&L will get the largest reduction, the average customer saving 65 cents a month.

But Jones said the utilities will probably get back all or part of that reduction the next time they ask for increased rates because they will find it harder to finance power plant construction.

Any anti-commission feeling among the voters, the commissioners indicated, is probably due to the nature of the job and the lack of understanding people have about it.

"The problem is the commission has to wear two hats," Mulvaney said. "We have to be reasonable and fair to consumers and by law make sure that the person who puts his buck in (the utility stockholder) gets a fair and equitable return."

Traders are skeptical at stock market

By CROCKETT SCOTT

New life for the stock market on election eve brought many traders back into equities, but as a group they were highly skeptical.

That the economy's recovery cycle is slowing down was expected. Sales and profits naturally reflect greater gains from low points than they do from midway up the hill.

The reduction by a quarter point in the prime rate stimulated market activity, said traders who continue to stress their belief that we are in no more than a trading market for the present.

However, there is widespread belief that capital gains opportunities will be available in considerable number by year's end.

Wesco Financial could be in this group, in the belief of some Indianapolis Securities and Exchange Commission-registered security analysts. The stock trades on the big board around 15- 16 and has an equity per share value of $30.44, according to Standard & Poor's, as of Sept. 30 (your stockbroker can provide an update).

This California- based savings and loan firm has had relatively flat earnings the past couple of years or so, although a number of Indianapolis brokers like the equity for consideration as a year- end purchase.

Wesco Financial sold down around 10 earlier this year, and declined to about 8½ during 1975.

Recent adverse litigation has moved a lot of holders out of Levi Strauss & Co., famed jean and sportswear maker, in recent weeks, with the stock easing to the low 20's from the 40's.

Levi Strauss is more of a trading stock than a long- term investment, to many of these Kansas City investment analysts, as they look back on its price range during 1975 from a low of 13 to a high of 43 or so.

Earnings have been exceptional, but students of Lvei Strauss doubt that good times will be lasting. Hence, they would plan to sell out rather quickly if the stock moves up a few points in the new year.

Neal attends training session on real estate

Fred Neal, an associate at Charles M. Mitchell, Realtor, 305 Tanner St., attended an intensive one-day training session on real estate Oct. 30 at Poplar Bluff. The seminar, sponsored by the Missouri Association of Realtors, featured sessions in selling, listing, ethics and legal aspects of real estate sales.

The Missouri Association of Realtors sponsors the training session annually at various locations throughout the state in order to provide Realtors and their associates with the most current information regarding the real estate profession.

"The days of lip service to professionalism have passed," said Louis Glauser of Columbia, president of the Missouri Association of Realtors. "The rapidly changing real estate industry has made it patently clear that real estate brokers and salespersons must keep themselves informed.

"This is absolutely necessary if we are to stave off cumbersome and inhibitive government regulation of the real estate industry — an industry which has provided the opportunity for greater private ownership of land in this country than any country in the world. Continuing education is the vehicle real estate brokers and salespersons must use to be responsive to the changing needs of today's real estate market."

MURDER AT MAGYAROVAR

Anti-communist writers such as Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn are constantly confronted with an almost insurmountable problem. Such is the awful horror of the Soviet secret police system of imposing the will of the dictatorship on the people by terror,that it is virtually impossible to describe it through the written word.

In the USSR the secret police system is known as the KGB — formerly the NKVD — the Red equivalent of the Gestapo. In Hungary they are known as the AVH, or the "Avos."

It was the AVH, under General Gabor Peter, Soviet-trained Gestapo chief, who fabricated the "evidence" used to convict Josef Cardinal Mindszenty. Peter procured "witnesses" to testify against Mindszenty, very simply, by torture.

On October 27, 1956, a German news photographer, Rolf Gilhausen, arrived at dawn at the Hungarian border. There he was told by Hungarian border- command soldiers that cold- blooded mass murder had been committed just the day before at Magyarovar, a small town just 17 kilometers from the border.

AVH men, he was told, had shot into an unarmed crowd of people who had asked nothing more than the removal of Soviet emblems from the AVH barracks. Eighty-five dead, including young men, women and children, still remained in front of the AVH barracks.

"I shall never forget what I saw there," Gilhausen reported. "It was pure horror. Silent and grieving men led me to the dead, who lay in waxen stiffness, piled upon the floors of the chapel and mortuary of the cemetery. I was to see all of this unbelievable scene which so eloquently expresses the Communist concept that human life does not count where ideology is concerned."

In our dealings with the Communists, we should never forget the murder at Magyarovar. Remember October 26, 1956.

GIVE US A BRAKE

For some reason, a bumper sticker dreamed up by Friends of Animals, Inc., rubs us the wrong way. It reads: "Caution. I brake for animals."

Who doesn't brake for animals? It's a purely instinctive reaction, even for experienced motorists, and has nothing to do with one's feelings for or against four-legged critters who suddenly dart into the road. The trouble is that it has been known to have catastrophic consequences for the two-legged variety.

If the people who sport this bumper sticker are telling us that they love animals, fine. So do we.

If they are telling us that they will make every reasonable effort, with due regard for the safety of themselves and other motorists, to avoid hitting some unfortunate, confused animal in their path, so will everyone else who is not a dedicated sadist.

But if they are saying that they would deliberately invite a rear-end collision by slamming on their brakes to spare an animal, we just hope that when they do the guy behind them isn't driving a semi.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

SECULAR HUMANISM
By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

Most congressional bills or amendments that pass one house but are not voted on in the other house die quietly without further controversy.

An exception to this rule is an amendment to the education bill proposed by Congressman John Conlan which would have prevented the expenditure of federal funds in the public schools to promote the religion of secular humanism. This amendment passed by 222 to 174 in the House, then died in the Senate.

The Humanist magazine suddenly has become very exercised about the Conlan bill, as well as about other efforts by religious parents to stop what they believe is the teaching of secular humanism in the public schools.

Humanism is best defined by the humanists themselves. The Second Humanist Manifesto, published in 1973 and signed by many leading educators, states: "As in 1933, humanists still believe that traditional theism, especially faith in the prayer-hearing God, assumed to love and care for persons, to hear and understand their prayers, and to be able to do something about them, is an unproved and outmoded faith . . . We find insufficient evidence for belief in the existence of a supernatural; it is either meaningless or irrelevant to the question of the survival and fulfillment of the human race . . . We can discover no divine purpose or providence for the human species."

It is an historical fact that our Founding Fathers did not intend the 1st Amendment to prohibit all religious teachings except secular humanism from the schools. When the Constitution was written, religious instruction in school was considered an essential part of education.

Even in 1892, long after the public school system came into existence, the U.S. Supreme Court unanimously declared in the Church of the Holy Trinity vs. United States that our history provides a "mass of organic utterances that this is a Christian nation." It was not until the second half of the 20th Century that the Supreme Court forbade religious education, Bible reading and prayers from the public schools.

It is probable that what the majority of Supreme Court justices thought they were doing by these decisions was to guarantee neutrality as between those who believe in God and those who do not believe in God. In 1961 in Torcaso vs. Watkins, for example, the Supreme Court declared that neither the federal government nor any state can "aid those religions based on a belief in the existence of God as against those religions founded on different beliefs."

The court then went on to specify that "among religions in this country which do not teach what would generally be considered a belief in the existence of God are Buddhism, Taoism, ethical culture, secular humanism and others."

The trouble is that nature abhors a vacuum, and when all pro-God religious teaching was prohibited, the gap was filled in many schools by the affirmative teaching of secular humanism.

The First Humanist Manifesto, published in 1933, has had great status with many educators because it was endorsed by the father of progressive education, John Dewey.

Parents now are fighting back. Many are organizing private schools. In Ohio alone, nearly 100 new Christian schools have been started.

Even in the public schools, the parents probably can prevail. Since the Supreme Court has declared secular humanism to be a "religion," the same 1st Amendment that bars pro-God religious teaching necessarily must bar all anti-God religious teaching.

A GOOD POINT

A parallel between a Declaration of Independence complaint against King George III and today's regulatory burdens on industry was cited in a recent conference sponsored by the National Association of Manufacturers.

One of the complaints in the Declaration against the King is: "He has erected a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people, and eat out our substance."

An increasing number of companies are complaining about the costs of complying with the myriad of sometimes contradictory and counterproductive rules of federal reguatory agencies.

TEN MOST UNWANTED LIST

Everyone is familiar with the FBI's ten most WANTED list, but you may not be as familiar with the ten most UNWANTED drivers. Now is a good time to review your driving tactics and don't let yourself fall into any of the following categories:

1. The bumper chaser-- who follows the car ahead too closely... this driver is the fourth leading cause of highway accidents.

2. The driver who slows down in a curve-- instead of slowing down before he reaches it.

3. The signal jumper-- who spurts from a signal as it starts changing or crashes through just as the signal turns red.

4. The timid freeway merger-- who creeps into the acceleration lane, sometimes stops, and then spurts into the traffic flow.

5. The twilight zone driver-- who drives in the early darkness without lights.

6. The free wheeling lanechanger-- who swings back and forth, usually without proper signals.

7. The driver who rides his brakes-- and creates in the minds of the drivers uncertainty as to what he intends to do.

8. The driver you see in your rear vision mirror who is driving too fast-- and is likely to misjudge passing speed and distance.

9. The highbeam headlight driver-- who blinds approaching drivers.

10. And the oncoming speed driver-- who too often is responsible for head- on collisions.

CALLING THE TUNE

A few years ago the notion that to accept government funding was to invite government meddling was widely derided as Goldwater scaretalk. Thanks to HEW and the IRS, the laughter has died out. According to their newly effective rules, any college attended by a single student who receives a government grant or loan is subject to federal "guidelines" of the affirmative action varieties. Independent colleges-- notably Brigham Young and Michigan's Hillsdale College-- are fighting back against the reduction of their independence of Washington, and the American Association of Presidents of Independent Colleges and Universities is marshaling an organized resistance.

The rulings are basically trivial. Brigham Young has of course its own views, of religious provenance, on the status and dignity of women, which in fact it has strongly promoted. It does, however, regard them as a distinct sex, and the collision this has engendered with the government decrees amounts, the college insists, to an infringement of its right to worship. Hillsdale, a fortress of the principles of liberty, has always shunned and despised government money-- only to be told, on a small pretext, that it doesn't matter. The principle of equality in this way becomes a gun at the temple of every independent institution.

There is a certain logic in the rulings-- he who pays the piper calls the tune. The principle is now invoked by the same liberals who once scoffed at the idea it would ever apply to federal aid to education. But it is at last obvious that such aid is aimed against the independence of colleges and, in effect, against the continued existence of those colleges that refuse to surrender their independence. Under the ingenious new application, federal power is used to limit rather than to expand the student's range of choice.

Whatever justification they may have, the new regulations exemplify the state of things in America generally: a bureaucracy adds new meanings out of existing laws, and applies them imperiously, in effect changing the laws themselves. And a society whose laws change capriciously is a lawless society.

A DESTRUCTIVE MYTH

"Vocal local groups want a limitless supply of energy at low prices' they want clean air, pure oceans, restricted mining; they want a continued high standard of living. There is a superabundance of demands these days founded on the myth of unlimited availabilities. And our representatives in Congress have appointed themselves the dispensers of this generosity. Instead of leveling with the voters, they are appeasing them. Instead of asking for restraint for meaningful conservation, they block virtually every proposal aimed at building up our domestic energy supplies and diminishing our costly, habit- forming oil imports."

TOO MUCH FAITH IN WORDS ALONE

We Americans have almost a blind faith in words.

The words of a politician running for office. The words of a treaty. The words of a used car or real estate salesman offering us a bargain.

We are sometimes right. There are candidates who keep their word. And countries which keep treaties. There are more honest salesmen then shysters.

The problem is, our faith in words is often so great we do not distinguish between the honest politician and the dishonest, the country which keeps its promises and the nation which doesn't and the salesman with squinty morals and the one who backs up his word with service.

Now treaties which are honestly entered into and meticuously honored by both sides can prevent shooting wars and economic wars, insure the protection of American citizens abroad and promote human rights.

But such values come only when the other signatories have the same understanding of words that we have and when all the nations involved are aiming at fairness.

For there is no treaty written which cannot be broken "legally" by playing with words, especially when the official text is in two or more languages. We saw the effects of this double- meaning syndrome in the SALT I nuclear control treaty with the Soviet Union, in which red- faced American negotiators admitted they could charge the USSR with no violations because it was possible to twist the words in virtually any manner the Soviet Union chose. They could build 50 per cent larger silos. They could test radar for illegal uses. They could overbuild on long- range weapons capable of reaching the U.S. and call these middle-range.

We saw the same result in the pact negotiated with Hanoi at the time of our withdrawal from South Vietnam. And in the pact negotiated with Pyongyang when we reached a "truce" with the North Koreans at Panmunjom. And in the human rights agreements which have been so popular in recent years, but which seem to apply with meticulous rigidity even to minor infringements in the West and not at all to horrendous disregard for human rights in the Soviet Union and other totalitarian countries.

This is not to contend we should end our attempts at detente or make no more treaties with anyone. It does men that we should look at more than the words on any proposal and what they mean to us. What do they mean to the other countries signing, what is their reputation for living up to their obligations in spirit as well as in law? What do we have if we find serious violations? Can we even prove violations effectively if we are dealing with closed societies?

But above all we need some independent check on what we're getting. Before you buy a house you bring in an independent appraiser. Before you buy a used car you take it to an independent mechanic. The U.S. State Department doesn't do this. Not under Dr. Henry Kissinger. Not under his six immediate predecessors.

We suffer the same blindness politically at home. We are deluged with public service organizations presenting us with bundles of words on what each candidate has said and how each man's promises differ (on paper) from those of his opponent. We are awarded thick copies of party platforms and with reams of analysis on the goodness or the badness of the stands of the Democrats and Republicans.

Who is to tell us which candidates keep their promises and which do not and which invariably lie through their teeth? Who is to tell us what a candidate means when he guarantees every man or woman a job who wants one? Or a stronger defense with a multibillion dollar cut in the defense budget? Or multibillion dollar programs with built- in cost and quality controls?

Somewhere we will have to find some independent appraisers or mechanics.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Socialists' Power Strategy:
British labor drive to manage cities, without being elected, in high gear

WASHINGTON — Her Britannic Majesty's political reporting chaps here, official and unofficial, have "observed" our presidential campaign with mirthful mystification. But bloopers to the contrary, our system isn't nearly as strange as what is developing in British politics -- and soon enough may be heading our way.

The United Kingdom's most powerful unions, already controlling the national government, now are revving up their campaign to take over local governments without bothering much to get into city and county elections.

What that national labor movement, the Trades Union Congress, wants is full co-determination (co-management) with election officials in these local governments -- even without having their union officials and shop stewards elected to municipal office.

They won't object to having their people run for office, for the equivalent of our mayors or city council people or county executives. In Britain today it's against the law, for example, for bus drivers, sanitation workers, public service clerks, etc., to stand for election in the municipalities which employ them. But the unions soon will have this changed. This is one of their prime objectives.

When I first reported from London the big unions' drive for such co-management rights for the two million public service employes, the campaign was being geared. Now the unions have worked it into a full legislative war. Officially the proposal has been sent to the Ministry for Planning and Local Government. There it is being given full consideration by the national labor regime. In effect, what this says is the unions want the same kind of "industrial democracy" in the public sector which the German unions have in the private industrial sector -- "co-determination." Already this is being studied in one of London's subdivisions.

In Britain the Trades Union Congress calls this "industrial democracy." Meaning, they want a full 50-50 representation on private industry's governing boards.

In America we call them the board of directors. In the U.S. "industrial democracy" would put auto union chief Leonard Woodcock and his vice presidents such as Irv Bluestone, Ken Bannon, or Doug Fraser on the boards of GM, Ford and Chrysler. These labor leaders could get on to any of them. They needn't be limited, say, to the firm with which they bargain, as Irv Bluestone is with GM. He could sit on Ford's board -- if we had any version of co-determination.

It's all very pertinent now. In Britain, inside specialists predict there will be widespread co-determination "in a decade." Maybe less. It all depends, they add, on the upcoming report of the Labor government's independent inquiry on industrial democracy, known as the Bullock Commission because it's chaired by Lord Bullock. It has been "s[illegible]" since August 1975 and sho[illegible] have had its report in by [illegible]st August. It's expected to [illegible] the co-management proc[illegible] (which of course will affect e[illegible] foreign-owned corporations su[illegible] as GM at Vauxhall, Ford at Da[illegible]ham and Chrysler at Coventry.

And now along comes [illegible]e insiders' insider. Paul Shaw, vice president of Chase Manahttan Bank, saying take co-determination and industrial democracy seriously. We can also expect it in America in a decade or so. And Shaw has studied this phenomenon across the world.

Thus, with dynamic public sector unions the fastest growing labor organizations in the U.S. -- including divisions of the Teamsters Brotherhood -- the British campaign is more than just a hothouse study which calls for labor decision-making, representation on municipal and county governing boards as well as on industry's governing boards.

Especially so because of the full triphammer support behind this in Britain, coming from the ever-colorful, devoutly proletarian Jack Jones, leader of the almost two-million-member Transport and General Workers Union (teamsters, dockers, etc.).

"The union wants to change the face of town halls and local councils," says one of his official statements. "It wants ... for its own workers' reps to have full 50-50 power sharing at shop floor levels."

Jones wants two workers representatives elected by "their union workmates on all the key policymaking committees and sub-committees at town halls."

Jones wants "workers' representatives at full council meetings with the right to speak like any other councillors."

The powerful British transport union chief recognizes that the workers' representatives still don't have the right to vote at these policymaking meetings of elected local officials. So he and his colleagues are fighting to change the law. But he does want "a real shakeup at works level with an end to the old-fashioned joint consultation system which has too often meant talking about decisions in workers' own departments after they have been made higher up."

Then comes the coup de grace. Finally, Jones says, "The union wants a new system of real sharing of decision-making with new joint union-management boards in each works department." These would have co-management decision-making powers over hiring, "work organization" and future city planning.

In effect, British unions could veto decisions made by elected officials -- and control the cities and councils without a vote. That's even stranger than our election system.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

The Capitol-Korea Connection

and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- The South Korean effort to seduce members of Congress has been two-tiered. Rev. Sun Myung Moon, the Korean holy man, took the high, ecclesiastical road, and Tongsun Park, a Korean entrepreneur, followed the low, wayward road.

Both men have been tied to the South Korean lobbying campaign by the Washington Post, which cited "electronic evidence." According to the Post, a tape recording apparently exists of a discussion between South Korea's President Park Chung Hee, Moon aide Park Bo Hi and the shadowy Tongsun Park.

At the meeting, the three men worked out "a plan to influence U.S. congressmen," the Washington Post reported.

The South Korean government has denied any connection between President Park and entrepreneur Park. Moon's man has denied the meeting ever took place and has challenged his accusers to produce the alleged recording. There have also been over-the-shoulder denials from Tongsun Park at airports from Tokyo to Paris.

Both the ecclesiastic and the entrepreneur, nevertheless, suddenly became active on Capitol Hill in the early 1970s. By the beginning of this year, we were able to count 19 Moon missionaries operating on Capitol Hill. We reported on Jan. 12, 1976: "They stroll the hallways daily, buttonholing senators and congressmen, offering free trips and other inducements."

Moon himself made two evangelical appearances on Capitol Hill before our calls made it impossible for him to find a sponsor who would arrange a room for him. At no time did we question his right to deliver a religious message; we were troubled only by the political overtones. Congressmen reported to us, for example, that Moon missionaries had offered them free trips to Korea.

Those who heard Moon preach on Capitol Hill say he delivered a strong anti-Communist message, laced with Christian philosophy. They recall that he linked the United States, Israel and South Korea as the three great bulwarks against communism. He also defended Richard Nixon during the Watergate crisis.

He spoke in Korean, with Park Bo Hi delivering the translations. Koreans told us that Moon's remarks were often rambling and ambiguous, but the translations invariably were precise and pointed. Our sources have the impression that Park, indeed, is the Rasputin behind the benevolent, smiling Moon.

Each of the evangelist's appearances on Capitol Hill was attended by about 100 people. Perhaps 15 to 20 were members of Congress, the remainder aides and secretaries. Rep. Bill Chappel Jr., D.-Fla., introduced Moon at the first rally; Rep. Richard Ichord, D.-Mo., made the second introduction.

The Moon movement's biggest catch in Congress was House Speaker Carl Albert. We reported on Dec. 9, 1975, that Susan Bergman, a young, hazel-eyed disciple of the Korean religious-political cultist, had developed a curious relationship with the powerful speaker.

In the mornings, she would greet him in the hallway and present him with flowers. Then she would brew Ginseng tea for him in the small kitchen down the hall from his office. She would serve it to him in the speaker's ornate chambers, where she stayed for an hour or two each morning.

Albert described the Moon missionary to us as "just a nice girl, a very nice girl, a Jewish girl from New York. She got all hepped up on the Lord Jesus and she just wants to share it. I think that's a nice thing. She's trying to convert me." As he talked, we noticed a black-covered, gold-trimmed copy of Moon's catechism, "Divine Principle," on the speaker's shelf.

While the Rev. Moon quoted the Bible to religious congressmen, Tongsun Park allegedly passed out cash and gifts to the irreligious. The Washington Post, quoting federal investigators, has charged that he distributed between $500,000 and $1 million each year to congressmen and other Washington officials.

We first got wind of Park's activities in early 1974 when we caught him on a strange trip with Rep. Richard Hanna, D.-Calif. We told the story on April 1, 1974.

A classified cable from the U.S. embassy in Sana, Yemen, reported that the congressman "was joined here by a Mr. Park, a former South Korean national engaged in shipping, elaboration of foreign investment opportunities and apparently political lobbying in Washington."

The curious pair also visited Saudi Arabia and Egypt. Indeed, an obliging State Dept. arranged accommodations for the Korean operator.

In a classified cable to the various embassies, the department asked "each post except Cairo" to ensconce Park in a "single room located next to or near room reserved for" the congressman. In Cairo, telegrammed State, "Mr. Park requests a suite on the river side of the Hilton."

We asked Park why he happened to be touring the Middle East with a congressman. They traveled together, said Park, because Hanna "is like my brother."

We also learned that Park was entertaining members of Congress in the posh, exclusive Georgetown Club, which he established in Washington.

Despite these reports in 1974, the State Dept. didn't get around to investigating Tongsun Park's activities until November 1975.

Psalm 96, Verse 1

European women: lib has just begun

LONDON (AP) — Women are assuming a growing and more important role in Western European politics, stepping into jobs as Cabinet ministers, party leaders or top political aides.

But some who have made it to the top caution that their political success doesn't mean the women's battle for equality is over. And they wish they weren't centers of attention just because they are women.

"One must not imagine that the women's issue is suddenly solved because a woman has become foreign minister," says Karin Soden, Sweden's first woman foreign minister. She serves in the centrist government of Thorbjorn Falldin which came to power in the Sept. 19 election.

"I'm tired of being regarded as a phenomenon," says Margaret Thatcher, who in February 1975 became Britain's first woman party leader. She would also become the country's first woman prime minister if her Conservative party wins the next national election.

"The idea of a woman making decisions and giving instructions is not yet easily acceptable in Greece and is viewed suspiciously by some male colleagues," says Lina Koutiafri, who in October became undersecretary of education and only the third woman since World War II to hold a Greek cabinet post.

West Germany's outgoing president of the Bundestag, the lower house of parliament, is a woman: Annemarie Reger. Franca, Italy, Britain, Austria, Greece, The Netherlands and Sweden all have women in their Cabinets. Antwerp, Belgium, has a woman mayor.

But most of them would agree that women are far from fulfilling their potential in a field long considered in most countries a bastion of male chauvinism.

The relatively recent emergence of women in Western European politics may be attributed in varying degree to women's liberation movements in their countries, but few of the successful women politicians consider themselves militant feminists.

Britain's Mrs. Thatcher, 51, and a mother of grown twins, says she doesn't have much time for women's lib. "I had a Cabinet post before the term women's lib became trendy," she said.

But as recently as 1973, when Mrs. Thatcher was education secretary in the then-Conservative government of Prime Minister Edward Heath, she said she didn't think a woman could become prime minister in her lifetime.

Now she expresses confidence that Britain's voters will oust the Labor party government of Prime Minister James Callaghan and sweep the Conservatives to power and to the prime minister's job.

Another woman politician not regarded as a militant feminist is Simone Veil, 49, French minister of health since July 1974 and the only full-ranking woman minister in the government of President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

"I am a minister because I am a woman, not in spite of it," said Mrs. Veil, a lawyer and magistrate and wife of the director-general of the French intercontinental airline UTA.

Soon after her appointment she steered a bill through the National Assembly authorizing abortions for the first time in modern French history. Shortly afterward, a poll rated her the most popular member of the government.

Some of the women who have made it in politics feel they have a responsibility to help other members of their sex achieve full equality.

West Germany's Annemarie Renger, for example, faced some opposition from cautious feminists in her Social Democratic party in 1972 when she became Bundestag president, the highest political position ever held by a woman in her country.

"We fear that a woman Bundestag president would be seen and portrayed as proof that discrimination against women is not really all that bad," they wrote in urging her to turn down the post.

But Mrs. Renger, 57, replied: "I regard that as a well-meaning but very unpolitical statement. It's my conviction that one should use every opportunity given us women to show that we can assume a place from which we can help to change the role of women."

Other successful women politicians say they would just like to be treated on equal terms with men and get on with the job and not have to be proving themselves over and over.

By ANN O'LEARY
Women's Editor

The day she wrote her first song is as clear in Sandra Bloemer's mind as yesterday. She was sitting in front of her television set on April 3, 1973, listening to a man giving his religious testimony. She was very touched, she recalls.

"I asked God to use me in a way that would glorify his name," Sandra says in her soft voice. "There was a pencil and paper in front of me, and I began to write. My hand could hardly keep up with the pencil."

The result was a gospel song, the first of 60 that Sandra has written since that day in 1973.

More amazing than this, perhaps, is that she can only play two of the 60 songs she has written. She is a "hunt-and- peck" pianist right now, as some people are with typewriters.

And more amazing than that, perhaps, is that two of her songs have been published by Kingsland Publishing Co., an affiliate of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. Sandra's agents who have had her songs published operate under the name of Professional Artists Recording Studio. They are based in St. Louis.

Sandra checked out Professional Artists thoroughly before she did business with them. She is very serious about her songwriting and wanted to make sure her publishers were reputable, which she says their company is.

And Donna Tramel, a representative of Professional Artists, says the feeling of respect is mutual.

"The songs of Sandra's I heard are very good," said Mrs. Tramel. "If we think the material is good and will sell, we publish it."

Mrs. Tramel explains that the process of entering the music industry is long and complex. The songs need to be coprighted, studied, published and hopefully, recorded. It all takes time, as Sandra discovered after sending her material to several publishers and having it returned, sometimes not even opened. The publishers who did look at her songs thought they were all good, but said they had so many songs to process that they just couldn't use any more at the time.

Not very encouraging. Downright depressing, in fact.

And it bewildered Sandra Bloemer because she regards her music as inspiration from God, as his gift. Because of this belief, she naturally assumed her work would be accepted right away.

She did receive some encouragement, though, from songwriters she wrote to such as Elmo Mercer and Bill Gaither. They wrote back praising her music and telling her she must not give up. Most of them had a long wait between the first hint of inspiration and sweet success.

Then finally one day, the housewife- turned songwriter decided she had done all she could to "get this music out into the world" and that the rest was up to God. Miraculously, if you can forgive the pun, her luck took a definite turn for the better. The very next day, she received what was to be her last rejection. Where there had been no offers, suddenly there were three. Sandra chose the St. Louis Company.

"The minute I turned it over to God, the tide turned," she says.

The titles of the songs already published are "Only Jesus" and "Sing Me a Song About Jesus." They are more upbeat than most of her songs, and while she likes them, they would not have been picked as her favorites. She likes the slower ones.

She also admits to writing country western songs of the slow, serious variety, but has never submitted any of those for publication.

"I've always loved gospel music," she says. Two of her favorite performers are Tammy Wynette and Jimmy Swaggart.

Sandra's formal musical training consists of four piano lessons to date. When she took up the pen to write that first song, she wrote out the words and hummed the melody as she went along. Now she uses a tape recorder and sings into it.

Sandra knows no musical notation, so she has a friend, Carolyn Deal of St. Louis, arrange the songs for her. Mrs. Deal, whose maiden name was Northcutt, is a former Sikeston resident and has been a friend of Sandra's for several years. But it takes time to arrange the songs, and Sandra writes them so fast her friend has a difficult time keeping up with her. Sandra says only 20 or so of the 60 songs she has under her belt have been arranged.

"I take no credit for my music," Sandra insists. "I just hold a pencil. It's like taking dictation from God."

The main problem with a gift like Sandra's is that it has little or no consideration for time or place. Sandra's songs have come to her in her car, on her way to work at Bloemer's Grocery, and even in the shower. They have been written on cash register paper.

"I write on anything I can get my hands on," she laughs. A couple of days ago, she "discovered" another song in an old city directory. It hasn't been arranged, but she remembered the melody the minute she saw it, even though it's two years old.

"I never forget one of my melodies," she says. This is fortunate, because the only place that many of those melodies exist is in Sandra Bloemer's head.

The words are written down, though. Most of them.

"Some are in my head, some are under the piano bench," the writer admits.

Sometimes she takes up her Bible, a pen and paper and goes to sit before the fire in the living room of the home she shares with her husband, Bill, and their two children, Brad, 11, and Bethany, 7. She wants to write a song and she tries hard to do it. But she can't.

"It's always when I'm doing something else," she says wistfully.

Although her first song took a mere three minutes to write, Sandra says not all her music comes to her so easily. Once she developed a chorus and one verse to a song, but the second verse eluded her for six months.

"I think God wants me to work," she remarks. So sometimes she takes up her Bible and "studies," going through the book to find passages which may give her an idea.

Petite Sandra has other activities besides her music, but writing gospel music is her favorite pasttime. Plants flourish in her cozy home, and she collects antiques and primitives.

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Herman Newman of Sikeston Route One. She seems to come by her talent naturally. On the wall of the Bloemer's living room, just above the piano, is a decoupaged copy of one of Sandra's contracts with her publishing company. Above the contract is a very good likeness of the writer, done by her mother, who Sandra says is "a very talented person." Her father plays the guitar.

Sandra, a member of the Miner Baptist Church, says her religion has always been an important influence in her life.

"I just wish every child could have had my childhood. That's the most important thing in life, taking your children to church."

Another important thing is finding something you enjoy doing and doing it well. Sandra Bloemer's songs are making their way into the world. She has already realized some profit from them and may realize much more. But she says the money is not important to her, and I believe it.

"It's just wonderful to be able to express in a way to glorify His name."

Better communication makes better couple

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Most married couples don't listen to each other, and many get into fights as a result, says a professor who helps couples learn to communicate better.

"The one thing that's real important is accuracy," said Jeff Edelson, a University of Wisconsin social scientist.

"Very often one person will say something to the other when the other is busy, they'll both assume something on that basis, and as a result nobody did the shopping when each of them thought the other would do it," he said.

Edelson, who oversees "couple communication" classes aimed at easing marital strife, said husbands and wives often misunderstand each other by trying to work out major decisions in piecemeal conversations.

"You should not try to decide whether to buy a new car or something like that by talking about it a little bit, now and then," he said. "You should set aside a time to talk about it, like after dinner, to spend as much time as you need going over all the details involved in the decision."

Edelson recommends basic steps toward better communication, such as calling your spouse's name before you begin talking, and making sure you and your spouse are looking at each other during conversations.

"Make sure everything you said was accurate and it was understood," he said. "If you both know why you're doing it, then it's okay to ask if they understood what you were saying."

Just as the speaker has to concentrate on saying exactly what is meant, the listener has to ask: "Am I hearing that right?" he said.

Understanding each other's words, however, is only part of the battle, Edelson said. "What you say is important, but how you say it is even more important," he said. "A reasonable request in the wrong tone or with the wrong expression can be a disaster."

For instance, one of the worst thing you can say, according to Edelson, is: "You always leave the music up too loud." He suggested instead: "I'm sorry, I'm trying to concentrate on this right now and the music is bothering me."

Many French families now serve an American specialty: grated raw carrot salad. The French dress the salad with lemon juice or an oil-and-vinegar mixture instead of using mayonnaise as is often done in the U.S.A.

Trick-or-treat surprise

The Alex Homra family of East Prairie received a double treat for Halloween. Not only did Mrs. Homra give birth to a son, Brian, Monday, but the Scott County Porkettes gave the family pork products in the amount of the baby's weight, 7 pounds, 12 ounces.

The Scott County Porkettes have decided to give the parents of the first baby born close to Halloween pork products each year.

Homosexual turns to God

Dear Ann Landers: God bless you for your reply to the young man who was despondent over his homosexuality. I spent 14 years of my life (I'm 30 now) trying to accept my homosexuality. I was the son of a small-town businessman and scared to death to admit to myself or anyone else that I was gay.

Finally I met a man I wanted to settle down with. Although we hid our relationship from all but a small circle of friends, we had a wonderful life and were very happy together.

When he left me I felt as if my whole world had fallen apart. I was brought up in a Christian home and heard so much about the sinfulness of homosexuality that I stopped going to church.

Fortunately, I met a kind and understanding clergyman who spent many hours helping me see that God loves all his children -- gay, straight, whatever.

Since all else failed, I took his advice and gave God a chance. Ann, it was the best decision I ever made. I prayed, "Lord, I am gay and I don't think I can change. Please take control of my life. Thy will be done."

Soon after I prayed I felt serene and at peace. A month later I met another man with whom I plan to spend the rest of my life. I also found the courage to tell my parents. They accepted it beautifully.

I don't recommend to all gays that they tell their parents, but I do urge them to go directly to God, as I did. I have never felt so fulfilled and contented. Life is beautiful. -- Your Friend

Dear Friend: Thank you for sharing your experience. And now a word to all who read the Bible faithfully: Please don't tell me to look up Genesis 19, Romans, chapter 1, Leviticus 18:22 or 1 Corinthians 6:9-10, etc.

Help is where you find it.

Dear Ann Landers: This letter is for "Skinny Winner," the woman who dieted for her husband's sake, went into therapy after regaining her weight the second time, ditched Mr. Turn-Off and lost her 55 pound again.

I'm a 16-year-old girl who weighs about 30 pounds more than she should. I recently decided I am NOT going to be fat the rest of my life. I can and will get myself down to a size 8 dress and stay there.

So far I've lost ten pounds. Both my father and boyfriend are anti-fat. Daddy fought the weight battle last year and lost 50 pounds. A few years ago I dieted and lost 30 pounds but I gained it back because I had done it for the men in my life. This time it's for ME.

I have accepted full responsibility for my fatness. No one puts food into my mouth. And no excuse is good enough to be fat. It's not only unattractive but a health hazard.

Listen, men with fat wives or girlfriends, mothers with fat daughters. Get off their backs. Leave them alone. I know from experience if you lay off they'll do something about it eventually. Let it be for themselves, not for you. It's the only way they will keep the weight off forever. -- Thinner Now Than A Month Ago

Dear Thinner: Beautiful! What an upper for those fatties out there who need emotional support. Let me know when you hit size 8.

Don't flunk your chemistry test. Love is more than one set of glands calling to another. If you have trouble making a distinction you need Ann's booklet, "Love or Sex and How to Tell the Difference." Send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request and 50 cents in coin to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Pet sand for Christmas?

By ERMA BOMBECK

Remember those wonderful people who brought you the "Pet Rock" in time for Christmas giving last year?

Well, they're back again and this time it's the Sand Breeding kit. This one contains two glass test tubes filled with "male" and "female" sand, along with a fully- illustrated, easy- to- read training manual.

The manual gives you "how to" hints on how to get your sand to breed and grow a beach, a desert, hard- to- fill landfill, kitty litter, or filler for hotel ashtrays.

Have you ever wondered what it would be like day after day to sell these faddies? It could make a real yo- yo out of you.

I interviewed a salesperson at one of the local gift shops that carries a complete line of these mind blowers.

"How are the pet rocks moving?" I asked her.

"They slowed up a bit after Christmas," she said, "but the Stud rocks are going well."

"How do the Stud rocks work?" I asked.

"How would a Stud rock work?" she said disgustedly. "It mates and has pebbles. Then, there are the Horny stones, complete with booklet."

"I don't want to see it. What's this kit all about?"

She showed me a glass bowl, complete with sand and rocks. "This is our invisible goldfish bowl. Hey, I wouldn't put my finger in that bowl. It contains the invisible piranha." Instinctively, I pulled my hand out of the bowl and felt like a fool.

"Where?"

"Here in the nest. You have to sit on 'em for 118 hours before they hatch. Oh, and these are good this year— the Miracle Rocks. They change color with your mood like the rings did last year."

As I walked toward the door, I discovered something. I was smiling and had been all during the conversation. For a few minutes, I had forgotten about U.S. foreign policy, busing, abortion, my son's report card, natural disasters, and the way my car shook when I got it up to 35 mph. Would I pay $3, $4, or even $5 for this ridiculous instant joke? Absolutely not. It was silly. I'm a full- grown, mature woman with more regard for money than that.

Besides, when my pet rock ran away from home last year I got stuck with a jump suit and a water bed for it!

Mocha pie-try it

By CECILY BTOWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

COME FOR DESSERT!
Mocha Pie Coffee

MARYELLEN SPENCER'S MOCHA PIE

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- ½ cup sugar, divided
- 1 tablespoon instant coffee powder
- 1 tablespoon cocoa
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs, separated
- 1 cup milk
- ¼ cup coffee liqueur
- 1 cup heavy cream, whipped
- Chocolate Meringue Shell, see below

Mix together gelatin, ¼ cup sugar, instant coffee, cocoa and salt in saucepan. Beat together egg yolks and milk; stir into gelatin mixture. Place over low heat; stir constantly until gelatin dissolves and mixture thickens slightly, 8 to 10 minutes. Remove from heat; stir in coffee liqueur. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry; gradually add remaining ¼ cup sugar and beat until very stiff. Fold into gelatin mixture; fold in whipped cream. Turn into Chocolate Meringue Shell. Chill overnight. Garnish with additional whipped cream and candy coffee beans. Yield: 8 servings.

Chocolate Meringue Shell: Beat 3 egg whites with ¼ teaspoon cream of tartar and ¼ teaspoon salt until stiff but not dry. Gradually add ¾ cup sugar, about 1 tablespoon at a time, and beat until very stiff. Fold in 1 square unsweetened chocolate, finely grated. Spread over bottom and side of well greased 9-inch pie plate; push up side to make high, attractive rim. Bake in 275 degree oven 1 hour. Cool before filling.

This lovely recipe comes from a 2-volume paperback, "The More or Less Cookbooks" by Maryellen Spencer (Van Nostrand Reinhold).

If you are using empty cans from fruit or vegetables for baking fruit-and-nut loaves, fill them no more than one-half to two-thirds full. Batters rise during baking!

Pink grapefruit has been around since 1913 when it was first developed. It's a lovely grapefruit to serve half-shell style as a first course or a dessert for a company dinner.

County 4-H clubs hold council meeting

Representatives of seven Mississippi County 4-H clubs met recently for the quarterly 4-H Council meeting.

November 29 was the tentative date set for the 4-H Recognition Night at St. Henry School auditorium. The potluck dinner will begin at 6:30 p.m. to be followed by the program including the recognition of service given by the adult leaders and project completion by members. The program will also include special awards for members who have made outstanding achievements in project work in the past year.

County Extension Youth Agent, Ted Cox displayed one of the county trophies which was awarded to Pam Mueller and Phil Rolwing, who were the highest scoring 4-H members in the First Annual County Bicycle Rodeo held in Charleston Sept. 18, with 43 participants. Pam and Phil represented Mississippi County in the 4-H Bicycle Rodeo event at the Mid-South Fair in Memphis on Sept. 25.

Also participating at the Mid-South Fair from the county was Mary Jeanne Stricker placing second in the 4-H Dress Revue event. Other participants at Memphis included a team in the 4-H Seed Identification and Crop Judging event, David Reinbott, William Watson, Mary Pierceall, Randy Brazel, and Darrell Watson, alternate. 4-H leaders of the county, Pat Mueller, Betty Darnell, Margaret Halter, Ted Cox and Marilyn Williams assembled a display booth at the fair with the emphasis on the growth of 4-H in our county.

Other participation of 4-H members included the County Achievement Days, Aug. 16 and 17, held in downtown Charleston with 21 of the 23 county clubs exhibiting a total of 270 project articles. Dress revue and good grooming events were also held. The 4-H Council will ask leaders to encourage members to give project demonstrations next year on Achievement Day.

Recognition was given those members who exhibited project articles at the Southeast Missouri District Fair in Cape Girardeau, Sept. 13-18. Members from 19 clubs in the county participated taking first, second and third place honors.

The Annual Bootheel Area Leader Training Conference is to be held Tuesday from 9:30 a.m.-3 p.m. at the Delta Center in Portageville. Programs to be presented are "Projects and Activities in 4-H" by Assistant Director of Youth and 4-H Programs Nelson Trickey of the University of Missouri Cooperative Extension Service, and "Youth Involvement in Community Development" by John Woodall, state community development specialist. Lunch will be served. Leaders are encouraged to attend. For more information call the extension office, phone 683-6129.

A county leader training session was discussed with the emphasis on teaching 4-Hers how to fill out national report forms and achievement summaries and also how to give project demonstrations. Further discussion will be included in the Jan. 10 council meeting.

Youth Agent Ted Cox reported that the popcorn sales are going well and suggested that the council might want to reorder. Proceeds help to support 4-H activities in the county.

Mr. Cox reported that Sew-With-Cotton contest application forms and rules are now available at the Extension Office for thedistrict competition in April. The contest is open to boys and girls. For more information call 683-6129.

The State Extension Service is now preparing a new project called "Barbeque" which will include methods for barbequeing a variety of meats and will involve the opportunity for competition at the Missouri State Fair. Mr. Cox also suggested that leaders encourage interested members to take the "Forestry" project which has many opportunities to earn awards.

Ann Landers

Babysitter gets stuck

Dear Ann Landers: Last Saturday night, my husband and I planned a quiet evening at home. At about 6:15 p.m. there was a knock at the door. It was the woman who lives on the bottom floor of this apartment building. She was in a panic. The sitter didn't show up. She and her boyfriend (living together) were due at a wedding reception at 6:30. Would I take the 10-year-old girl?

I asked what time they'd be back. She replied, "For sure by 2:00 a.m." I told her I'd set up a cot in the den and to have a good time. She was so grateful.

The girl went to sleep at 10:00. My husband and I stayed up till 1:30, thinking they'd surely be home any minute.

At 7:30 a.m. I heard the girl walking around. They never did come to get her. The girl wanted to go home, which was fine with me. I had a terrible night's sleep and needed to rest.

Today is Friday and I haven't heard one word from her mother. No thank-you, no money offered. Can you imagine such nerve?

Any suggestions on what I should do? – Been Had In Elyria

Dear El: Forget it. If you expected to be paid you should have talked money when the woman asked you to help her out.

Of course, she's a clod. She surely should have thanked you. But the fact that she didn't will make it easier for you to say no next time.

Dear Ann Landers: Please help those of us who are struggling with a moral obligation to our parents. My mother, who is physically and financially able to maintain her own home, came to live with us when Dad passed away. She simply announced, "I don't want to live by myself."

We have a beautiful shopping center in our city, a lovely senior citizens center, and an excellent library, but Mother is not interested in doing anything on her own. She just assumes that our friends enjoy having her around -- which they don't.

Must we take her along on every vacation when actually what we need is a vacation from HER? Why do some parents believe that their grown children have an obligation to provide them with entertainment? Please reply in print. There are so many of us who need answers. – No Door In Albany

Dear N.D.: Doors are useless unless one knows a door when he sees it and has the courage to turn the knob. You missed the "door" when your mother announced she was coming to live with you. You should have suggested at the time that she find a companion or a smaller place.

Some children love to have a parent share their home. You, obviously (and many others), find it burdensome. So – free yourself by refusing to be imposed upon. You CAN if you have the fortitude. If you haven't -- stop complaining.

CONFIDENTIAL to To Wed or Not to Wed, What Are the Statistics: About 32 per cent of all Catholics who married last year chose non-Catholic mates. Almost the same percentage of Jews married out of their faith. Ten years ago it was about 17 per cent. How do I feel about it? Less rigid than I did 20 years ago.

Going to a wedding? Giving one? Or standing up in one? Even if you're already married Ann Landers's completely new "The Bride's Guide" will answer questions about today's weddings. For a copy, send a dollar bill, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (24 cents. postage) to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Cheese cake

- 2 tablespoons butter
- 3 double graham crackers, finely crushed (½ cup crumbs)
- 1½ pounds cream cheese
- 1 cup sugar
- 1½ teaspoons vanilla
- 4 large eggs
- Topping see below

Melt the butter; stir in the crumbs; pat over the bottom of a 10-inch springform pan. Beat together the cream cheese, sugar and vanilla; add eggs and beat thoroughly; pour over crumbs in pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 45 minutes. Cool completely — this takes quite a while. Pour the Topping over the baked cooked cake; bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 10 minutes. Chill. Using a knife dipped in water, cut into good-size wedges at serving time.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Lewis

Towe-Lewis

Barbara Towe, daughter of Mrs. Jean Towe of Morehouse and the late R. Towe and Nelson Lewis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lewis of Sikeston were wed in an evening ceremony Oct. 22 at the Smith St. Church of God. The Rev. R.C. Martin, pastor, officiated.

The bride given in marriage by David Towe, her brother, wore a gown fashioned of polyester crystal with a transparent bodice made of Chantilly lace highlighted by cardinal sleeves and a madarin neckline. The self- covered buttons accented long fitted sleeves. The sleeves and neckline were trimmed with crystal ruffling. Chantilly lace and ruffling banded the skirt and train.

The bride's three- tiered veil of English illusion was attached to a contour headpiece. Her bouquet was of daisies.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Shelia Curd, cousin of the bride. Bridesmaids were Cindy Theramar of Sikeston and the groom's sister, Sara Lewis. Flower girl was Charlene Towe, the bride's niece.

Best man was Bill Lewis of Sikeston, brother of the groom. Groomsmen were Ronnie Towe, brother of the bride and Tommy Bridger of Sikeston. Ring bearer was Gerry Lewis of Sikeston, brother of the groom. Guests were ushered by Melvin Lewis and Jerry Curd.

Music for the wedding was furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Jim Lauerly and Linda Ward of Matthews. Candles were lit by Glinda Harp of Matthews, the bride's cousin, and Allen Towe, another cousin.

Mrs. David Towe and Mrs. Bill Lewis of Sikeston attended the guest book at a reception in the church hall following the ceremony. The guests were served by Mrs. Alvie Towe and Mrs. Versie Lewis.

After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis will make their home at 226 Tanner St.

By DALE FORBIS

The classic matchup of two undefeated teams is on tap for Sikeston's Public Schools Stadium tonight at 7:30. Sikeston has a perfect 9-0 record coming in. Poplar Bluff has just one blemish, a tie, in a 8-0-1 season.

"They will be the best team that we'll see all year," says Mule coach Tom Telle.

"They will be the best team that we'll see all year," says Bulldog coach Terry Smith.

Echoes? Or truisms?

"It ought to be a very physical game," predicts Telle.

"The idea for both sides is to control the football. Both sides are more run-oriented," adds the Poplar Bluff leader, noting that "The kicking games for both sides will play a big part in the outcome."

Both sides sit pretty when it comes time to kick the ball. For Sikeston, kicker Hal Butler is among the best on kickoffs and extra-points in the district. More than a dozen times this year a Butler kickoff has been received inside the five-yard line. And, it was Butler's clutch 21-yard field goal that gave Sikeston a wet and thrilling, 22-21 victory over Jackson last week. Meanwhile, punters Larry Stricker and Will Kaiser are averaging around 36 yards per punt with good hang-time on their kicks and little return yardage.

For Poplar Bluff, kicker Paul Roberts has missed just one extra-point in the year so far. Twenty-five times in 26 tries his P.A.T. attempts have flown true. Punter Sean Moore, brother to professional player Derland Moore of the New Orleans Saints, has averaged a solid 35 yards per boot himself.

"We've never been at full strength," points out the Poplar Bluff coach. Missing the game tonight will be standout linebacker Lance Carlson. At one time Poplar Bluff had a fifth-string tailback playing, yet they managed to remain undefeated through nine games.

"I hate to say it," says Smith, "but, I think there will be a lot of points scored, kinda like the game with Jackson."

The Bulldogs top rusher and the district's most talented runner, James Wilder, is slightly limping with a pulled hamstring. It is expected that the 200-pound college prospect will be at near-full strength for the contest. Wilder comes in with 1069 yards rushing, only 26 away from Norman Dockins' school rushing record.

David Webb, suspended from the Poplar Bluff team earlier in the year, leads the visiting team in rushing yardage with 870 despite missing three games. Quarterback Jim Bidewell is the top percentage passer in the conference, hitting 56.9 per cent of his tosses. That's a fraction better than Sikeston's David Shell.

A big game. No doubt. And Telle has never had much trouble getting his squad up for a game. "They've done a good job getting ready for games," he says about his youthful squad. "I didn't think we'd do this well, to be honest," Telle noted recently. He plays five seniors on offense and another five on defense. Six-two, 205 - pound Victor Ortega is a team-leader on defense.

"We have made some big turnovers this season," points out the coach, discussing his young team. Against Dexter the Mules fumbled in the endzone and had the ball recovered for a touchdown.

The Bulldogs, on the other hand, are a veteran outfit that hasn't had too much success in forcing turnovers and has had too much "success" in making them.

"We've had trouble adjusting on defense," points out Smith, talking mostly about last week's hang-on defensive effort against Jackson. "Poplar Bluff has shown the same formation Jackson used last week, so they could go to it, since they know that we're weak against the pass."

A crowd of four to five thousand is expected for the contest, with extra bleachers being set up in the endzone. Advance tickets have been sold and, despite nippy temperatures forecast, it should be quite a night for the football enthusiasts.

"We shouldn't be affected by the big crowd," says the Sikeston coach. "We've had great backing all year long from the fans, especially to the road games."

A big crowd, a big game and the two best teams in Southeast Missouri promise to make Friday night, November 5, 1976, at Sikeston's Public Schools Stadium a night to remember.

Oran upsets Bell City

BELL CITY — The upstart Oran Eagles recorded their second upset in as many starts in the Bell City B Team Tournament as they knocked off the host Cubs 72- 54 last night to advance to the finals of the tournament Saturday night.

The Eagles will take on Puxico for the championship at 8:00 Saturday evening. The Indians dumped rival Advance 58-43 to gain the finals.

Oran took a slight 13- 10 lead after the first period, but began to dominate the game in the second quarter. Outscoring the Cubs 15- 8 in the quarter, the Eagles rolled up a 28- 18 halftime lead that the Cubs couldn't overcome. After an even third quarter, Bell City narrowed the lead to nine at one point in the fourth period. But a technical foul killed the Bell City momentum and allowed Oran to break the game open with 27 big fourth- period points.

David Burley and Jim Harris scored 20 and 19 points each for Oran, respectively. Kelly Campbell added 12 and Danny Ressel contributed 10. Ellis Jackson led all scorers with 23 for the Cubs, while Steve Austin added 10.

Puxico raced to an early 11- 4 lead over the cold- shooting Advance Hornets and went on to take an easy victory. Puxico's biggest frame was a 20- point second period.

Kevin Shepherd's 15 points paced Puxico's balanced scoring attack. David Smith scored 12, Rex James 11 and Marty Sifford 10 for coach Pete Townsend's Indians. Jeff Boner fired in 14 for Advance, while Parks Long and David Lorch added 11 apiece.

A 6:30 consolation battle between Advance and Bell City will precede Saturday night's 8:00 champion game.

The $46,000 House

Housing, a very sick industry, is expected to perk up slightly in 1977, The Conference Board reports. New housing starts should rise from 1.4 million units in 1976 to 1.7 million in 1977. Housing continues to be lashed by inflation, including the rising cost of money, land and building materials. The median price of a new single-family house is now more than $46,000.

Open Mind

School girl unhappy

Dear Open Mind:

My 19-year-old daughter has just started her first semester at a junior college several hundred miles from here. She always said she wouldn't go to college, then after being out a year, she decided completely on her own that she wanted to take this particular course, which seems so right for her.

Now we are getting phone calls and letters, full of complaints, saying that she wants to stay in school, but the agony of campus life is more than she can bear. Her roomate gets on her nerves; she has constipation and acne; she feels fat and ugly; she has to study more than everyone else. The amount of work and the stress seem endless to her. There is no joy - only despair.

She never liked school, cried almost daily until the fourth or fifth grade. Even in high school, she says, never once did she come to school without worrying. Every day, when the bus pulled up to the school, she had an upset stomach.

She has always made above average grades, and she is actually very attractive and well-liked by boys and girls. The acne problem is probably worse now because of her unhappiness, and she really is not terribly fat.

Please tell me what I can say to encourage her (and me too) or what books I can read or send to her.

SYMPATHETIC MOTHER

She needs help

Dear Sympathetic Mother:

Your daughter is in a stressful situation which includes being away from home, passing school tests, and establishing new friendships. People in stress-filled situations come to doubt their abilities to be successful. This feeling, combined with the confusion of developing new skills, creates fatigue.

One way of improving on her stress-filled situation is for her to let someone there, like a counselor, know that she needs help in dealing with her feelings of loneliness and her study skills. Long periods of study often reflect inadequate study habits.

Comments concerning your daughter's physical appearance reflect her concerns about measuring up to the other students' standards of appearance. I believe once her attitude of confidence and adequacy is improved, then concerns about her skin condition and wight proportions could disappear.

Words of encouragement must reflect your honest feelings about your daughter. Advice should be tempered with understanding of her true goals for attending school. At times, teenagers try to tell parents that they really wanted to do something else — but they feel pressured to stay with an early commitment which was initially ill conceived.

Worry the key

Dear Sympathetic Mother:

You indicate that the problem has existed since age nine. Morning stomach aches before school or stomach aches, headaches, nausea or vomiting in school, which necessitate a child returning home, indicate a separation problem of long duration. For reasons of which your daughter was unaware, she developed physical symptoms of anxiety on leaving home and going to school. Assuming what her physical examination is within normal limits, she now has complaints soon after school has begun. It is quite consistent that she wants to stay at school, while unconscious emotional conflicts cause suffering, driving her towards home.

Her physical and emotional evaluation could be accomplished at the student health service. The school may have a psychiatrist in its health service or she could be referred to a psychiatrist nearby.

Parents feel frustrated, angry, depressed and guilty receiving continuous complaints, but this is your daughter's own problem with which she must deal with a professional.

Bloomers were not invented by Amelia Bloomer. They were actually created by Mrs. Elizabeth Miller, daughter of a New York congressman, and only popularized by the famous feminist.

Kapstein will be busy

Super-agent Jerry Kapstein's Providence, R.I. offices open for business bright and early today and baseball owners and general managers will be lining up to talk money with the man who represents 10 of the 24 free agents selected in Thursday's free-agent clearance sale.

"We have appointments with clubs in both leagues starting Friday," said Kapstein, who watched quietly in a corner of the room as baseball divided up the available talent.

Thirteen players were chosen by the maximum 12 teams and nine of those men are clients of Kapstein.

The most popular player at the start of the draft was Oakland outfielder Joe Rudi, who was selected six times on the first round. The first player to be removed from the list of eligibles was Oakland catcher Gene Tenace, who reached his 12-team limit midway through the third round. Kapstein represents both of them.

Others chosen by the 12-team limit in order were Rudi and another Oakland outfielder, Don Baylor, outfielder Gary Matthews of San Francisco, pitchers Don Gullett of Cincinnati, Bill Campbell of Minnesota, Wayne Garland of Baltimore and A's reliever Rollie Fingers, infielders Bobby Grich of Baltimore, Sal Bando of Oakland, and Dave Cash of Philadelphia, and pitcher Doyle Alexander of the New York Yankees.

Many of the assembled baseball brass sought Kapstein out after the draft, introduced themselves and chatted warmly, obviously laying the groundwork for their future negotiations.

The first man drafted was Baltimore outfielder Reggie Jackson, who was picked by the Montreal Expos. But Jackson's reported asking price of $3 million for five years may have scared off some teams and he did not reach the 12-team limit until the 14th round of the draft.

The pastor speaks

By ARTHUR C. FULBRIGHT, Th.D.

This morning I went downtown to a jewelry store. As I drove along Main Street, someone pulled out of a space directly in front of the store. I quickly pulled into the space. I couldn't help but feel lucky. The feeling quickly doubled when I stepped to the meter and found 23 minutes still on it.

I went into the store and was awed by the beauty of many gems. I completed the business I had with the jeweler and left. How lucky I was! I got what I wanted on someone else's five-cent deposit. They paid for the space and I used it.

How many of us do the same thing with the church? We never pledge, we never give. We only attend on Christmas and Easter. We always take our children to be baptized, we always hold our weddings there, we always ask the pastor to call on the folks when they are sick, we always have the pastor when a loved one dies.

We refuse to pledge because we believe the church has such hypocrites among her members. We enjoy the beauty and majesty of the church, but we go to it for the services we want.

Do we stop to think whose five cents we are using? Who pays the pastor? Who heats the church and keeps it in beautiful repair? Who buys the materials and supports its ministry?

Do we think our stewardship is better than the hypocrites we can't stand? Do we fool even ourselves? Do we enjoy living off of others?

What's the law?

The case of the wandering diamond

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Marvin fell madly in love with Joan and did everything but tiptoe through the tulips in his ecstasy. The only impediment to their getting married was Marvin's wife.

Assuming that the impediment could be easily removed, however, Marvin proceeded in his romance and, on bended knee, got Joan to agree to marry him. What's more, he gave her a diamond engagement ring that was big enough to knock out a person's eye.

As it turned out, only Marvin got knocked out — trying unsuccessfully to get his wife to give him his freedom. And when Joan decided not to hang around until he got it, Marvin asked her to give back the ring. Joan, however, doggedly refused to part with it.

"You gave it to me," she responded, "so it's mine."

"I gave it to you only because you agreed to marry me." was Marvin's answer. "Since you won't wait to marry me, I'm entitled to get it back."

Joan, however, was more inclined to give up her life than to part with the ring, and the dispute ended up in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make Joan give forlorn Marvin back his ring?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that when one of the parties to an engagement to marry is already married, the agreement is void. Consequently, concluded the judge, there was no valid agreement for Joan to have breached. Thus, she was entitled to retain Marvin's "gift" to her.

Cranberries add to roasted veal

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Veal breast, once the Cinderella of meats, is coming into its own. Nowadays many cooks who first try it because it is reasonably priced, go on buying it because it is easy to stuff and roast, delicious and attractive to serve.

The sweet-tart flavor of fresh cranberries complements this kind of veal roast and so we suggest serving the meat with a sauce or relish made from the berries and adding some of them to the stuffing.

The following recipe calls for stuffing and roasting two three-pound veal breasts at one time. These will make ample portions for 8 to 10. In our test kitchen we served one of the roasts, as soon as it came from the oven, to the tasters at hand. The other we refrigerated along with a separate container of the juices left in the pan. Several days later we carved the chilled veal, arranged the slices in a rectangular glass baking dish and scattered bits of the by-now-jellied pan juices over them. We put a sheet of wax paper over the top of the dish and reheated the meat in our countertop microwave oven. A most successful procedure!

CRANBERRY VEAL ROAST

½ cup butter or margarine
¾ teaspoon chicken bouillon granules
¾ cup water
8-ounce bag herb-seasoned bread stuffing
1 cup fresh cranberries coarsely chopped
1 small red apple (unpeeled), cored and coarsely chopped
¼ cup finely chopped celery
¼ cup minced parsley
Two bone-in breast of veal roasts (each about 3 pounds) with pockets for stuffing
6 slices bacon
Cranberry sauce or relish

In a large skillet heat the butter, bouillon granules and the water until the butter melts and mixture begins to boil. Stir in the stuffing, cranberries, apple, celery and parsley. Check pockets in veal and enlarge if necessary. Fill pockets with stuffing. Sew together openings with a darning needle and coarse white thread or close with small skewers and twine. Arrange bacon over top anchoring ends with toothpicks. Place bone side down in a shallow roasting pan and roast in a 325-degree oven until very tender — 2½ to 3 hours; if bacon becomes too brown toward end of roasting, cover with foil. Serve with cranberry sauce or relish. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Revival services to begin Sunday

The Rev. Kenneth Tabor of San Jose, Calif., will be the evangelist for revival services beginning Sunday and continuing through Friday at Tanner Street Church of God, 619 Tanner St., the Rev. Vernon Guttenfelder, pastor, has announced.

In addition to evangelistic services at 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday and at 7:30 each week night, conferences on "inner healing" will be conducted Tuesday through Friday mornings at 9:30. The morning conferences will deal with such topics as guilt, anger, disesteem, fear, anxiety and depression.

The Rev. Mr. Tabor has served nearly 40 years as a minister and professional counselor, in the capacity of pastor, evangelist, author and lecturer.

While pastoring Peoples Church in Decatur, Ill., from 1950 to 1958, he wrote and produced the first regular weekly television program of the Protestant faith in the country on a continuous basis for three years.

After becoming pastor of Peoples Church in San Jose in 1959, the Rev. Mr. Tabor had a radio program on a San Francisco station and did graduate work in emotional psychology.

Besides regular duties, he travels extensively in speaking at state conventions, ministers retreats and youth seminars. He also has spoken at nine of the evening services at international conventions of the Church of God in Anderson, Ind.

The Rev. Mr. Tabor was the first clergyman to visit the oil fields on the North Slope in Alaska, which he did as guest of a senior drilling engineer for a major oil company who had been converted under his ministry as a young man.

He does free lance writing, and Warner Press published his book, "This Is the Day", which sold more than 5,000 copies in 10 months.

From 1969 to 1974, he pastored First Church of God in Wichita, Kan., where he ministered extensively to non-church youth in a program of rehabilitation from the drug culture.

At present, he is pastor of Valley Community Church in Los Gatos, Calif., but continues to write and lecture.

Robert Parrish

Revival services for the dea will begin tonight and continu Saturday night and through both services Sunday at First Baptist Church, 1101 N. Main St. Although designed specifically to reach the deaf through the sign language, the services also will minister to the hearing through the spoken word and strive to provide spiritual assistance and guidance to both.

The services will begin at 7:30 tonight and Saturday night and 10:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday.

The evangelist for the services is Robert E. Parrish of Little Rock, Ark., language missions director for the Arkansas State Baptist Convention. Jim Barnes of Jefferson City, director of state work with the deaf for the Missouri Baptist Convention, will be the revival song leader.

The revival services were arranged as an extension of the host church's ongoing ministry to the deaf.

Before entering the ministry, Parrish was employed by the Greensboro, N.C., fire department from 1958 to 1968. A native of Asheboro, N.C., he was licensed as a minister in 1968 and ordained in July 1970 after graduation from New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary.

Parrish became involved in work with the deaf following the birth of his daughter Debra, now 11, who is deaf. He and his wife Nancy also are the parents of two sons, ages 17 and 3.

Prior to accepting his present position as director of Baptist work with the deaf in Arkansas last Jan. 1, he had served as assistant pastor to deaf at First Baptist Church in New Orleans, minister to the deaf at First Baptist Church in Little Rock and missionary associate for the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Parrish also has served as camp pastor of deaf youth camps and led revivals and conferences for the deaf throughout the South. He also is a past president of the Arkansas Associaion for the Deaf-- the first hearing person to hold the office in the 150-year history of the association -- and is a member of several other state and national organizations which work with the deaf.

The Rev. Dr. Arthur C. Fulbright, pastor of First United Methodist Church, Highway 61 North, has announced that he will preach his sermon, "Our Life Is a Dream", during the 10:45 a.m. worship service Sunday. The sermon honors the beauty and sacredness of life, and its goal is to help Christians recover their "sense of the reality and ultimate friendliness of the spiritual world ..."

In the sermon, Dr. Fulbirght refers to the spiritual world as the real world "because although the material world in which we live has a reality of a kind, it is only temporary. A thing like love, for example, or a thing like truth, has a more permanent reality than any material object..."

Menstrual cramps hard to treat

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am writing after going through my menstrual cramps. Words cannot explain how sick and tired I am of them. Looking forward to this is about as exciting as looking forward to a very bad migraine.

My gynecologist tells me there is nothing wrong with me and that the medical profession doesn't know why these contractions cause such discomfort. I do not use any form of birth control.

I read that women miss more days of work for this than for any other ailment. I have often wondered if it had been the male species that have cramps if they would not have found the reason for them and a way to prevent them.

I have used a heating pad, hot water bag, taken Tylenol (can't take aspirin) and done the specific exercises for menstrual discomfort, all without relief. Do you know of any way to stop this pain?

DEAR READER — Men do have a way of stopping the most common form of painful menstrual cramps. Often when a woman has a baby she stops having menstrual cramps. The common form of discomfort occurs in young girls, usually in women under 25. When it occurs in women after pregnancy or in older women it is usually because of some disorder such as endometriosis, (displaced lining of the uterus tissue to other locations).

The cause of young women's menstrual cramps is not understood. One authority in gynecology refers to it as a disease of theories. All of this means it is difficult to treat.

I note you make a point of saying you do not take birth control pills. Did you know that many gynecologists have found that birth control pills eliminate menstrual cramps? Apparently this is related to their action in suppressing ovulation. There are some tricks to the use of birth control pills for this purpose. There are two principal female hormones, estrogen and progesterone. The estrogen seems to help but the progesterone makes matters worse. This means that you may get better results from one pill than you do from another depending on the mix of female hormones.

When hormones are stopped and artificial menstruation occurs, menstrual cramping doesn't occur. That suggests that ovulation is a key factor in menstrual cramps.

I hesitate to suggest that you take the pill because if you are a young woman you might be one of those few who then have trouble getting pregnant later. Doctors used to say there was no such effect from the pill but many doctors don't believe that anymore. Dr. Charles M. March of the University of Southern California Medical Center reports that women who do not ovulate after taking the pill may have difficulty in responding to medicines to induce ovulation.

There is also some suggestion that an active sexual life relieves tensions and this decreases or eliminates menstrual cramps.

What can you do? Tough it out until you outgrow it if you are a young woman with this problem. And if you get married and have a family perhaps your problems will be a thing of the past.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-12, Menopause, to give you more information on female hormones and the menstrual cycle. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Extra duties could couse public defender crisis

By JIM KELLER
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Missouri's public defender system faces a crisis in its ability to do its job unless an emergency appropriation is approved by the General Assembly early next year, many public defenders say.

Without the appropriation there could be additional delays in court cases and those indigents who are unable to post bond may have to wait in jail longer before their cases are tried.

The Public Defender Commission, created in August to oversee the program, is requesting about $342,000 in emergency appropriations from the General Assembly.

Money problems are exacerbated by increased duties for the public defenders requiring them to handle juvenile and misdemeanor cases where the accused might be incarcerated. Public defenders, who already handle all felonies involving indigents, were required to handle the extra duties by a 1972 U.S. Supreme Court decision.

The effect of this bill will be at least a 25 per cent increase in work for public defenders, who now operate in 14 of Missouri's 43 circuits, said Bill Abrams, assistant state court administrator.

He added that the number of felony cases, which generally require more time than misdemeanors, is expected to increase by 10 per cent to 15 per cent for the fiscal year ending June 30.

"The public defender program was supposed to reduce the backlog of cases, but it has increased the backlog because of inadequate staffs," Abrams said.

The problems with Missouri's public defender system were not alleviated this year when the legislature appropriated the statutory limit of $1.8 million to operate the program.

Realizing the need for more funds, the legislature raised the limit of appropriation to $2.8 million for next year, but the emergency request is the only way the public defenders will get financial relief this fiscal year.

While case loads are increasing, the public defender system lost $60,000 in state funding this year to court appointed counselors, who also are paid from the $1.8 million.

This shifting of funds to the court-appointed counsel cut 11 of Missouri's 14 public defenders' budget.

The legislative bill also required that five new public defender offices be established, but no funds have been appropriated to set up these offices.

In anticipation of the increased demands on public defenders, Robert E. Seiler, chief justice of the Missouri Supreme Court, has sent memos to circuit and magistrate judges in the 14 circuits requesting them to use discretion when assigning cases.

But Bill Mays, public defender in the 13th circuit and president of the Public Defender Association, said insufficient funds will reduce staffs from April to June, a time period when the caseload is expected to be at its highest since the public defender program began in 1972.

"We just won't be able to handle the increased caseload without the additional funding to pay for more assistants," Mays said.

To meet the increased demand in his circuit, Mays said he will need to add another full-time assistant public defender to the two he now has. "But since I now have only enough money to pay my second assistant $500 per month, there is no way to hire another one without the emergency appropriation.

"I've lived in this damn system so long without having adequate funding that I doubt if I can get another assistant for several months next year. There is never enough money or staff to do the whole job," Mays said.

Inadequate funds in other less populated circuits have forced the public defenders to layoff investigators, assistant public defenders and secretaries.

Joseph H. Scott, public defender in the 5th circuit, had to drop his part-time investigator and use that salary to pay for a secretary. A grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, which had paid for one-fifth of the investigator's salary, ran out in July.

"He said he couldn't work for a one-fifth cut in pay and I don't blame him. I had one secretary-receptionist who worked full time and was funded through LEAA, but now she can work only three half-days per week," Scott said.

Similar types of federal grants have supported legal counsel since 1972 in misdemeanor and juvenile cases for Missouri's three largest circuits: St. Louis, St. Louis County and Jackson County.

Grants in each of these circuits will expire early next year, but the state has not appropriated money for the public defenders or court-appointed counselors to handle the cases.

Robert C. Bobione, public defender in St. Louis County, said his 15 assistants would have to assume the duties of the six defenders who currently handle misdeameanor and juvenile cases.

"This just isn't possible. Misdemeanors and juveniles will be unfunded programs," he said. "I don't intend to handle the increased cases. You can't maintain the status quo on salaries and pick up misdemeanors and juveniles and work with a six per cent cut in this year's budget."

Babione pointed out that his circuit has about 100 per cent more misdemeanors and about 40 per cent more juvenile cases than the recommended national average established by the National Advisory Committee.

All of these problems have encouraged several public defenders to seek other forms of employment, said Abrams. The average public defender serves only three years of a four-year term.

At least two of the public defenders who have left their offices recently cited low salary and long working hours as two of the major reasons for leaving.

"I'm getting out, too," said William Fleischaker of the 29th circuit. "I work harder than my friends in private practice, but I make less than they do. I'm tired of working 60 to 70 hours a week."

Jewelry designer creates flowers and doughnuts

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Hearts and flowers, that's Sandra Pailet's stock in trade. And doughnuts and eggs . . .

Ms. Pailet is a New York jewelry designer who makes heart- and egg-shaped pendants, doughnut bracelets and assorted other delicate pieces that are being sought by better jewelry departments and boutiques.

They sell for $25-125, and what's remarkable about them is that they're made of porcelain.

"Ever since man became interested in adornment, he worked with clay, but as a fashion medium, no one has ever used it the way I have," she says.

"I consider myself more a sculptor because I work with shapes first. The jewelry has to look good from every angle, the scale has to be right, and once I've gotten that, everything else follows."

Mostly, that means decorating them in floral patterns, often hand painted, sometimes applied by firing lithographs onto the pieces.

"I love florals, but I don't ever say I'm going to do one thing forever. I'm adding paisleys and underpainting and overpainting. There are endless possibilities."

She's a pretty, dark woman of 40, originally from New Orleans, with a Master of Fine Arts degree from Yale and a history of oil painting in New York.

But the muses didn't smile all that much on her canvases, so several years ago she closed her studio and gave up painting.

"For a couple of really miserable years, I was feeling very frustrated. I was in California and I started working with porcelain which is very nice to the touch in its raw state. It's a fine, white clay, very plastic.

"I began doing little relief plaques of Adam and Eve with lots of flowers and fruits. They could be hung on the wall, but I also thought they were wearable.

"That was five years ago. I also did intricate, lacy types of things inspired by medieval illuminations and," she laughs, "I was very interested in the Kama Sutra (the Hindu book of love). But my things didn't look that sexy; they were adorable."

People began buying them and, when she started doing children's nursery rhyme pendants and pins, she had to turn her home into a factory to meet the demand.

Eventually, she returned to New York and graduated to adult jewelry.

The pieces are "lightweight and hardy but you do have to treat them with care," she says. Then again, some are shockproof.

"This egg pendant is stronger than some, see?" She drops it on the floor and picks it up, undamaged.

The artisan, who's comfortable in her loft where a fine layer of white clay dust covers everything, becomes less amiable when talk turns to production techniques.

"I've been knocked off (imitated) a couple of times so badly I don't want to talk about production," she says sharply. "I've seen ugly, cheap imitations of my work." And she's not about to help the imitators.

Suffice it to say that once the pieces are cast, they're dried and fired or baked, three times. It takes six or more steps and four or five days to produce a pendant or neck buckle to tie around your neck or waist, or a doughnut bracelet to slip over your wrist. Notably, on days when you're wearing ethnic, Yves Saint Laurent clothes, she says.

On the other hand, you might hang something from Terra Firma, another successful New York firm dealing in both porcelain and stoneware jewelry.

Three women in their twenties run the business — Ellen Staller, who must work near the phone because she answers it a lot; Connie Bates, the tallest, and Susan Kay, the quietest. They design giftware for home and garden and originally got into jewelry, Connie says, to amuse themselves.

"People started cornering us in restaurants and asking the prices." So they began producing bracelets for $36-50 and necklaces for $30-70.

Porcelain, Connie continues, "has a dressier look because of the white clay whereas stoneware is unrefined, with natural earth particles in the clay. People want a natural product and stoneware enhances the tweeds and textures of clothes for fall."

They do "a lot of leaves and vegetables and simple, classic combinations and sculptured designs where we cut into the piece."

They do that on cuff bracelets and bracelets that grip the upper arm, and pendants on black or brown silk cords that look like rope and serve as necklaces, lariats or belts.

Trim weight to help heart

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been diagnosed as having "chronic ischemic heart disease with hypertension." I would appreciate your definition of the word "ischemia" and I would like to have any suggestions in regard to the treatment and diet for this disease.

I am 75 years old, a retired lady with a weight of 150 pounds. I am sure this is too much weight for a person who is 5 feet 1.

Presently I am taking hydrodiuril and Aldomet. Are these two medicines adequate for this heart disease?

DEAR READER — Ischemia is a word for inadequate blood flow. The term is now used frequently to indicate there is an obstruction in the coronary arteries to your heart muscle. The obstruction is from the buildup of fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries.

This condition leads to inadequate amounts of oxygen being delivered to the heart muscle and at the same time permits the accumulation of carbon dioxide in the heart cells. It is the common form of heart disease these days.

The Hydrodiuril is to help you eliminate salt and with it excess water from the body. It helps to lower blood pressure in many cases. The Aldomet is a more specific treatment for elevated blood pressure.

These medicines help your heart indirectly by controlling your blood pressure. The high blood pressure increases the deposits of fatty-cholesterol substances in the arteries and also works the heart harder.

You are absolutely right about your weight. If you can get rid of every last pound of extra fat you will decrease your blood pressure and the work on your heart.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-3, Diet, Preventing Atherosclerosis. If you will follow these diet principles and also cut your calories down until you can lose your excess weight you can do a lot for yourself. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — If a woman has non-invasive carcinoma in situ of the cervix would this necessitate the removal of the uterus — the reports showing the uterus is clear?

DEAR READER — That's a sticky question. Carcinoma in situ is a relatively benign superficial cancer of the surface of the cervix, sometimes overlapping onto the adjacent walls of the vagina and sometimes extending into the opening of the cervix.

It is usually clearly separated from the normal cells. In some ways it is similar to skin cancer — it grows slowly. The problem is that a fairly high percentage of women with these fairly benign cell changes later develop characteristic invasive cancer of the cervix.

There is no clear cut agreement among gynecologists on the proper treatment. And more importantly, no one answer will fit all cases. With sufficient biopsies or removal of a conical section the doctor can be more certain there are no hidden areas of invasive cancer.

The age of the patient and desire to have additional children is also a consideration. If the changes are minimal and easily removed a young woman may be justified in not undergoing a hysterectomy until later but she must be carefully supervised. An older woman, particularly if there is evidence of other disease in the uterus as well, is probably better off to have a complete hysterectomy.

No immediate changes expected in court ruling on TV 'family hour'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television viewers should expect no immediate changes in early-evening programs as a result of a federal court decision against the networks' "family hour" viewing policy.

U.S. District Court Judge Warren J. Ferguson ruled Thursday that the major TV networks violated constitutional rights of free speech in adopting the policy last year.

Ferguson did not, however, abolish "family hour" programming, which was designed to calm public protest by keeping sex and violence from early-evening television likely to be watched by children.

He merely said NBC, CBS and ABC couldn't delegate authority for setting the policy to the National Association of Broadcasters (NAB).

The decision was hailed a victory for free speech by the three entertainment guilds, two production companies and nine situation-comedy makers that had filed a lawsuit in October 1975.

"Americans everywhere won a victory today," said producer Norman Lear, creator of "All in the Family" and other hit comedy series.

CBS and ABC said they would appeal Ferguson's decision. NBC and the NAB said they would review the decision before commenting.

CBS, which led the fight for the industry's adoption of the policy, said, "In the meantime and until further notice, CBS will voluntarily continue to adhere to the family viewing concept."

The NAB adopted the policy in September 1975 after network officials held a closed meeting with Federal Communications Commission Chairman Richard E. Wiley. The networks and 462 television stations now subscribe to the policy.

In Ferguson's 223-page opinion, the judge also held that the FCC violated the First Amendment "by issuing threats of government action" through Wiley "should (the) industry not adopt the family viewing policy or the equivalent...." He said "censorship by government or privately created review boards cannot be tolerated."

Ferguson ruled that the NAB and networks were liable for any damages that Lear's production company suffered from the policy. No date has been scheduled to consider damages and a contention by the unions that the "family hour" policy violated federal antitrust laws.

The policy says entertainment programs "inappropriate for viewing by a general family audience" shouldn't be aired at night during the first hour of network programming or in the preceding hour. The policy does not specify what constitutes inappropriate programming.

Ferguson, in criticizing the networks for bending to what he called FCC threats, said it was their right and duty to make independent decisions.

From The Living Bible

So Jacob left Beer-sheba and journeyed toward Haran. That night, when he stopped to camp at sundown, he found a rock for a headrest and lay down to sleep, and dreamed that a staircase reached from earth to heaven, and he saw the angels of God going up and down upon it. At the top of the stairs stood the Lord. "I am Jehovah," he said, "the God of Abraham, and of your father Isaac. The ground you are lying on is yours! I will give it to you and to your descendants. For you will have descendants as many as dust!"

"MEAT" documentary by Fred Wiseman to be aired

"MEAT," the latest film by documentary filmmaker Fred Wiseman, can be seen at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, November 13 on KETC-TV, Channel 9. The film is the tenth of Wiseman's series of documentaries on American institutions and it's subject is the fattening, slaughtering and packaging of sheep and cattle.

Filmed entirely in a meat company in Colorado, the process is detailed step by step, emphasizing the machinery involved, the people who run the equipment, raise the animals and handle sales of the product. The way in which the whole field of meat production is becoming more systematic and computerized is also shown.

Since he made his first film in 1967, Wiseman has won several Emmy Awards for his work and acclaim from many critics.

"Bicentennial Hall of Fame" to present leadership and destiny of President Washington, Lincoln, Truman

A dramatic trilogy dealing with the leadership and destiny of President Washington, Lincoln and Truman will be presented on the "Bicentennial Hall of Fame Dramas" for three consecutive weeks, beginning at 7 p.m. Tuesday, November 9 on KETC-TV, Channel 9.

The series begins with "Valley Forge," a play written by Maxwell Anderson set in the winter of 1777-78. Richard Basehart stars as a troubled but courageous General George Washington.

Second in the series, airing on November 16, is "The Rivalry," based on the Lincoln-Douglas debates of 1858 which brought Lincoln out of political obscurity. the debates established Lincoln's national reputation which eventually led him to the Presidency. Norman Corwin wrote the play and adapted it for television. Arthur Hill stars as Lincoln.

Concluding the "Bicentennial Hall of Fame Dramas" will be "Truman at Potsdam," airing on November 23. The drama centers on the 1954 Big Three Conference, with Ed Flanders as Truman, John Houseman as Churchill and Jose Ferrer as Stalin. "Truman at Potsdam" surveys the situation at the conference table as well as the social occasions and private meetings.

Kurt Russell made debut in Presley movie

Kurt Russell was born one St. Patrick's Day in Springfield, Mass., and went to Hollywood at an early age when his father, Bing Russell, retired from professional baseball to pursue an acting career.

Kurt proved to be a "chip off the old block" and admits that he prefers baseball to acting, but an injury has halted his major league intentions. So, like his father who for 14 years played the deputy sheriff on "Bonanza," Kurt is pursuing acting as his full time vocation, though the Russells are still involved in baseball as part-owners of the Portland (Ore.) Mavericks.

Russell got an early start when, at age 10, he learned that two of his heroes, Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris, were making a movie, "Safe at Home." At the urging of his father's agent, Kurt tried out for a part though he did not get the role, it aroused his interest in acting.

He made his screen debut in 1963 with Elvis Presley in "It Happened at the World's fair." That brought him to the attention of the late Walt Disney and marked the eginning of a long working relationship, starting with "Follow Me, Boys" in 1966. Eight feature motion pictures followed, including "The Strongest Man in the World," released in 1974.

Young Kurt's other movie credits include a co-starring role with James Stewart in "Fool's Parade" along with such Disney productions as "Horse in the Gray Flannel Suit," "The Computer Wore Tennis Shoes," "The Barefoot Executive," "Now You See It, Now You Don't," "Charlie and the Angel" and "Super Dad."

Russell recently starred in the made-for- television movie "The Deadly Tower." He co-starred in two TV series, "The New Land" and "The Travels of Jamie McPheeters." Among the many other television series in which he made appearances are NBC-TV's "Police Story," "Harry O," "The F.B.I.," "The Fugitive" and "Heck Ramsey."

Psychiatrist uses 4077th for personal therapy

Psychiatrist Major Freedman, who finds the pressures of his profession getting to him, comes to the asylum that is the 4077th MASH to clear his head and finds release in its unique form of insanity, on "MASH," Tuesday, Nov. 9 (8:00-8:30-PM, CST) on the CBS Television Network. Series star Alan Alda directed from a script he wrote.

While on a two-week vacation in the compound, Freedman observes the "inmates" and analyzes their bizzare behavior through the medium of hypothetical letters to Sigmund Freud.

Sgt. Delvecchio lays career on line in investigation

Sgt. Delvecchio lays his career on the line when he defiantly persists in investigating the allegedly accidental death of a young man at the home of Hecktor Polson, an influential retired sheriff and a criminologist of great distinction, on "Delvecchio," Sunday, Nov. 14 (9-10 p.m. CST) on the CBS Television Network. Arnold Laven directed from a script by Michael Kozoll.

Polson murders his wife's lover, then swears to silence a retarded youth who happened to witness the crime by dazzling him with a bizarre fairy tale that the gullible boy believes implicitly. Delvecchio spots a hole in Polson's story of the "accident," proceeds to follow up on it, and becomes more suspicious when he senses there is a mysterious effort afoot to insure that the file on the case is closed swiftly.

companies to establish such plans for gas use and to tell their customers about them, as well as the existing plan for electricity.

On its electric and gas rate base of $26,299,929, Arkansas- Missouri was allowed a rate of return of 8.06 per cent. The return on common stock allowed was 12.5 per cent. The company had proposed a rate of return on rate base of 10.03 per cent on electric and 10.22 per cent on gas. It had proposed a return on common stock of 14 per cent for electric and 14.5 per cent on gas.

Associated Natural was allowed a rate of return of 8.72 per cent on its rate base of $10,295,044, and a return on common stock of 11 per cent. It had proposed a rate of return on rate base of 10.61 per cent and a return on common stock of 12.5 per cent.

The order was approved by three of the five members of the Commission. Chairman A. Robert Pierce, Jr. and Commissioner Stephen B. Jones dissented. They contended that a number of adjustments made by the majority, including what they called inadequate levels of return, make it impossible for the companies to maintain their financial integrity.

Carter said the slimness of the victory "is fairly typical" of recent elections. "I don't feel timid or cautious or reticent about moving aggressively to carry out my commitments because I only got about 300 electoral votes," he said. "I'll be very aggressive in carrying out my commitments to the American people."

But he said, "I don't underestimate the difficulty" in accomplishing the goals he has set for his administration.

And he said the success of his administration will depend on cooperation and in bringing the electorate into the governmental process. "It's going to involve a great deal of cooperation between myself as president-elect, those who will serve in the administration and the American people and the Congress," he said.

Carter said he has not yet set any list of priorities for his administration, but he vowed to do so over the next few weeks. He said he will announce the decisions publicly as they are made.

Carter's stumbling block may be the chairman of the Federal Reserve

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of Jimmy Carter's biggest stumbling blocks in shaping economic policy next year is likely to be the Federal Reserve Board and its strong-willed chairman, 72-year-old Arthur F. Burns.

Carter and Burns have sharply different views on inflation and unemployment, and which is worse for the country. Carter also wants changes in the Fed's operations and the status of its chairman.

Through its control of the American monetary system, the Fed influences interest rates and the money supply. Carter says he wants the Fed to wield that influence to speed up the economy and reduce unemployment. This can be done without adding to inflation, the president-elect says.

But people who know Burns say he remains convinced that inflation is the chief threat to the nation's economy, and they say it is highly unlikely he would suddenly switch signals just to suit Carter.

Carter can't remove Burns, because Burns' term as chairman doesn't expire until Jan. 31, 1978. A source close to Burns said there is almost no chance Burns will step down early.

None of the terms of the other six members of the board will expire until 1978 either, so Carter will be unable to change the makeup of the Fed unless there is an early resignation.

Burns' first public reaction to the election and what it means for the Fed probably will come when he appears before the Senate Banking Committee on Nov. 11 to disclose the Fed's latest money supply growth targets.

As of Thursday, there had not yet been any contact between Burns and the president-elect.

Tornadoes whip through US at higher rate in '76

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Tornadoes whipped through the United States at a higher rate than normal during the first 10 months of 1976 but the number of fatalities was far below average.

The Severe Storms Forecast Center of the National Weather Service said today that preliminary figures show there were 830 tornadoes through the end of October, while the 10-month average for the last 20 years is 660.

If the next two months are near normal, the storm center said, there will be another 40 tornadoes reported for the year. The storm center said the threat of tornadoes is virtually over for all parts of the United States except the southern states.

Fatalities for the year totaled 44, less than 50 per cent of normal, and there were 1,175 injuries resulting from tornadoes.

For the first 10 months of 1975, there were 845 tornadoes and 59 deaths reported.

"A lot of tornadoes this year are what I would call mini-tornadoes—mild and short-lived," said Allen Pearson, head of the storm center in Kansas City.

In a bad tornado year, he said, high energy disturbances form off the California coast and spread eastward across the United States. He attributed the milder tornadoes of 1976 to the same weather system that caused a drought over much of the Midwest and in California.

"It was almost like nature built a brick wall," he said, "and what storms we had were shunted northward into Canada.'

The effect of the drought was evident in Kansas, Pearson said, where the 14 tornadoes reported for the first 10 months were the least since 1946. There were 15 tornadoes during the same period last year. The record in Kansas for the most tornado activity during the January-through-October period was set in 195. when 97 tornadoes were reported.

Prayer book, heater, CB radio are stolen

An altar missal book, a radiant heater and a citizen's band radio were among items taken in separate thefts reported to the Department of Public Safety reported today.

The prayer book, valued at $60, was taken from St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church sometime Wednesday night.

Larry Neal of Wyatt reported the theft of a radiant heater from his pickup truck about 4 p.m. Thursday while the truck was parked at Homestead Distributing Co., 1401 E. Malone Ave.

Neal told officers he bought the heater in the store and put it in the truck, then returned to the store for something he had forgotten. When he returned two or three minutes later, the heater was gone. It was valued at $46.

James Terrell, 835 William St., reported the theft of a CB radio worth $160, a four- channel scanner worth $100 and a box of .30- caliber bullets valued at $4.80 from his pickup truck between 3:15 and 3:45 p.m. Thursday, while the vehicle was parked at Sand Lounge, 1129 W. Malone Ave.

Uncles of Litton dissappear, possible kidnapping

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Authorities say they are investigating the disappearance and possible kidnaping of two uncles of the late Rep. Jerry Litton.

Terry Deister, investigator for the Platte County sheriff's office, said the wife of Thomas J. Skjeldbred, 43, said he first left home without explanation Oct. 23, returned Oct. 28 and was abducted.

Harry Moss was last seen Oct. 23 at his home in Kansas City and at a nursing home where his wife is a patient.

Both men are married to sisters of Charley Litton, father of the late congressman.

"We're attempting to locate three men for questioning in reference to the kidnaping (of Moss)," Deister said. "They are three white men between 30 and 45 who are from the south side of the (Missouri) River."

Deister said Mrs. Skjeldbred gave this account of events after her husband disappeared Oct. 23:

He telephoned her and said he was being held captive by two men who had forced him to open a safe in their home and remove $1,000. When he returned Oct. 28, she told him she was upset over the loss of the $1,000 and two of her purses.

Continuing her account, she said he left and returned about 10 minutes later with the two purses. She recovered eight $100 bills that she had hidden in the purses behind some photographs. She left the apartment and returned later to again find her husband gone and a note saying, "I no good to you are anyone eles."

She said she believed her husband was abducted and the note was not from him because he could spell.

Cancer society announces 2 new research grants okay?

JEFFERSON CITY — Dr. Noel R. Lewis, president of the Missouri Division of the American Cancer Society, announced that two new research grants were approved by the society's national board of directors at its annual meeting last month in New York City. The two Missouri grants, totaling $171,065 have been awarded to scientists at Washington University in St. Louis.

One grant totaling $62,500 has been awarded to Dr. Susan E. Cullen, assistant professor of microbiology, immunology and genetics at Washington University, to study immune reactions of so-called T cells, which under certain circumstances can destroy cancer cells.

T cells are manufactured by the thymus gland. If a mouse bears a tumor, the tumor cells make specific substances (antigens). These stimulate the thymus cells to make T cells. T cells kill cancer cells under certain conditions but not under others.

How does the cell stop the message from going on and on, once it is delivered? Dr. David Schlessinger, professor of microbiology and immunology at Washington University at St. Louis, hopes his research will furnish the answer. A second grant of $108,565 for two years has been awarded to support his research on the RNA in the bacterial cell E. coli. Genetic mutants of the cell are available that permanently lack the enzymes whose jot it is to degrade and destroy RNA chains. Lacking this enzyme, how does the cell end messages flowing from DNA to RNA?

Schlessinger plans to obtain fragments of the missing enzymes and to introduce these into the deficient mutants. The goal is to reconstitute the normal situation.

These two research grants are part of $9,800,257 in grants approved at the society's annual meeting. Lewis emphasized that over $27 million has been spent nationally by the ACS on cancer research this year, including $760,688 currently now in effect in Missouri.

Researchers report UMC swine findings

University of Missouri—Columbia researchers reported recent swine research findings to about 70 Missouri hog producers at UMC's Swine Day, Oct. 22 at the UMC Livestock Center.

Here are summaries of the UMC research:

•Corn feed trials showed that opaque corn and opaque corn with amino acid additives brought about twice the average daily gain in swine than normal or waxy corn, researcher David Lewis said.

Swine also found the opaque corn feed more palatable. On the negative side, opaque corn also attracted more insects and didn't settle as well in the feeder as the other varieties.

• Growing swine kept in confinement experienced better growth than those kept in open front or outdoor dry lot units, said UMC animal husbandry specialist John Rea. Swine confined during nursing and finishing had an average daily gain of 1.9 pounds during finishing, while hogs moved from confinement during nursing to open front or dry lot finishing units had 1.4 to 1.5 pounds average daily gains.

• Growth of swine is also improved with commercial antibiotic feed additives, reported researcher Robert Lauxen. Feed treated with Mecadox and Aureo-SP-250 "beat out the non-medicated group," Lauxen said. The medicated treatments brought about average daily gains higher than the average gains with 16 per cent protein feed and gains approching or higher than the average gains from 18 per cent protein feed.

New estate tax law is discussed

NEW MADRID — The outmoded estate tax exemptions of the 1940's have undergone substantial modification, 10th District Rep. Bill D. Burlison, D-Cape Girardeau, told the New Madrid Kiwanis Club Thursday night.

Speaking at the club's regular meeting Burlison pointed out that the $60,000 estate tax exemption and $30,000 gift tax exemption under current law have been combined and liberalized to permit a total exemption equivalent of $175,625. The full amount will be phased in over a five-year period.

He also pointed out that under present law the martial deduction is one-half of the decedent's estate. the new law increases this to $250, or half of the estate, whichever is greater.

The congressman also discussed new provisions with respect to valuation of farms and closely held businesses, capital gains taxes on appreciation of the descendant's estate and generation-skipping trusts.

Pool bond issue fails at Malden

MALDEN — Swimmers in Malden will have to use the old swimming pool for a while longer, according to a Malden vote Tuesday.

A proposal to issue $130,000 in general obligation bonds to build a new pool failed by a vote of 1,008-606 against the measure. It needed a simple majority to pass.

The proposal would have increased the city's tax levy by 20 cents. It failed in all four wards.

City Clerk Roscoe Thornton said this morning Mayor Sparrel Davis will talk to the citizens to determine if the vote indicated a genuine rejection of the proposal or confusion over the many elections to vote on.

The vote by ward was 414-204 against in the combined balloting of wards one and two. Wards three turned it down, 394-264. The tally in Ward four was 200-138 against the pool.

CAPE GIRARDEAU — About 50 business and office educators from southeast Missouri attended a meeting here Monday night sponsored by the State Department of Education and hosted by Southeast Missouri State University.

The meeting was held in the University Center as one of a series across the state for the purpose of discussing innovations in the business education area, according to Dr. Gene Loftis, dean of the College of Business at Southeast Missouri State.

Two supervisors of business and office education from the State Department of Education, J.R. Chaney and George Wood, led the session.

PONYTAIL ◇◇ BY LEE HOLLEY

DEAR HELOISE:

Most of us have many small pictures such as school photos, etc., of our children or grandchildren that we never seem to have frames for, so I thought I would share my hint for displaying them.

Take the plastic lids from coffee cans (or similar smaller ones) and paste the pictures on the inside of the lid. Space them evenly on grosgrain ribbon, secure them with a bit of glue, and paste or sew a ring at the top.

Since I have 15 grandchildren, I hang my pictures in family groups.

Visa DeLong

This sounds absolutely wonderful, especially since those precious children love to see displayed the pictures that they so proudly give you.

But instead of using glue or paste to stick the current picture on the lid, why not try using tape that is sticky on both sides to fasten the picture to the lid?

This way, if you decide to change pictures when you get a new one, the picture can be put in an album or saved in some way after it is replaced by a new one.

Heloise

WAKE UP, GIRLS!

DEAR HELOISE:

Our two girls are 5 and 7 years old. Here are some of the things we do to facilitate bed-making.

Instead of bedspreads, I use quilts. Pretty, and easy for a child to straighten. Also, I tuck the far side of the sheet under the mattress so that the child can straighten the sheet from one side of the bed. Even a very young child can make a bed with this method.

Another thing I do is turn that top sheet sideways to give extra coverage. Seems to stay tucked under the side of the bed better, too, and a child doesn't really need all the "tuck-in" at the foot of the bed.

Kathleen Plummer

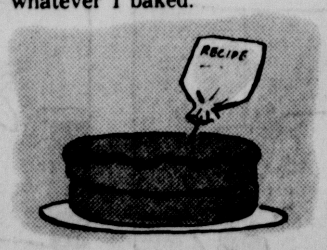
DEAR HELOISE:

When I bake something for a bake sale, I always include the recipe in a little plastic bag, along with my name and some hints about how I serve whatever I baked.



Then, if one likes what is bought at the sale, one will also know how to make it.

Mary L. Yakely

SUIT YOURSELF!

DEAR HELOISE:

Recently we had the pleasure of visiting my son and daughter-in-law who live in another part of the country.

As they have a rather small place, I wasn't looking forward to living out of suitcases for five weeks, and I came up with this idea.

I have a lightweight cardboard chest covered in a gold quilted material. I decided to pack this with our underclothing, bathrobes, toilet articles and make-up. It fitted nicely in the trunk of our car, and really looked nice sitting in the bedroom. Our other clothes were carried on hangers.

We had no unpacking to do when we arrived, no upset bedrooms, and no living out of suitcases.

Lois Marlier

A SHADY IDEA

DEAR HELOISE:

To clean draw drapes or Venetian blind cords, I first wash them with a mild soap, using a soft cloth. Then while wet, I dampen another soft cloth with liquid white shoe polish and rub thoroughly all over the cords.

When they dry, the cords are white and clean.

Busy Wife

You are so right, and you have a lulu of an idea!

I would suggest, however, thinning the polish with water a bit before applying it because the polish dries whiter-than-white and you don't want a buildup on the tapes.

Heloise

NO SLIP-UPS HERE!

DEAR HELOISE:

Need hangers for slips or nighties?

My husband bends the

THE LAST ROUNDUP!

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is a time and money saver that I would like to pass along.

Since revolving cupboards are so expensive, I purchased a number of those individual turntables and virtually all my canned foods go on them. Only big boxes are stored conventionally on the shelves.

Everything is at my fingertips in a jiff.

Barb Fenker

Barb, I think that's a great idea. Probably because I use the same thing too.

I have very limited shelf space in my apartment and have those revolving shelves all over. I use one for spices, several for canned goods, and even one in my refrigerator.

Heloise

SPLASH 'N' NOSH!

DEAR HELOISE:

When I'm whipping cream with my electric mixer, to prevent the cream from splattering all over the kitchen, I take a piece of wax paper, rip a slit in one side to the middle, slip it around the beaters, pinch the ripped sides together and clip it with a paper clip. The wax paper doesn't shift and I don't have any splatters.

I throw the wax paper away and keep the paper clip in a place where it's handy to use the next time.

FOR THE BIRDS!

DEAR HELOISE:

With the popularity of hanging baskets, I found my old bird-cage stand to be an ideal holder.

If it is a stand with just the hook on top you have no problem, but mine is a complete circle so we took the ring from a key chain and used it to hold the chains holding the hanging basket.

JUST A DROP!

DEAR HELOISE:

When my cream deodorant begins to get dry, I add a few drops of hand lotion to the jar. This way, there is no waste.

Non-trendy may be dumb to some, but...

Men really like this years outerwear look

By Charles Hix

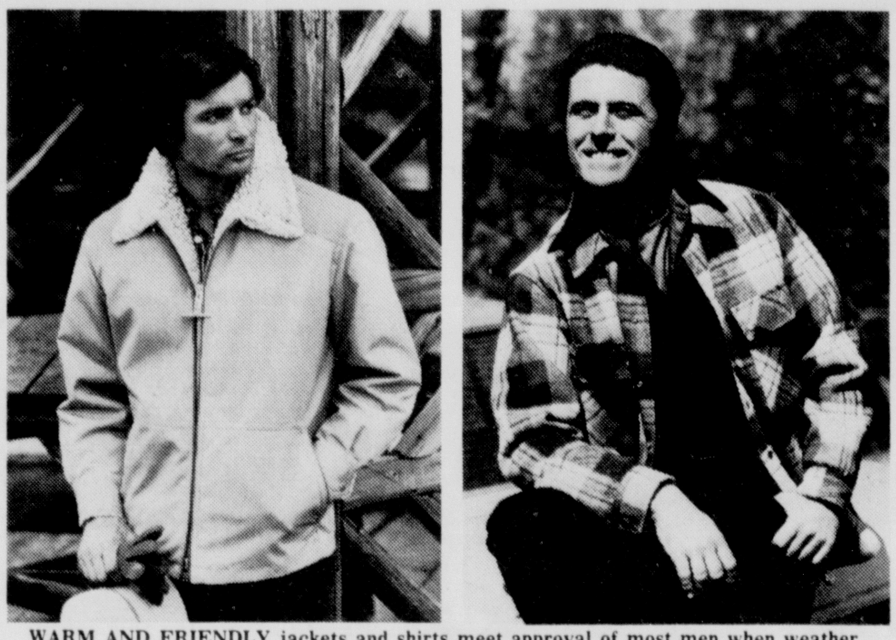
NEW YORK — (NEA) — The most traveled route in menswear this year is in the dressed-up direction.

Speak with any designer of men's wearables and you'll hear about leisurewear yielding to classics, especially in tailored clothing.

Despite the admonitions of the Men's Fashion Association of America that thigh-topping jackets are unflattering to most male physiques and that mid-thigh toppers are unacceptable over sportcoats or suits, shorter-length weather-protectors are much in evidence this season.

High-styled blouson pullovers with drawstrings and blanket coats of many colored patterns make the men's magazine fashion pages, but middle-of-the-road versions of above-the-knee outerwear are what many men still prefer for comfort and ease.

The island between the supposed style trends versus what the average guy really wears has given rise to a term widely used within the fashion industry — "dumb".



WARM AND FRIENDLY jackets and shirts meet approval of most men when weather turns not so welcoming. Two-way zipper and T-bar pull of Mighty-Mac (left) make it an easy-on jacket in the current 'shot' or New England 'short' length. With leather piping it is about $85. Wool outer shirt is updated with beefier plaids such as one in red, navy and camel for about $50. It is worn here with red lambswool sweater under a basic navy front button shirt and flannel slacks for country or street wear, as created by Pendleton.

There are "dumb suits," meaning nondescript models that exhibit little or no flare. They're simply there and that's that.

"Dumb sports jackets," many of them polyester double-knits, are those that reportedly look about the same on a hanger or on a man. Any number of garments that fail to meet the industry's prevailing taste level are "dumb."

A number of observers would lump many shorter-length jackets and coats in the "dumb" category. However, a closer look at these bad-mouthed garments proves that they are smartening up a bit.

Take the wool outershirt. As made for years by Pendleton, it is as American as baked beans. While never "dumb," the style ran the risk of becoming boring.

This fall, though, many of the plaids are beefier, breezier and brighter. The serviceable outershirts take on a new, handsomer appeal for the younger customer who enjoys role playing and may combine the look with construction boots and socks as a city costume. Conversely, these outershirts, particularly those with snap-fastened and flapped patch pockets, reflect the resurgent appreciation for natural, honest clothes by more conservative customers.

Mighty-Mac, the Massachusetts - based outerwear firm, is heavily promoting what it calls a new fashion length — the "Shot" jacket. Actually, this is a regionalism for how "short" is pronounced in New England, although the length is popular nationally. Whether or not the styles are "dumb" depends upon context and taste. Warming a fellow for a walk through the woods, a pile-lined jacket is functional and thus right on. Thrown together with a pair of plaid wool trousers for dinner at a restaurant, it's "dumb."

The coat most often earning the epithet "dumb" is the mid-thigh kind variously called a car coat, suburban coat, surcoat, etc. Nonetheless, it remains a mainstay in mail catalogs like Sears and Montgomery Ward, in men's stores and in men's wardrobes.

"To Mr. America, it's easy to toss on over a 'dumb' doubleknit jacket — although worn that way the man looks atrocious — and, more important to him, it's less expensive than longer overcoats. Truthfully, sixty-five to seventy per cent of American men don't give a damn about fashion. This is a high-fashion coat. It should only be worn over a sweater. But if a man treats it as a 'dumb' coat over a 'dumb' suit, who's to stop him?"

No one.

Another translation for "dumb" apparel is clothing with mass appeal. What is "popular" by definition can never be "trendy." Although the quest for new styling in menswear is valid, so is the concept of feeling good with old favorites, even if they're not in vogue.

Yet, the fact that, season after season, menswear makers bring out better-styled variations on "dumb" merchandise proves that the brightest of all may be the fellows who won't be deterred from wearing what they choose. Happily, as time goes by, "dumb" clothing is looking smarter every year.

Overlooked force in our history

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — One hundred and ninety years ago this autumn a handful of men meeting in Annapolis began a sequence of events which was to give America a soul to go with its newly freed body. The men issued an invitation to the 13 states to meet the following year to form a constitution. They were led by Alexander Hamilton.

We have not this Bicentennial heard much about A. Hamilton. We have deified Thomas Jefferson, given a sixth military star to Gen. Washington, and said our proper prayers for the spirit of Ben Franklin. But cheers have been few for the first treasury secretary.

It figures. Hamilton was not precisely the kind of man to whom even history warms. Robert Morris, his latter-day biographer, is kindly in calling him a "democrat with a small 'd'," a gentleman with "quasi-monarchical" tendencies. In fact, left to Hamilton, the U.S. of today might be as much a duplicate of as divorced from Great Britain, and we should refer to our president as His Highness.

Hamilton was a revolutionary tory. His life was spent securing the nation's sovereignty, but on his brutally stiff terms. He regarded democracy as too important to be left to the people and leadership as a province of the well-to-do. "All communities divide themselves into the few and the many," he wrote. "The first are the rich and well born, the other the mass of people (who seldom judge right). Give therefore to the first class a permanent share in the government."

Humanity was not one of Hamilton's soft spots. "Take mankind in general," he said, "they are vicious." His sentiments were more inclined to privilege and power. In "The Man From Monticello" author Thomas Fleming recounts the evening Jefferson and Hamilton discussed favorite people; when Jefferson said he believed John Locke and Francis Bacon to be two of the finest men of history, Hamilton countered with his own idea of the "greatest man who ever lived" — Julius Caesar.

He was not of course the only influential official of his time to plot for limited freedom in the new nation. John Adams had his suspicions about the disposition of the masses, and his fondness for the British system of class division. And there were others more flagrantly elitist, now called Hamiltonians, as distinct from Jeffersonians. The feud between the two factions rages even to this day.

Essentially the Constitution is a compromise of the extremes of the two sides. Jefferson wanted a loose confederation of states, was contemptuous of consolidated wealth, and wished the nation to remain a place of small merchants and family farmers. Hamilton, conversely, wanted a central government with an iron grip, presidents and governors to be elected for life, and an intimate partnership with Great Britain.

At the time it was thought the finished Constitution leaned more to the Jeffersonian principles. Hamilton derided it on occasion as a "shilly shally thing of milk and water." And yet the language was sufficiently vague as to leave the final verdict to history. That verdict now, to some, seems ominously Hamiltonian. Hence one reason, in this era of populism, we hear so little about the great Federalist.

Indeed, Hamilton's hand if not his name is on much of the nation today. Giant corporations operate where simple artisans were intended to prosper. Great wealth is concentrated in a relatively few number of families and institutions. The framers are said to have wanted political influence to pass regularly from candidate to candidate, as befits the changing mood of the electorate, but in fact the power changes only slowly, when at all, in the Congress of the United States.

As for the strength of the central government, it is undeniable and ever growing. And in the middle of it, this Bicentennial, there is outside the Treasury Department a statue of Hamilton which surveys what he wrought: millions of bureaucrats, thousands of bureaucracies, gigantic military forces, HEW, HUD, CIA, FEC, FBI, SEC, DOT — and something near $400 billion a year in operational costs.

There is a look of satisfaction on the Hamilton statue. Two hundred years later he is not a favorite, but he is still a force.

Effort launched to test stress on shipping cattle

WASHINGTON (AP) — A joint effort to find out more about shipping stress on cattle moved long distances has been launched by federal, state and industry interests.

The Agriculture Department said Monday that one of the main goals will be to study the causes and effects of stress on young feeder cattle during the two to four weeks involved in their weaning, shipping and re-establishment in new surroundings.

Officials said shipping stress causes a variety of diseases, especially respiratory afflictions among young feeder calves moved from southeastern U.S. farms through feedlots and then to slaughter. Stress and related diseases cause an estimated $500 million loss annually to the cattle industry.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 1976 Oscars won't be presented until March 28, 1977, but already the film studios are gearing up their awards campaigns.

Sales chiefs are booking choice sites for their December releases — theaters in Westwood and Beverly Hills are preferred because most academy voters live near the area. Publicity departments have reserved the deluxe private screening rooms through January. (The nominations will be announced on St. Valentine's Day).

Many of the Oscar hopefuls will receive mass releases throughout the country this month and in December. Thus, if they catch on with the general public, a steamroller effect could influence Academy voters; monetary success is often equated with quality in their eyes.

The race cannot yet be judged, since some of the last-minute releases have not been previewed. At this point in the race, "All The President's Men," now in rerelease throughout the country, appears the front-runner.

Warner Brothers is making sure the Watergate film maintains its visibility; it's currently playing in more than 600 theaters and will be playing in some metro areas, including Los Angeles, well into 1977.

"When a film is released earlier in the year, you've got to book it locally to remind the voters," explains a publicity executive.

The year's releases so far offer few possible contenders. "All The President's Men" is likely to be nominated in most major categories, including stars Dustin Hoffman and Robert Redford, and Jason Robards and Jane Alexander in support.

"The Omen" was a surprise blockbuster for 20th Century-Fox, and it may draw nominations for star Gregory Peck and director Clive Donner. The company's fiscal health was also revived by "Silent Movie," and it could be among the nominees, although the academy often overlooks comedy. Both films are in first release around the nation.

John Wayne appears a sure nominee for his dying gunslinger in "The Shootist," easily his best role since "True Grit." Although the film was not well received, "W.C. Fields and Me" could reward Rod Steiger with a nomination. Another repeater could be Walter Matthau for "Bad News Bears."

As in recent years, the field for best actress and supporting actress appears slender. There may be sentimental votes for the returns of Lauren Bacall in "The Shootist" and Audrey Hepburn in "Robin and Marian." Sarah Miles could get a mention for "The Sailor Who Fell from Grace with the Sea."

Robert DeNiro, winner as supporting actor in "The Godfather, Part II," may be competing with himself as best actor. He could be nominated for "Taxi Driver," "The Last Tycoon" or "1900," although it's undecided whether the latter will be released in 1976.

Another self-competitor: Faye Dunaway. She is being mentioned for both "Network" and "Voyage of the Damned."

"Marathon Man" might score for Dustin Hoffman instead of "All The President's Men." And "Network" is being touted for the star performances of William Holden and Peter Finch, and support by Robert Duvall.

December releases with high hopes include: "Bound for Glory," David Carradine; "The Last Tycoon"; "The Seven per cent Solution," Nicol Williamson, Alan Arkin; "Voyage of the Damned," Dunaway, Oskar Werner, Max Von Sydow, etc.; "A Star is Born," Barbra Streisand; "Silver Streak"; "Nickelodeon"; "Rocky."

'Outlaw of country music' said to be only one who has 'universal' possibility

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music headliner Waylon Jennings calls Steve Young his favorite singer, "the only one on the scene who has the possibility of being universal."

Jennings, one of the leaders of the progressive or "outlaw" movement in country music, says Young will be:

"The Bob Dylan of country music. He's not country, not pop, not folk. He has no earthly idea how great he is. I believe in that dude. If he gets any better, I'll kill him."

Young, a rising "outlaw" himself, is working on his second album for RCA after more than a decade of trying to get record executives to accept his style of music.

"In the last two or three years, Nashville has opened up because of the success of Waylon and Willie (Nelson)," Young said. "I used to be unable to get my foot in the door; people wouldn't listen to what I was doing.

"Times have changed to where I can do my own thing. Maybe me and the times have come together."

The "outlaw" movement, which both Jennings and his disciple, Young, represent, has its greatest appeal among young country music fans and sounds more like rock than traditional country music. The same sort of appeal has been generated by some of the newer jazz groups — Herbie Hancock's various ensembles and The Weather Report, for examples. These groups perform within a basic jazz framework, but employ rock, Latin and even country techniques as well.

The "oulaw" sound as exhibited by Young is a combination of country, blues, folk and rock, making it hard to pigeon-hole in any category.

In his 10-year career, Young has played folk and blues besides progressive country. Songs he has written have been recorded by Jennings, Joan Baez, Rita Coolidge and Ian Matthews.

"My music has to do with the South," said Young, 34, a native of Newnan, Ga. "It's a reflection of my childhood. It's a combination of folk, blues and country."

His songs are reminiscent of Tom T. Hall's, with references to stained glass windows, bus trips and revivals.

"When I sing, I like to have that edge — that soul — that Hank Williams had," he said. "I don't mean blabbering on, but really saying something.

"I don't want to lose that essence of what soul is. I hear a lot of artists I like, but then I don't like their next song.

"Hank Williams was in touch with his soul, and Lefty Frizzell was good. After them, we got into homogenized, processed country music."

But he sees market improvement in some of today's writing.

"Some of it is better than it used to be," he said. "The times are more out front, and we are lyrically more honest — more complex. But of course, so is life.

Meetings planned on farm strategy

Conferences on farm management strategy are planned for ten Missouri towns in November and December.

The conferences will cover how to make management decisions in the face of the many uncertainties in agriculture. Sessions will be conducted by extension farm management specialists from the University of Missouri-Columbia and area extension specialists. Local farmers will also report their experiences.

Other topics to be covered include farm exports, consumer movements, government policy, competition between large and small hog producers and the financial picture for beef cattle producers.

The conferences are scheduled Nov. 18 in Jefferson City and Bolivar, Nov. 19 in Versailles, Nov. 22 in Warrenton, Nov. 29 in Carrollton, Nov. 30 in Shelbina, Dec. 6 in Portageville, Dec. 14 in Perryville, Dec. 15 in Union, Dec. 16 in Bolivar and Dec. 20 in Memphis.

New look for bread would aid nutrition

COLUMBIA — Wheat's future -- and much of this world's nutrition -- depends on mutilated chromosomes, a forced marriage with a distant relative, and changing American ideas about what makes good bread.

"The breads we eat now are mostly air," said Professor Ernest R. Sears, world- famous wheat geneticist at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

"If we could get used to eating bread made from so-called 'inferior flours,' it wouldn't be as soft and light as the bread we're used to eating, but it could have more protein. This is because the kind of protein — gluten— that makes bread dough elastic and capable of yielding a light, air-filled loaf is apparently produced by the wheat plant at some sacrifice in totalprotein content."

Sears, a U.S. Department of Agriculture Agricultural Research Service scientist, said one way to boost wheat's nutritive value was to produce "high- protein mutations." Essentially, that means using X-rays or some other technique to knock out a small part of a schomosome.

"We know that there are 21 pairs of chromosomes in wheat and that one pair of these promotes gluten production at the expense of total protein," said sears. "By getting rid of the gene concerned, we could probably increase protein 50 per cent with no decrease in seed weight."

Sears explained that seed weight must be maintained because decreased weight almost always means lower yield.

Another way to boost wheat quality and potential yields may be to "take full advantage of the rye component of triticale and concentrate on hybrid triticale rather than hybrid wheat," Sears said.

Triticale is the "forced marriage with a distant relative." It's a cross between wheat and rye which so far has limited use.

Sears predicted that many farmers will switch to triticale when it yields more than wheat. And he predicted that those yield increases will come.

He also forecast stronger markets for triticale or high protein mutants, "especially with the growing food shortage."

"So far, triticale has limited use as human food," said Sears. "but it has great potential. It's believed to be more nutritious, because of a relatively high content of lysine, one of the essential amino acids. (Lysine limits how much protein humans and other nonruminants can use from wheat protein.)

"In order to make 'good' bread from triticale -- the 'airy' bread we are used to - - bakers have to put in some wheat flour."

Sears said triticale has one great advantage over wheat; namely its rye component.

"One of the troubles with hybrid wheat is that it is not adapted to cross-pollination," said Sears. "Rye is."

So is corn, and that's one of the reasons scientists have been able to improve corn hybrids over the years.

Sears said cross- pollinating plants are better, because crossing usually produces a "hybrid vigor" which makes the plant grow and yield better. With self- pollination, he said, the plant "suffers from inbreeding and loses quite a bit of vigor."

"Triticale would probably never be as well adapted to cross pollination as rye, because it's main physical component is wheat," explained Sears. "It has tiwce as many wheat chromosomes as rye chromosomes. But it still has much more potential for cross-pollination than wheat, which is strictly a self-pollinator."

Recipient of St. Louis Award named

ST. LOUIS — Charles F. Knight, chairman and chief executive officer of Emerson Electric Co., was named the 1976 recipient of The St. Louis Award at a ceremony conducted Wednesday in the rotunda of the Old Court House, 11 N. Fourth St.

Dr. William H. Danforth, chancellor of Washington University and secretary of The St. Louis Award Committee, presented the award which is given to the individual who has made the most outstanding contribution or who has brought the greatest distinction to the Metropolitan St. Louis community during the previous 12-month period. The award was established in 1931 by the late David P. Wohl, who was a leading St. Louis philanthropist.

Knight received the $1,000 award, which he announced he was donating to a fund that already contains approximately $20,000 unused from the recent Save Our Sports (SOS) program of the St. Louis Public Schools. "This fund," he explained, "will be used to establish athletic training rooms in our 10 city high schools." Knight conceived and helped implement the successful SOS effort to keep varsity athletics in operation during the 1975-76 school year.

He also received a citation from the Award Committee which stated in part that he was being named a St. Louis Award honoree:

"For energetic and creative leadership in the service of the St. Louis Public Schools ... more specifically, for organizing a program which raised sufficient funds to keep alive the athletic programs ... and, then, for analyzing the needs of the entire school system with care and precision... for bringing to the attention of the community these needs and highlighting the importance of the public schools to the vitality and success of the entire region ... for recruiting volunteers from the businesses of Greater St. Louis to work with and to advise the school system in its management and financial practices ... for spearheading the successful school tax referendum which provided for the rate necessary to keep the schools strong and vigorous."

Wentz called attention to Knight's effort to save the St. Louis Public School's varsity athletics program when it appeared it would have to be dropped because of insufficient funds to support it.

When Knight heard of the situation, Wentz recalled, "He immediately took positive steps to find the solution. The solution was," Wentz explained, "to rally the business community behind a Save Our Sports Program for the St. Louis Public Schools. His dynamic leadership, along with numerous colleagues, produced a successful drive that kept varsity athletics in operationduring the 1975-76 school year."

Wentz also paid tribute to Knight's successful endeavor to initiate and develop additional aid for the St. Louis school system in cooperation with other businessmen in the Greater St. Louis area.

"Out of this effort," Wentz emphasized, "was created a Management Assistance Program (MAP) that provided loaned executives from the business community to work hand in hand with the school staff and board of education in mapping out new operational procedures and overall improved services for the school system.

"It also encouraged dynamic support in the most recent successful tax campaign and set positive goals for the future of the public schools, and therefore, the future of the entire St. Louis area."

Oldest drummer has beat that goes on

Cassidy is a drummer who broke into the music business in 1938 and now bills himself as the world's oldest keeper of the rock beat.

"I'm the world's oldest rock 'n' roll drummer, as far as I know," he says. "It's sort of neat. I'm like living proof to young people that they can look forward to being in the business as long as they want, if they present themselves properly."

Cassidy plays for Spirit — a group that has followed a rock 'n' roller coaster path of ups and downs since Cassidy helped form it a decade ago.

The band now is trying to stage a comeback on the strength of its latest album, "Farther Along," a typically diverse work in which four of the five original members play together for the first time since a 1971 split.

It's the group's eighth album and, according to some critics, not its best. The old man of the skins bristles at the criticism.

"It's a worthy piece of music — it stands up for itself," Cassidy said. "We are human beings affected by everything around us just like you are. What we record is dictated by the times and where we are at the time."

"I started out in 1938 playing country-western music," Cassidy said. "Then it was polka, and then Dixieland and then the early forms of jazz. Later it evolved into the big band jazz sound.

"That's when I joined a band in the early 40s that traveled by bus through 17 states in the Midwest. It was great."

It wasn't until the mid-1960s that Cassidy turned from jazz to rock.

"I didn't like early rock," said Cassidy, who has shaved his head since 1959. "It was really a primitive type of thing."

But when Bob Dylan and the Rolling Stones came along, a friend persuaded Cassidy to sample his first morsel of rock 'n' roll drumming. Now he swears by the stuff.

"Rock 'n' roll is the greatest thing that's happened to this country, musically. It allows for integration of all forms — rock, jazz, Broadway, opera, folk. It opened up a whole new era."

How long will Ed Cassidy continue to romp in this new era?

"I have a lot of other interests — television, photography, music history — but I like doing music and will continue as long as I am still getting something out of it myself and giving the audience something in return," he said. "I want to play but I don't want it to be a chore."

Coconut jellybeans

Lawyers turns into jellybean entrepreneur

Yes, says Dave Klein, a 30-year-old lawyer turned jellybean entrepreneur. Of course, he also says the same thing about his tangerine, root beer, green apple and cotton candy jellybeans.

"Jellybeans have been around for a long time, but no one's ever done anything with them — this is a breakthrough," says Klein, who sells his "gourmet jellybeans" under the name "Jelly Bellies."

At $2 a poknd Jelly Bellies are the world's most expensive jellybeans, according to Klein, who claims to have researched their history extensively. There are 417 to the poknd, give or take a bean, and each has four calories.

Klein is marketing Jelly Bellies to department and food stores and is offering franchises in theaters and ice cream parlors. A pilot franchise in an Alhambra ice cream parlor has been quite successful, according to store owner Bob Fosselman.

"They really seem to have caught on," sayd Fosselman, who has been in the ice cream business for 35 years. "The concept catches people's imaginations. Originally, it was sales to kids, but now they've developed party business — showers, weddings and so on."

In addition to the above flavors, Jelly Bellies come in ordinary strains like lemon, lime, cherry and grape. For the more adventurous, there are licorice, cream soda and country melon jellybeans.

Klein, who developed the flavors with the aid of a food chemist, originally had concocted a watermelon Jelly Bely. However, he couldn't decide whether to color it red or green — two-tone jellybeans present technical problems — so he picked green and named the flavor country melon.

Klein went to law school after working his way through UCLA selling "Big Dave's Popcorn" but decided against practicing law.

"I have friends who are lawyers who get sick in the morning when they have to go to court," says Klein, who felt the pressures of the legal field might be a bit much. His second choice — the wholesale nut business — led him into supplying cookie makers and other food manufacturers with cashews, raisins and other ingredients. His dealings with candy makers got him to thinking about the neglected jellybean, he says, with the idea for Jelly Bellies coming to him one night in his sleep.

Klein is currently working on new flavors — there are 14 now — and planning his next creation — a 10-pound Jelly Belly, possibly with a pumpkin flavor. For Thanksgiving of course.

Jose Iturbi was ready.

The Spanish-born pianist lowered his arm and sprang into the allegro of Mozart's "Piano Concerto in D Minor" with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

It is not unusual for a musician to both play and conduct. But it is special when the musician is 80 years old and is conducting and playing three concertos in one program. A stamina and agility even some younger artists lack are required. Iturbi doesn't think it's difficult.

"It's something I can't explain," he said later. "I was playing a solo, sustained a chord and then cut off myself. So it's somebody else who plays — it's a dual personality."

He is a small, slightly pudgy man with silver hair and a quiet manner. His face flushed slightly as he led the Philadelphia Orchestra through Mozart, Mendelssohn, de Falla and his own composition, "Seguidillas."

Iturbi seemed unaware of his surroundings as he worked through intricate fingering patterns, sweeping the keyboard with a feathery touch. Through it all, he confessed the following day, he was plagued with one feeling: nervousness.

After performing in more than 6,000 concerts all over the world, Jose Iturbi still gets butterflies.

"Before, during and a little bit after a performance," he said with a slight chuckle.

"Why? Well if you start to think of all the possibilities of what can go wrong — you cannot come back and correct it," he said, as a serious line managed to dart across his otherwise smooth forehead.

"Technically, theoretically, we should have impeccability in a performance. But not in one performance have I gone out on stage and returned and said: 'Ah, it was good.' Never."

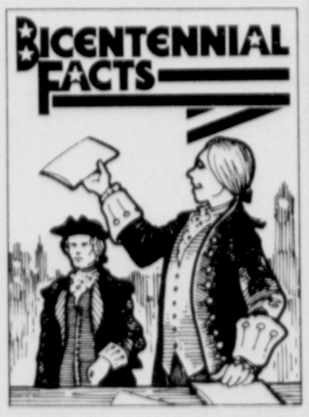
After the concert, Iturbi went to a private reception and returned to his hotel suite about 2 a.m. The aging virtuoso practiced until 5 a.m. on the piano.

"We have a certain sap in us," he said. "It is cultivated and developed into a strict discipline. Maybe in a year, I might miss two or three days of practice."

Since the age of 14 when he first conducted in his native Spain, he has led the irregular life of the concert artist.

Once the frenetic pace had little effect on him — he says he could spend a few weeks with sleepless nights, touring and performing. Now, he must take short, afternoon naps.

But the pianist has not succumbed to fatigue. So far this year, he said he has given more than 200 concerts all over the world.



Ben Franklin, pioneer American printer and journalist, not only had a nose for news but also a musical ear for news. As a boy he peddled on the street printed copies of a ballad he wrote chronicling America's earliest tragedy, the drowning of the keeper of the Boston light and five companions in 1718, The World Almanac reports.

Hal Kaufman's JUNIOR WHIRL®

GOT STEADY nerves? You'll need them in this game. If your hand is the least bit shaky, you'll lose. To play, you need an empty catsup or soda bottle and a box of toothpicks (flat-sided).

To begin, each player in turn places a toothpick across the mouth of the bottle until a complete layer is formed. Then a second layer is begun, then a third, etc.

As the stack gets taller, it becomes increasingly difficult to add toothpicks, of course. Object is to pile on as many as possible without having the entire tipsy stack collapse.

CB radios keep Alaska pipeline workers company near Artic Circle

ATIGUN PASS, Alaska (A) — You start up the 4,800-foot pass in the care of "The Heartbreaker," who turns you over to "The Pass Watcher." Once over the top you are in the hands of "The Happy Pappy."

All three of them drive road graders on the trans-Alaska pipeline haul road. And their rigs are equipped with CB radios, which are much more than a device for "hollering" at friends when you are this far north of the Arctic Circle.

They can make the difference between life and death.

The 359-mile road north of the Yukon River is kept open all year to get supplies to the pipeline construction camps. Roughly 80 per cent of the road lies north of the Arctic Circle, and winter temperatures 60 below zero are common.

"The one and only, world famous Thunderbug" drives this two-lane dirt road like there was no tomorrow as he roars "home to mama." As he stands in front of the shiny Rolls Royce-like grill of his 18-wheeler he looks tough enough to handle most obstacles.

Paul Konig, "the Thunderbug," boasts of going over Atigun Pass "barefoot" (without chains). As he is talking, this reporter's own four-wheel drive wagon is sliding all over the icy highway.

But the Anchorage trucker says, "I won't go up this road without my CB."

His buddy, Marty DeWitt of Fairbanks, or "Tiny Tim," tells a story about hauling a pipeline load on the stretch of state-maintained road south of the Yukon. He was headed up a hill when his rig tumbled over a cliff.

He broke a rib but his radio still worked, and he heard a friend who was traveling ahead of him ask: "Did you make it over the hill?"

"I told him: 'Yeah, but not the right way.'"

Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., the consortium of oil companies building the pipeline, maintains the road north of the Yukon.

The truckers, like their "good buddies" down south, monitor channel 19. But they also can use channel 11 to talk with the 12 pipeline camps along the route.

Each camp has a radio operator handling the commercial band frequency used by Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., as well as monitoring channel 11.

The drivers are never more than 25 miles from a camp, so most of the time they are within the trasmission range of CB radios. And if a trucker can't reach the nearest camp, there's usually another trucker closer who can relay a message.

Many Alyeska construction trucks have CB radios and can relay messages to camps via their more powerful company commercial-band radios.

The radio operator in Old Man camp said that hardly a day passes that he doesn't get a request for some kind of assistance, usually from a disabled vehicle.

As we talked with Old Man on channel 19, we passed two wrecked trucks. One was a tanker lying almost upside down but neat-as-you-please on the narrow strip between the road and the forest. There were no injuries in either accident.

Truckers also can call to the radio operators, like "The Winemaker" in Dietrich Camp, to reserve a room for the night. The drivers are allowed to spend the night in the camps and eat in the cafeterias free.

The truckers occasionally get road information from the camps, more often from each other. And there are road condition signs occasionally.

The radios also are crucial to break the loneliness. The truckers, many riding without partners, use them to pass the time. More than one we heard a static-filled and faint plea: "Breaker 19, is there anybody on this here haul road today?"

During the winter months there are nights "when you're lucky if one truck passes." And the only person Lukken — "The Heartbreaker" — sees is the foreman who brings him his lunch. His day is made when drivers tell him he's "doing a great job."

Farm Roundup

Hog producers are in financial bind

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government indicator shows that hog producers are in the severest financial bind in a year and a half, and experts say there is not much sign that things will improve soon.

By Oct. 15, according to the Agriculture Department, the hog-corn ratio of prices dropped to 14.1, the lowest since April of last year. The figure expresses in bushels the amount of corn equal in value to 100 pounds of live hog sold by farmers.

The ratio increased sharply after hog prices rose and feed costs moderated during the summer and fall of 1975, averaging a peak of 21.2 in October. Monthly ratio figures were even higher at times in 1972 and 1973, averaging 20.6 and 19.3 for those entire years, respectively.

In 1974, however, high feed costs helped depress the ratio to an annual average of 11.3 bushels of corn equal to 100 pounds of live hog.The rate for all of 1975 averaged 16.9 bushels.

The decline to 14.1 in October included a sharp decline in hog market prices. Those averaged $32.90 per 100 pounds on Oct. 15, down 17 per cent from $39.70 the previous month, according to USDA. Compared with a year earlier, the Oct. 15 hog price average was down more than 40 per cent from $58.30 per hundredweight.

Corn prices declined last month, too, but not so rapidly as the hog market. At an average farm price nationally of $2.33 a bushel, corn was down from $2.60 on Sept. 15 and $2.62 a year ago.

A major reason for the slide is that farmers have stepped up hog production significantly and apparently will continue the momentum well in to 1977.

In September, pork production by the nation's federally inspected meat plants totaled nearly 1.1 billion pounds, a 20 per cent gain from the same month in 1975 but still 4 per cent less than in September 1974.

Department experts say while lower prices and relatively high feed costs have taken some of the edge off farmers' plans for expanding hog output there will be "significantly larger" pork slaughter through mid-1977, perhaps 17 to 19 per cent larger than during the first half of this year.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Butter production dropped seasonally from August to September to about 63.4 million pounds but exceeded output a year ago by 10 per cent, according to the Agriculture Department.

Cheese production also declined, down 6 per cent from August to about 157 million pounds. However, September output was up 25 per cent from a year earlier.

Output of nonfat dry milk for human food totaled 61.2 million pounds in September, down 19 per cent from August but 22 per cent more than in September of last year.
